LONDON, JULY 29, 1854.

THE case of Heath v. Chapman, very recently, and if we may add without presumption, very rightly, decided, draws attention to a singularly anomalous state of the law. What was decided in that case, following West v. Shuttleworth, (2 My. & K. 684), was this—that a gift for saying masses for the souls of the dead, whether of the donor or of others, is still a gift to superstitious uses, and void, notwithstanding the 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 114. But the singularity is this. The statute of Will. 4 enacts, that Roman Catholics, "in respect of their schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes in Great Britain, and the property held therewith, and the persons employed in or about the same, shall, in respect thereof, be subject to the same laws as the Protestant Dissenters are subject to in England in respect to their schools and places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, and not further or otherwise."

Now this, strictly construed, as it has been, and no doubt ought to be, confines the additional immunity of Roman Catholics to their right in respect of their schools, &c. Any right which a Protestant Dissenter has in reference to founding, endowing, maintaining &c. a school or place of worship, &c., in reference to his personal conduct therein, or the employment of persons there, a Roman Catholic has in reference to his schools, &c. But there the immunity stops, and the act does not enable a Roman Catholic to devote money, either in or out of the schools or places of worship, to purposes not lawful before the act, and not rendered lawful by any other act. The result is this—that though a Roman Catholic may devote money to the sustentation of a Roman Catholic chapel, in which, of necessity, mass will be said, and in which, of necessity, therefore, not only the souls of the dead generally, but the souls of particular dead, will be prayed for by masses, yet he cannot directly give or bequeath money for the purpose of having masses said for the souls of the dead. What was the law before the statute, and what it is since, is well and shortly stated in a work recently published on the Charitable Trusts Act*. The author says—

"We may next briefly notice what constitutes, or in most cases it might be more correctly said, constituted, a superstitious use. It has been defined generally to be 'one which has for its object the propagation or the rites of a religion not tolerated by the law.' (Boyle, 242). The statutes relative to superstitious uses are, 23 Hen. 8, c. 10; 1 Edw. 6, c. 14; and 1 Geo. 1, c. 50; under which it has been decided, that bequests for establishing a Jesuita, or assembly for instructing the people in the Jewish religion, (Da Costa v. De Pas, Amb. 228); for the maintenance of Roman Catholic monasteries or other establishments at home or abroad, (De Garcian v. Lawson, 4 Ves. 433, note); for the purpose of maintaining Roman Catholic priests, (Gates v. Jones, cited 2 Vern. 266); to be applied to such purposes as a superior of a nunnery or her successor should judge most expedient, (Smart v. Prujean, 6 Ves. 560), are void. So, a bequest for masses, for prayers for a person's soul, (West v. Shuttleworth, 2 My. & K. 684; The Attorney-General v. The Fishmongers' Company, 2 Beav. 161; 5 My. & C. 11), for disseminating Roman Catholic doctrines, either for the education of the children of the poor, (Crofts v. Eoatts, Mod. 784; The Attorney-General v. Power, 1 Ball & B. 145; Cary v. Abbot, 7 Ves. 490), or for the purpose of maintaining a Roman Catholic priest, (The Attorney-General v. Todd, 1 Kee. 803; and see De Themmines v. De Bonnevall, 5 Russ. 288), has been held void. However, by stat. 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115, which is retrospective, (Bradshaw v. Tasker, 2 My. & K. 221), except as to suits previously commenced, (The Attorney-General v. Todd, 1 Kee. 803), persons professing the Roman Catholic religion are put upon the same footing, with respect to their schools, places for religious worship, education, and charitable purposes, as Protestant Dissenters, subject, however, to the provisions of the Mortmain Act, 9 Geo. 2, c. 36. This statute, coming after the 10 Geo. 4, c. 7, which relieved the personal disabilities of Roman Catholics, has very materially altered the law upon this subject. Accordingly, it has been decided, that a legacy to be applied to the use of a Roman Catholic college, (Walsh v. Gladstone, 1 Ph. 290), and of Roman Catholic priests, (The Attorney-General v. Gladstone, 13 Sim. 7; 1 Ph. 290), is valid. And it has been held, that a bequest enabling people of the Jewish religion to observe its rites is good. (Strass v. Goldmid, 8 Sim. 614)."

From the cases cited, and from Heath v. Chapman, it will be seen that the law does not permit a Catholic to supply prayers for the dead directly; but it permits him to devote his money to do those things and to maintain those establishments, which being done and established, prayers for the dead follow as of course. Now this, we venture to submit, is a very absurd state of the law. If the ground of the law against superstitious uses were the protection of the Catholic layman against the seductions of his priesthood—if the object were to prevent his being charmed out of his property when in a state of bodily and mental prostration, to the disinheritance of his family, one could understand a law which should throw that protection round him generally, and prevent him as much from endowing a chapel, or the priest of a chapel, as from devoting his property in any other way to the church. But that cannot be the ground of the law—we mean, that cannot be stated as at this day the general reason of the law, because the law does allow a Roman Catholic in numerous instances to be open to the persuasions of his clergy to benefit the church at the expense of his family. Then, if we assume the principle to be the hostility of the law of England to the encouragement of practices which the Church of England holds to be unscriptural, that principle should be either carried out consistently, or abandoned altogether. It is almost ridiculous to say that a law can be grounded on any such principle, which forbids the devoting of a man's substance to the direct maintenance of a custom deemed superstitious, and yet permits the devotion of it to the maintenance of means necessarily and intentionally applicable to keeping up that very superstitious custom.

CUSTODY OF TITLE-DEEDS — PURCHASER OF THE LARGEST LOT*.

WE wish to draw the attention of our readers to the case of Griffiths v. Hatchard, (reported in the present number, p. 649, Vice-Chancellor Sir W. P. Wood's Court). That was a special case, brought to take the opinion of the Court as to which of two purchasers of two lots at an auction—the one the largest in value, the other the largest in extent—was entitled to the possession of the title-deeds of the lands, the two lots being held under one title, and sold under the inaccurate though not unusual condition of sale, that "the purchaser of the largest lot" should be entitled to the custody of the common title-deeds, and covenant for their production to other purchasers. The above-named very learned and careful judge held, that this condition meant, "the purchaser of the lot the greatest in extent" was to have the deeds.

Now, it is submitted that the above decision is not so well considered as the opinions of this most excellent judge usually are. The word "largest" ought certainly, in the absence of any qualifying expression, to be construed, not according to the first vulgar sense of the word, viz. "biggest," but according to what, on a view of all the circumstances in which the parties were standing, and of all the circumstances which they wished to provide against, was most probably their intention, regard being also had, but not too rigorously, to the grammatical construction of this ill-drawn condition. Now, if the expression had been that the "largest purchaser" should have the deeds, there would or might be a choice between four claimants, each of whom might truly allege himself to be the "largest purchaser," viz. the purchaser of the biggest lot, the purchaser of the most valuable lot, the purchaser of the largest number of lots, and the purchaser of lots containing in the aggregate the greatest quantity—not to mention a fifth candidate, who, however, according to the literal downright principle enforced in this judgment, would carry off the prize, viz. the purchaser who was the biggest man—whether to be ascertained by a reference to height or weight, might introduce, perhaps, a further ambiguity. In the present case, however, the expression being, "the purchaser of the largest lot," the number of claimants is reduced to two only, viz. the purchaser of the lot largest in extent, and of that largest in value; and the first thing that strikes us, when we consider what the parties might have meant by this expression, is, that they were providing for a future unknown event. It was not then known which lot was the largest within their meaning, but the exact quantity in each lot was known and stated on the face of the particulars. The vendors must have known that lot 51, "containing ninety-five acres," was larger than lot 1, containing but "ten acres;" but they could not know beforehand that ninety-five acres, "presenting several building sites," might not fetch a higher price than one house and ornamental grounds. If the vendors had intended that the purchaser of the largest lot in size should have the deeds, they would have probably made the condition, that the purchaser of lot 51 should have them. That would probably, besides, have heightened competition.

The next consideration is as to the convenience of the decision. In the actual case before the Court, the application of the rule adopted was easy enough; but as a precedent (we believe it is the first decision on the point) it is extremely important, and when tested, by supposing the case of two or more plots of equal size, upon which are built houses of different styles, rates, or capacities, appears less commodious than the application of the measure of value.

It is to be observed that the present decision was on a special case, and that it was not argued between two parties, each claiming the title-deeds, but between one party claiming (and successfully) and the vendors, who occupied the position of mere trustees; and the views here submitted were not suggested to the learned Vice-Chancellor, nor did he allude to them, either as having no importance, or as being overborne by other considerations of more weight.

LONDON, AUGUST 5, 1854.

WE confess to an extreme jealousy of all that pertains to the administration of justice—a feeling which, we believe, is entertained by the great mass of the community. Indeed, how can it be otherwise with those who appreciate the magnitude of the interests committed to our legal tribunals? Life itself; the means of living; all that makes life desirable; a man's reputation—that curious, delicate structure, built upon the opinions of others, requiring many years to raise, and yet, like a house of cards, capable of being laid prostrate by a breath—these are involved in the decisions of Courts of justice. Is it not, then, natural that we should anxiously seek to preserve them from the taint of corruption and undue influence—in other words, from becoming the instruments of the greatest injustice—that we should desire to see their investigations conducted in a calm and fair spirit, and presided over by a dignity and authority that should invite as well as command respect? The danger of these elements being absent is not so imminent in our higher tribunals, both from their character, and the greater amount of public attention directed towards them; but it is strikingly apparent in some of the inferior courts scattered throughout the country, and attracting little notice until the occurrence of some extraordinary circumstance in connexion with them. What more flagrant instance can we cite in support of our observations (and indeed it is the moving cause of them) than the recent proceedings at a coroner's inquest, when the conduct and professional skill of two medical gentlemen were assailed amid applause, groans, hisses, excitement, prejudice, and abuse that would almost have disgraced a parliamentary election? We know nothing of the skill, or want of skill, on the part of the accused; we do not inquire whether the finding of the jury was justified by the evidence; but we are quite certain that it was impossible to obtain a fair hearing, or a calm, dispassionate inquiry, before such a tribunal. Æsculapius himself would not have been safe had he been charged before a coroner's inquest with having caused the death of a child belonging to one of that class who crowded the room, earwigged the jury, goaded on the counsel, terrified the witnesses, and kept alive popular excitement until popular vengeance was satiated. How is it that a court of criminal jurisdiction, where the finding of the jury is equivalent to the presentment of a grand jury, on which a man may at once be put upon his trial for the offence presented, is thus permitted to lower the administration of justice in the eyes of the public, and to inflict irreparable injury upon individuals? We think the causes may be traced to the low character of the tribunal itself, arising from the deterioration of the office of coroner, the absence of any standard of tangible qualification in the jurymen, and the fact of the court being held in all sorts of holes and corners, not even excluding public-houses. All this leads to a want of solemnity, decency, and order, where they ought to be peculiarly conspicuous, as the inquiry relates to the cause of death of a human being. We cannot help here observing, that we consider it especially the duty of counsel to treat legally-constituted authorities with respect, and we are always sorry to see them failing in the payment of this debt, which they owe to their Profession and to the public.

The office of coroner, we are told, is one of high antiquity—certainly as ancient as King Alfred, who punished with death a judge for passing a capital sentence upon the coroner's record alone, without allowing the delinquent to traverse. (Bac. on Gov. 66). The coroner was formerly the principal conservator of the peace within his county, and by the Statute of Westminster he was not to be under the degree of knighthood. This provision, though fallen into disuse, has never been repealed. By stat. 28 Edw. 3, c. 6, he is to be a fit and lawful person, and by stat. 14 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 8, to have an estate in fee in his county, both to maintain the dignity of his office, and to answer any fine that may be set upon him for his misbehaviour. He is elected by the freeholders of the county, but any amount of estate, however small its value, is sufficient for the purpose of conferring this vote.

The court is a public one. Sir Thomas Smith, in his History of the Commonwealth, (p. 96), says, "The impannelling of this inquest (the coroner's) and the view of the body is commonly in the street, in an open place, and in coronâ populi." The coroner, however, has the salutary power of excluding the public from his court, (Garnett v. Ferrand and Another, 6 B. & Cr. 611), though it should not be exercised without just cause.

It is remarkable that coroners' juries need not have any property qualification whatever, as inquests held by coroners by virtue of their office (without writ) are expressly excepted from the operation of the Jury Act, 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 52. Neither are they challengeable. (Brit. 6 a). They should, however, be probi et legales homines. (2 Hale's P. C. 155).

We are not, however, prepared to state that coroners' juries are inferior to the generality of common juries. If they have on an occasion found "incidental death, and a dividend on the house," yet a common jury last week recommended a man to mercy because he was not seen to take the articles which they had convicted him of stealing. The fact is, that the standard of jurors in general (except special jurors) is too low. The recklessness with which coroners' juries find "temporary insanity" is often owing as much to the coroner as to themselves. In this and in some other respects coroners of the last century were worse than those of the present. In one case we learn that the coroner told the jury, in order "to cover the goods," that a verdict of felo de se and of lunacy were in effect the same, and that the finding of felo de se was but a matter of course. (Reg. v. Wakefield, 1 Str. 69). On another occasion he took some of the jury off the inquest in order that the others might find the deceased non compos mentis. (12 Mod. 493).

"But is this law?"

"Ay, marry is't; Crowner's-quest law."

An Exposition of the Land-tax: its Assessment and Collection, and Rights and Advantages conferred by the Redemption Acts. By MARK A. BOURDIN, of the Inland Revenue Office, Somerset House.

[London: T. F. A. Day, 13, Carey-street, Lincoln's-inn. 1854.]

MR. COOPER, in one of his able papers printed in the First Report of the Statute-law Commissioners, after remarking on some of the cases in which the whole purpose of an act is sacrificed to the ignorance of Parliament or of a draftsman, and in particular on the confusion as to the persons or properties to be rendered liable to a tax, observes, (p. 73), "In other cases the error is reversed, and the property is left to be inferred, and the persons only fixed, and this often with gross inaccuracy. Thus, in the Militia Rate Act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 90, s. 42, the persons described as liable are the 'inhabitants of the parish, &c., according to the rate made for the relief of the poor;' the strict effect of which is to omit both the chief persons and chief property, subjects of the poor-rate, namely, the occupiers of the real property and the titheowners, and to charge only the persons liable to poor-rate in respect of stock-in-trade." We believe that a careful examination of the acts relating to the land-tax would furnish some very instructive examples of this kind.

The scheme of the acts erroneously called Land-tax Acts was evidently taken, though with ultimately a total change of the principle, from the assessments imposed by Parliament on all real and personal property during the civil wars, and continued to the restoration of Charles II. The principle of this tax, which was a bonâ fide property-tax, will be seen from one of these enactments for 1656, preserved in Scobell's Collection, part 2, p. 400. The sum required was to be raised by a pound rate on all real and personal property, or "on all lands, tenements, hereditaments, annuities, rents, profits, parks, warrens, goods, chattels, stock, merchandises, offices, or any other real or personal estate whatsoever, according to the value thereof—that is to say, so much upon every 20s. rent or yearly value of land and real estate, and so much upon money, stock, and other personal estate, by an equal rate, wherein every 20l. in money, stock, or other personal estate shall bear the like charge as shall be laid on every 20s. yearly rent or yearly value of land." The sum specified was the monthly sum required by the exigency of the time; and there was manifestly no intention that it should fix the amount of the contribution for all future time.

By stat. 1 Will. & M., sess. 1, c. 20, an aid was granted, without specifying any fixed sum, of 12d. in the pound on the yearly value of all real and personal estate. But it is observable that the order here is changed from that of the enactment before cited from Scobell, personal estate being now put in the front of the battle. By the 1st section an aid is granted of 12d. on the yearly value of all personal estate, ("except debts and the stock upon lands, and such goods as are used for household stuff"); and by the 2nd section, upon offices or employments, ("except offices in the army or navy"); and by the 3rd section, all lands, tenements, and hereditaments are charged for one year with the sum of 12d. for every 20s. of the true yearly value. "And all and every person and persons, bodies public and corporate, guilds, mysteries, fraternities, and brotherhoods, whether corporate or not corporate, having or holding in his, her, or their actual possession any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or other the lands or premises, shall yield and pay unto their Majesties the sum of 12d. for every 20s. by the year which the said manors, messuages, lands, tenements, hereditaments, and other the premises are now worth, to be leased, if the same were truly and bona fide leased or demised at a rack-rent, and according to the full true yearly value thereof, without any respect had to the present rents reserved for the same, if such rents have been reserved upon such leases or estates made, for which any fine or income hath been paid or secured, and without any respect had to any former rates or taxes thereupon imposed."

The commissioners appointed for putting the act in execution were directed to issue warrants "to two at the least of the most able and sufficient inhabitants of each parish, township, or place within their respective districts, thereby appointing and requiring them to be assessors of all and every the rates and duties by the act imposed." And the said assessors were "to ascertain and inform themselves, by all lawful ways and means they could, of the true and full rate and valuation of the true yearly rents and profits of all manors, messuages, lands, tenements, as also all quarries, mines of coal, tin, or lead, all iron works and salt works, all mines or works, parks, chases, warrens, woods, underwoods, and coppices, fishings, tithes, tolls, and other hereditaments, of what nature or kind soever, situate, lying and being, happening and arising within the limits of those places with which they should be charged; and being so thereof ascertained, they were to assess all and every the said manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and premises, before appointed to be charged, after the rate of 12*d.* for every 20*s.* of the true yearly value, as the same were let for, or were worth to be let for, at the time of the assessing thereof as aforesaid." (Sect. 5).

By the 1 Will. & M., sess. 2, c. 1, an aid of 2*s.* in the pound for one year was granted in the same words as those quoted above, only with the substitution of 2*s.* in the pound for 12*d.*, or 1*s.*, in the pound; and by the 1 Will. & M., sess. 2, c. 5, an additional aid of 12*d.* in the pound was granted, in the same terms as the last-mentioned aid of 2*s.* in the pound.

The above three aids, then, together would amount to a tax, for the year 1689-90, of 4*s.* in the pound on the true yearly rental of real property, and 24*s.* for every 100*l.* of personal property, (except debts, stock on land, and household goods).

The stat. 2 Will. & M., sess. 2, c. 1, (1690), and 3 Will. & M. c. 5, (1691), are a departure from the principle of the three immediately preceding statutes on this subject, inasmuch as in these two statutes a fixed sum is to be made up in the following manner:—The rate on personal property (except stock on land, which is exempted) is fixed, but the rate on land and other real property is not fixed, being made to depend (at least, by the words of the act, which, since it appears that they were never observed in practice, must, it should seem, be a blunder of the draftsman) on the proportion of the whole amount specified that remained to be made up after the personal property had paid its quota.

In 1692 Parliament again returned to the principle of the three statutes above specified, namely, the stat. 1 Will. & M., sess. 1, c. 20; sess. 2, c. 1; and sess. 2, c. 5. We consider it important to call particular attention to this fact, because the modern writers on the land-tax, as Mr. Miller, in his work on the laws relating to the land-tax, and Mr. Bourdin, in his "Exposition of the Land-tax," recently published, have referred to this act of 1692, the stat. 4 Will. & M. c. 1, as the basis of all the succeeding Land-tax Acts. It may be that the valuation made in pursuance of the act 4 Will. & M. c. 1, determined the ratio in which each district was to contribute under the modern acts. But the principle of the 4 Will. & M. c. 1, which was strictly followed and observed in the five succeeding acts, was in 1697 altogether and finally departed from in the 9 Will. 3, c. 10, by which, as in the two acts above mentioned, namely, the 2 Will. & M., sess.

2, c. 1, and the 3 Will. & M. c. 5, a fixed sum was granted, by the words used in the acts before referred to, which directed the said sum to be made up in a way which was never carried into practice, for what reason nobody, not even the chairman of the Board of Stamps and Taxes, nor the registrar of the Land-tax, (see their evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Agricultural Distress, in 1836), seems to have any accurate knowledge whatever.

Mr. Bourdin disposes of this fundamental change in the principle of these Land-tax Acts in a very summary but not very satisfactory manner. After mentioning that the sum realised by the assessment under the 4 Will. & M. c. 1, amounted to 1,922,712*l.*, he thus proceeds, (p. 5):—"Five acts followed, imposing a certain pound rate upon the same description of property; but in the subsequent year, owing to the sum raised by this mode of assessment shewing an annual decrease, it was deemed expedient that a specified sum should henceforth be levied, which sum was fixed at 1,484,015*l.* 1*s.* 11*d.*" It is true that there is an annual decrease in the produce of these acts, the act of 1693 producing 1,913,488*l.*, and the two acts of 1696 together producing 1,663,435*l.*; but was that a satisfactory reason for substituting for the future, without regard to the growing value of the property, both real and personal, to be taxed, a fixed sum, less by about 200,000*l.* than the sum raised in the preceding year? That evidently was not the reason. What was the reason, then? The whole matter is such a muddle, such a maze of confusion, however caused, that we can only arrive at last, after ever so much investigation of it, at some such dilemma as the following:—

Either the stat. 9 Will. 3, c. 10, of which all the subsequent statutes called Land-tax Acts are little else than copies, was skilfully framed for the purpose of protecting the land and other real property from paying a tax in proportion to the growing profits, and for transferring the principal part of the burthen on personal property—the deviation in practice from the provisions of the statute having been made from the consideration, that if the law had been put in force according to the letter, the pressure thereby occasioned on the owners of personal property would have led to a discovery of the true nature of the acts called Land-tax Acts; or the strange repugnance between the name as well as the apparently general impression of the purpose and intent of the acts called Land-tax Acts, and their true character, arose from the blunders of the draftsman and the ignorance of Parliament.

If the measure had been but a temporary expedient, the latter supposition might seem the more probable explanation of the difficulty. But when for a whole century a scheme for raising money was re-enacted, in almost identical words, every year—when every year for a hundred years a law was framed in such a shape that it appeared to be one thing, and was, in fact, another—with every disposition to do justice to the ignorance of Parliament and of draftsmen, we are inclined to doubt whether, in this case, the "whole purpose of an act was sacrificed to the ignorance of Parliament or of a draftsman."

However, the history of those acts called Land-tax Acts furnishes a most remarkable and instructive example of the effect upon the mind of the successive strata of words under which the meaning, where there is a meaning, in these as in many more acts of Parliament, lies hid. It was not altogether without cause that the authors of acts of Parliament considered their merits greater, and their claims higher on the gratitude of their country, "in proportion as they could succeed in including a greater number of limitations, qualifications, conditions, and provisos between the nominative case and its verb, or any other pair of dependent words." (Coode on Legislative Expression, 67). A certain tax was voted every year, from the 9 Will. 3 to the 30 Geo. 3—that is, from 1697 to 1798, a period of a hundred years—which was, according to the words of the act of Parliament, a tax, first, on all personal property, except stock on land and a few other trifling articles; secondly, on public official incomes, except military and naval; and, thirdly, in the event of the specified sum not being made up from these two sources, a tax on real property was to make up the residue or deficiency. But the rates upon personal property are to be levied on the growing profits, “according to the true yearly value thereof.” It is therefore quite clear that the sum specified would, if not in 1698, within not a very great number of years, be easily raised from the personal property, without having recourse to the land or real property at all. Why, then, call this tax a land-tax, when it was really a personal property-tax? But then it was never levied according to the act of Parliament. Why? Nobody seems to know. In the Select Committee on Agricultural Distress, in 1836, John Wood, Esq., chairman of the Board of Stamps and Taxes, and William Garnett, Esq., registrar of the Land-tax, in the course of their examination, being asked whether some instructions would not be given to the local commissioners as to the species of property on which they were to levy, replied, “The commissioners undoubtedly ought to regulate themselves by the act of William and Mary, and the subsequent acts; but we have never been able to discover why their practice deviated therefrom.” (Agric. Rep. 1836, Quest. 9098). And to the question, whether it was ever levied on any other species of property, the answer is, “To a certain degree it was levied on personal property, and also on offices, but the amount latterly was very inconsiderable. The personal estates have been relieved of the tax from 1833.”—Mr. Garnett. “The produce was under 6000*l.* a year latterly.” (Quest. 9099).

Sir Robert Peel, after reciting the 2nd section of the stat. 4 Will. & M. c. 1, asks, (Quest. 9112), “Is not the effect of that to make what is commonly called personal property of all descriptions, even debts due from foreigners, after deducting bad debts, and after deducting the debts of the party upon whom the claim of land-tax was due, all personal property, equally subject with what is called ‘land?’”—Mr. Wood. “I entertain no doubt that was the intention of the act.”

As we have shewn, that was not the intention of the act. The intention of the act, as far as its intention can be gathered from its words, was not to make personal property equally subject with real property; but the strict effect of the act would have been, that at the present time, if the act were executed, real property would have nothing to pay, as the sum fixed would be made up before the contributions charged on personal property were exhausted, and there would be no deficiency to be made up from real property.

Sir Robert Peel again asks, (Quest. 9113), “Is there any record of the mode in which the contribution on personal property was originally levied?—None, so far as we have made the discovery. I have looked into the journals of the House of Commons; I have not concluded the search I had intended to make, but I have not been able to meet with anything on the subject. In the committees of supply, directions are sometimes found as to the particular mode in which the levies were to be made and treated.

“9114. Do you believe that immediately after the passing of that act personal property was made chargeable in the same proportion as land?—I think it was made chargeable; but my conjecture is, that practical difficulties arose, and the commissioners were very soon satisfied with laying a rate on the more tangible property, the land.

“9115. Do you think that the land not only paid its own contributions, but also for the default of those who had personal property?—It is very possible that it might.”

And again:—

“9132. Sir Robert Peel.—On what principle was it, in respect of the enactment so recent as that of 1797, where the clauses seem so express that the personal property should be answerable for a certain amount, that that was not carried into effect?—The working of the act depends entirely upon the local commissioners, and we know nothing of the assessments which they make, or the description of property they choose to assess; and I suppose it never had been the custom to assess personal property generally; but that they found that the quota was easily raised within the county, and that they did not choose to disturb the assessment which had been before made. We find that in most districts there was a small charge made for the duty on personal estates, but it was very small indeed. I think latterly it was only between 5000*l.* and 6000*l.* a year; and an act (3 Will. 4, c. 12) passed in the year 1833, doing away with that duty on personal estates hereafter.”

If a certain public building had been built according to an act of Parliament, and then another act of Parliament had been passed annihilating the whole of the building except the chimneys, and at the same time commanding that the building so maimed should still be the original building, this would convey somewhat of an idea of the mode in which our Parliament has thought fit to exhibit its wisdom and omnipotence in the matter of the long series of acts called the Land-tax Acts. As the matter now stands, however, since the passing of the stat. 3 Will. 4, c. 12, that which was originally only a small and incidental, not necessary, part of the building, has really been made the whole building; and the tax is really a land-tax, such as it is. In regard to the question of what is called a more equal repartition of the land-tax, the proper way to effect this would be, to make all property pay the same rate that the property paying the highest rate now pays. Mr. Pitt expressly declared that the redemption of the land-tax would not stand in the way of this. “If the whole,” he said, “were to be redeemed, the only thing necessary to be provided is, that if ever a new land-tax is imposed, it shall not be imposed upon those who have redeemed in any different proportion from that on those who have not redeemed. It would be necessary to provide that the amount of what may have been redeemed shall be deducted from any new impost.”

LONDON, AUGUST 12, 1854.

It has been held by Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., in a recent case, all the judges of the Court concurring, that the evidence taken orally before an examiner of the Court of Chancery, must be taken down by him personally, in his own handwriting; that it will not do if it is taken down by another and revised by him, or even at his dictation; it must be by him scribe personally. Such, it is said, is the effect of the 32nd section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86; and we are not going to dispute that such is the construction of the statute; for certainly, when a statute says that an act, being the act of writing, is to be done by A. B., it is most difficult to conceive how the writing of any other person could be a writing by A. B. However, on this point the statute ought to be amended, the result being sometimes inconvenient to an extent quite absurd. We have heard, for instance, of an examiner, and that not one of the regular examiners, who may be supposed to be men of an age so far mature as to render great manual fatigue oppressive, but a young special examiner, full of fire and energy, being obliged to break up an examination, not because he was mentally tired, nor because the counsel and witnesses were mentally tired, but because literally the examiner's wrist ached with writing, so that he could write no longer.

Now, what is the advantage of the examiner being also, as a matter of course, the scribe? And indeed what is the advantage of prescribing so minutely as the act does, the mode et formâ in which the examiner is to proceed? It must be confessed, the particularity of the directions savour much of the same kind of spirit which recently dictated, from another quarter, the two-inch line of demarcation between the corner of the soldier's mouth, and the boundary line of his whisker.

The great point, to be serious, is, that the evidence should be given and taken down in such a way as to express as far as possible not only what the witness said, but in reference to what, and how he said it. As long as we have separate examiners this can only be done very imperfectly. It is true, that if a series of photographic portraits of the witnesses could be taken at different stages of the examination, and appended to the margin of the depositions, the indignant look at one time, the half-open mouth at another, or the dogged yet vacant expression at another, might indicate the farouche virtue, the guilty terror, or the obdurate and predetermined mendacity of the witness. But as we fear the age is not yet far enough advanced to let the illumination of photographic art penetrate into the recesses of the apartments in Rolls-yard, the judge and suitors of the Court of Chancery must at present be contented without the benefit of knowing what is called the demeanour of the witness. But there is no reason why they should not know, when he makes a statement, in answer to what precise question he makes it; nor is there any good reason why the witness should always be checked in the flow of his earnestness of statement, in order that he may not go too fast for the unfortunate examiner. There are cases in which it is of the greatest importance that the witness should be allowed to tell his own story with all the energy and rapidity that the sense of truthfulness, and the earnest desire to emit the truth, call forth. There are times when it is equally important that he should be forced on rapidly, that he may not have time to plot and plan and fence. There are, again, occasions when deliberate questions, answered precisely and specifically, have the greatest effect in eliciting the truth; and all these means ought to be at the disposal of the examiner.

We are not writing lightly on this subject; we have thought of it much, and we have, besides watching the various modes of oral examination that are practised under different forms of proceeding, been personally engaged frequently in conducting oral examinations. So that we are speaking, not as mere theoreticians, nor as mere practitioners, but as both, and we say, without hesitation, that the 32nd section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, is mischievously meddling and minute in details. If we had the task of reforming it on this point, we should recommend it to be as follows:—

“The depositions taken upon any such oral examination as aforesaid shall be taken down in writing, in such form and manner and by such person or persons as the parties shall agree upon; and if the parties disagree, in such form and manner and by such person as the examiner shall direct. And if the parties shall agree upon the employment and selection of a short-hand writer, or the examiner shall direct the employment of a short-hand writer, the payment of such short-hand writer shall be costs in the cause, unless the Court shall otherwise direct.”

We do not cling to our particular form of words, but we do trust that next session, if separate examination of witnesses is continued, the trammels imposed by the 32nd section of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, in the mode of taking it, will be removed, and at any rate that the Legislature will have pity on the wrists and thumbs of examiners, and not compel them to be permanent copying machines.

ON THE CORRECTION OF ERRORS IN THE RECORD OF SPECIFICATIONS OF PATENTS.

It was for some time much doubted to what extent the Master of the Rolls had jurisdiction to interfere in the matter of correcting errors in the records of specifications of patents. It is now clear that it is confined to correcting clerical errors, and that it will be very cautiously exercised. The cases down to a recent period are referred to in Mr. Hindmarch's work on Patents, p. 223.

Rubery's case, there mentioned, and shortly stated in

Webb. Pat. Cas. 649, notis, was a case in which the draft specification stated correctly the date of the letters-patent. The copy of the specification, ingrossed for the purpose of being acknowledged, and deposited in the inrolment office by the patentee, was incorrectly made, owing to an error of the ingrossing clerk, and the date of the letters-patent was incorrectly recited. On a petition being presented to the Master of the Rolls, stating these facts and circumstances explaining how the error arose, the following order, reciting the facts, and stating that the Solicitor-General had subscribed the petition, and thereby signified his consent to the prayer thereof on behalf of the Crown, was made: it was ordered that the proper officer do attend his Lordship with the record of the inrolment of the petitioner's aforesaid specification, and that the same be altered and amended by inserting the word “November” in lieu of the word “October” in the recital or introductory part thereof; and it was ordered that a copy of this order be indorsed on the roll on which the said specification is inrolled.

This was in 1841. In July of this year the present Master of the Rolls made, principally on the authority of Rubery's case, a similar order in Dismore's case. In that case the petition alleged an error on the record of the specification, in the name of the patentee. His name in reality, and as correctly stated in the letters-patent, was “George Dismore,” and he was so designated in the draft specification. It appeared, that by an error of the clerk who ingrossed it, he was designated in the ingrossed copy “Charles Dismore,” and so it was copied on the rolls of Chancery. On a petition presented to the Master of the Rolls to alter this error, an order similar to that in Rubery's case was made. It must be recollected, however, that in cases of this kind, the fiat of the Attorney-General or Solicitor-General to the petition must be obtained, and the patent itself must be produced to the Court, to see that the party claiming relief against the error is really the party designated in the letters-patent, and that the record, as existing, is not as it was intended to be by the parties. The distinction between this class of cases and that contemplated by the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 83, will be readily appreciated by the reader. The statute refers entirely to allegations of substance—to the remedying of errors of judgment or knowledge of the patentee—as distinguished from the correction of mere clerical errors in copying the actually expressed intention of the patentee. The class of cases which we have noticed relates entirely to the correction of mere clerical errors, and depends on the jurisdiction of the Master of the Rolls over the rolls—not to alter them, but to see that they are correct; for if a specification were drawn, ingrossed, and copied on the rolls according to the intention of the patentee—if, in other words, the roll or record was a correct copy of the thing intended to be lodged for inrolment by the patentee—the Master of the Rolls would then have no jurisdiction to alter the roll. The patentee would have to call in aid the powers of Lord Brougham's Act, under which alone the substantial error of the patentee himself can be cured. The common-law jurisdiction of the Master of the Rolls is strictly confined to the case where the roll is not what it was intended to be by the parties, and where the fact of its not being so arises from the error or inadvertence of some agent or officer, irrespectively of, or rather contrary to, the intention of the patentee.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—Your observations on the case of Vaughan v. Vanderstegen, in which you state the decision of Sir R. T. Kindersley, V. C., on the effect of fraud in a married woman on the property over which she has a mere power of appointment by will, do not indicate what your view is of the soundness of that decision. I venture to trouble you on the subject with a few observations, for the purpose of shewing that the decision of the Vice-Chancellor is quite untenable—contrary to all the principles laid down by himself on the subject of separate estate, and the power of a feme covert to contract debts, and not supported by the authority to which he refers as the leading case. To take the last point first. The case of Savage v. Foster, (9 Mod. 35), on which the Vice-Chancellor relies, was a case in which the married woman who committed the fraud had, at the time she committed it, an estate of which she was owner, and which she could then have conveyed by apt assurances. The only difficulty which would then have existed would have been, how the Court could compel her, being covert, to join in the necessary assurances. She afterwards became discoverte, and then the Court compelled her to convey—not on the principle that her fraud made that her property which would in no sense have been so without—not on the principle that by fraud she could, being covert, contract a debt, except on her separate estate—but on the broad principle of equity, that if any one commits a fraud, the Court will make him cure it, whenever it can lay hold of him for the purpose. But how does that case apply to Vaughan v. Vanderstegen? In the latter case it was determined, and I apprehend soundly determined, by the Vice-Chancellor himself, that a married woman is incapable of debt by contract, except as regards her separate estate; that property over which she has a mere power of appointment by will is in no sense her separate estate, and therefore that her attempted debts do not fasten upon it, as her assets, in the hands of her appointees. If that is a correct view of the law, it goes upon this—that the appointed assets never were and never could be hers—that is, hers in the sense of property. If so, how can her fraud make them her property? It may make her liable if and when the Court can reach her: it may make any property of hers, in respect of which she could have bound herself, her assets, or as her assets. But how can it convert a mere power into property, and enable the Court, not to compel her to do something she was capable of doing, as in Savage v. Foster, but to seize as her assets that in respect of which she never could have contracted a debt? A fraud may subject the person to the grasp of the Court, and may enable the Court to force upon him some act over his own property, when, as against the property itself, there might have been no charge or lien. But fraud cannot alter the nature of the jus proprietatis; my fraud cannot make that my property, which never was and never could be property in me. I submit very respectfully, for the reasons above given, that the decision in Vaughan v. Vanderstegen cannot be supported as to the point made upon fraud, if it is, as I apprehend it is, right on the general doctrine.

LONDON, AUGUST 19, 1854.

THE question of literary property in foreigners has been completely, and we presume finally, decided by the House of Lords in the case of Jefferys v. Boosey.*

The facts were briefly these:—Bellini (who was an alien) composed the opera "La Sonnambula" at Milan, and by the law of that place was entitled to copyright in his composition, and to assign it. At the time of composing, and up to the time of the first publication, he resided at Milan. He assigned the copyright of the opera to Ricordi, who came to England, and there assigned it to Boosey for publication in the United Kingdom. Boosey was a British subject resident in England, and he first published the opera in London in 1831, which was the first publication either within or without the British dominions. He brought his action against Jefferys for infringing his copyright; and at the trial, before Rolfe, B., in 1850, the judge directed the jury that the evidence was not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to a verdict. A bill of exceptions was tendered to this ruling, and thereupon a writ of error was brought to the Court of Exchequer Chamber. That Court (Lord Campbell, C. J., and Patteson, Maule, Wightman, Cresswell, Erle, and Williams, J.J.) unanimously held that the ruling of Rolfe, B., was wrong, and awarded a venire de novo. A writ of error was brought upon this judgment to the House of Lords, and at the conclusion of the arguments this question was put to the judges, who had been summoned to attend—whether a foreign author resident abroad could lawfully assign to a British subject copyright in an unpublished work? Coleridge, Maule, Wightman, Erle, Williams, and Crompton, J.J., delivered their answer in the affirmative—Jervis, C.J., Pollock, C. B., Parke, B., and Alderson, B., in the negative. The House of Lords (the Lord Chancellor, Lord Brougham, and Lord St. Leonards) agreed with the minority of the judges, and reversed the judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber. Before we examine the grounds on which the noble Lords rested their decision, we propose to shew the state of the law on this subject according to the previous authorities; although, as was observed by Alderson, B., it is wonderful how little of authority there was to guide the Court. With regard to one branch of the question, whether copyright existed at common law, there had been a conflict of opinion in the celebrated case of Miller v. Taylor, (4 Burr. 2303); Lord Mansfield, C. J., and Willes and Aston, J.J., being in favour of the common-law right—Yates, J., being opposed to it. As to the other branch, whether a copyright existed in foreigners resident abroad, Vice-Chancellor Shadwell in Delondre v. Shaw (2 Sim. 240) stated extra-judicially that the Court of Chancery does not interfere to protect the copyright of a foreigner; and shortly afterwards he held, ("what indeed could hardly have been doubted," per the Lord Chancellor in * August 1, 1854.

Jefferys v. Boosey), that engravings designed and etched abroad, though first published here, were not entitled to the protection of our statutes. (Page v. Townsend, 5 Sim. 404). Then came D'Almaine v. Boosey, (1 Y. & C. 288), in which Lord Abinger granted an injunction in favour of a foreign composer. Afterwards Vice-Chancellor Shadwell expressed his opinion to be in favour of the foreigner's copyright, but would not decide the point without a previous trial at law. (Bentley v. Foster, 10 Sim. 330; and see Chappell v. Purday, 4 Y. & C. 485). In Clementi v. Walker, (2 B. & Cr. 861), Bayley, J., said that the statute of Anne was made with a view to British interests and the advancement of British learning, and that without "very clear words shewing an intention to extend the privilege to foreign works, it must be confined to books printed within this kingdom." Since that time the question has been brought before all the common-law Courts, and their judgments have been conflicting. The Court of Queen's Bench and the Court of Common Pleas decided in favour of the foreigner's right. (Boosey v. Davidson, 13 Q. B. 287; Cocks v. Purday, 5 C. B. 882). The Court of Exchequer held that the statutes did not extend to foreigners. (Chappell v. Purday, 14 M. & W. 303; Boosey v. Purday, 4 Exch. 145).

This terque quaterque vexata quæstio has at length been set at rest, and the important judgment of the law Lords, achieving so desirable a result, may be thus stated in condensed terms:—

Copyright is the exclusive right of multiplying copies of a work already published, and is the creature of statute law, or, at all events, is entirely regulated by it. The object of the first and principal statute, (8 Ann. c. 19), as expressed by its preamble, was "the encouragement of learned men to compose and write useful books;" and with a view to its attainment it is enacted, that "the author" of any book shall have the sole liberty of printing it for the term of fourteen years. The statute refers to British authors only. Prima facie the Legislature must be taken to have made laws for its own subjects exclusively, more especially where an exclusive privilege is given to a particular class at the expense of the rest of the nation. The subjects, however, thus legislated for include all persons who are within the Queen's dominions, and who thus owe to her a temporary allegiance, as well as British subjects who are abroad. A foreigner, therefore, coming to this country, and publishing his works here, will be entitled to protection, though he comes only for the purpose of publishing such work*. Copyright commences at the instant of publication, and if at that time the foreigner is not in this country he is not protected. As he is unable to confer a right which he does not possess, he cannot under such circumstances assign his copyright so as to give a valid title in this country. Copyright is not to be confounded with the right to publish or to abstain from publishing a work not yet published at all; the common law gives a man who has composed a work a right to that composition, just as he has a right to any other part of his personal property; but the question of the right of excluding all the world from copying that composition after it has been published to the world is a very different one. In answer to the argument, (used by way of reductio ad absurdum) that a foreigner, having composed a work at Calais, gains a British copyright if he crosses to Dover and there first publishes it, whereas he would have no copyright if he should send it to an agent to publish for him, the Lord Chancellor said—"It is only one among the thousand instances that happen not only in law, but in all the daily occurrences of life, that whenever it is necessary to draw a line, cases bordering closely on either side of it are so near to each other that it is difficult to imagine them as belonging to separate classes; and yet our reason tells us that they are as completely distinct as if they were immeasurably removed from each other. The second which precedes midday is as completely distinct from that which follows it as the events which happened a hundred years ago are from those which are to occur in the next century."

Lord Brougham and Lord St. Leonards expressed very strong opinions that copyright does not exist at common law; and Lord St. Leonards laid down two propositions which were not alluded to by the other Lords, namely, that there is no copyright in works printed abroad and published here, but that they must be both printed and published in this country; and that copyright is an indivisible right; it may be transferred, but not divided; hence a partial assignment, e. g. for the United Kingdom, is void, but this is not to be confounded with a mere license. The same noble and learned Lord also expressed an opinion, that an assignment of copyright, wherever made, will not be valid in England unless it is in writing, and attested by two witnesses. Lord Brougham inclined to the opinion that the attestation of two witnesses is dispensed with by stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 156.

The consequences of the decision which we have been considering are very important. On the one hand, it will work serious loss to those who have purchased foreign copyrights on the faith of what was generally supposed to be the law upon the subject; on the other, it will probably point out to the Americans the expediency of respecting British copyright for the purpose of maintaining their own. The American Legislature have expressly enacted that copyright there shall be confined to natives or persons resident within the United States. They may now seek, under the International Copyright Act, 7 Vict. c. 12, to avail themselves of a protection which they have long denied to others, and which they can receive only by giving it in their turn to the authors of this country.

* This was so stated by the Lord Chancellor, and not dissented from by the other Lords; but Lord St. Leonards said, "I will not take upon myself to state any opinion to your Lordships as to what would be a sufficient residence; but I will say this, that whatever would constitute a man a resident here, so as to make him subject, in point of allegiance, to the country whilst he was here, and would give to him the common rights to which every foreigner coming to this country is entitled, would be a residence which would give him a copyright here if he published here."

The Right Hon. Sir John Jervis, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed Charles Bayly, of Torquay, Devonshire, Gent., to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Devon.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE AT HARPENDEN.

"Harpenden, June 16, 1854."

"GENTLEMEN,—I have great pleasure in adding my testimony to the value of your Fire-proof Safe. Last Monday night my house, warehouse, and premises were unfortunately burned down; the fire raged very fearfully for about two hours, and owing to the great scarcity of water the whole of my premises and stock were consumed. The Safe I purchased of you had a most severe test, in consequence of a barrel of brimstone standing close to it, and melting with the heat of the fire, the burning lava running all over and under the Safe, which greatly added to the intensity of the heat; it remained in that position about four hours, and when with great difficulty it was got out of the fire, and opened, I found my books and papers all uninjured. You are at liberty to make what use you please of this information.

"I am, Gentlemen, yours respectfully,

"Messrs. Thos. Milner & Son,

47 A, Moorgate-street, London."

"Agricultural Laboratory, Harpenden, July 6, 1854."

"GENTLEMEN,—I was present at the late fire which destroyed the premises of Mr. Walker, Harpenden, and was much surprised at the great amount of heat your Safe resisted, and still more surprised (when it was made known to me that a barrel of sulphur stood near it) that it was not entirely destroyed. Being anxious to see if it had been attracted by the sulphur, I scraped some of the blistered iron from the inside and outside of the Safe, and from analysis find much sulphuret, so that it must have been greatly acted upon by the sulphur, yet the books and papers were perfectly uninjured. I must, in justice, say that your Safes are invaluable, and very necessary for every one who has books and accounts of any value.

"I am, Gentlemen, yours very faithfully,

"To Messrs. Thos. Milner & Son,

LONDON, AUGUST 26, 1854.

WE return to the subject of Jefferys v. Boosey, not for the purpose of questioning its law, which would of course be absurd, but for the purpose of shewing what very absurd consequences will follow from it, and of shewing how completely it will operate as a tax and a vexation on foreign writers, and nothing more. It may be quite true that the Legislature must prima facie be taken to have made laws for its own subjects exclusively, but it does not follow that that is in all cases a politic act of the Legislature. So it may be quite true that, in point of law, a foreigner cannot, out of this country, so transfer copyright as to entitle the assignee to secure it in this country, but that he may, if he chooses to come to this country and here to publish, secure copyright for himself or his assignee. But mark the absurdity of the consequences—he must publish here; but what extent of residence, with reference to publication, will suffice, is most guardedly left in the dark by the House of Lords in Jefferys v. Boosey; so that whether to be here to commit the manuscript to the care of the publisher is enough, or whether the author must abide the termination of printing—the returning for press, as it is technically termed—or whether he must be here when the publication, that is, the issuing of a copy for sale, first takes place, has yet to be decided. Now, assume that the most liberal interpretation should be adopted, and that the law should be, that it is enough that the author should be personally here to commit his manuscript into the hands of the publisher, then a journey is imposed on the unhappy author for no earthly purpose except to satisfy a theory of his being for an instant subject to the laws of this realm. The driest of dry trustees to uses, not inaptly termed, in words of art, a conduit-pipe, does not perform a more ignoble part, a more instantaneous and evanescent function, than will the foreign author, who will be brought here to do what his agent's porter could do quite as well, with quite as much benefit to the country, and with quite as much of actual responsibility to its laws. The author must, coute qu'il coute, come from whatever distance may be his own land, step on our shores, and in his own proper person deliver seisin of his work to the public of this country; having done which he may vanish; English copyright has been created, and is thenceforth assignable, and the author may go. And for this triviality he has been brought, perhaps, hundreds of miles!

VOL. XVIII.

But whether that construction or the less liberal construction be that put on the law—whether he must acquire here a substantial residence, or whether he may be the mere trustee to uses of his manuscript—in either case it is clear that the printing must take place here; so that the author must either reside here to pass his work through the press, or he must have the sheets sent to him for correction in his own country, or he must get a friend to pass the book through the press.

The hardship of this on foreign authors will be very great; and the absurdity will be very great of compelling a man to stay here to do what could be done just as well in any other place, if that place is in other respects more convenient to him.

As to the policy of the law—a word continually in the mouths of us lawyers—the expression is, in reference to this law, just verbiage, and nothing more. There is no policy at all in such a law; there is, indeed, very little question about policy, in its high sense, in the subject. It is a question simply of convenience and commercial justice. It is convenient to us, and convenient to the author, that M. Guizot, or M. Lamartine, or Felix Mendelsohn, or Signor Bellini should, according to their gifts, put forth their works in this country, if it so suits them. It is just, and no more than just, that they should, like every other man of labour, be able to secure the price of their labour, if they desire or require so to do. It is just and convenient that they should write where they like, and print where they like, and how they like. The only thing in which the public has any interest whatever in meddling, is to have some certain test by which they may know what is M. Guizot's or any other author's literary property, in order that they may not interfere with his right of property; and that test would be as effectually secured if the author could impart copyright, in the mode attempted in Bellini's case, as by his printing and publishing the work here.

Of the injury to those who have purchased copyrights, or rather supposed copyrights, on the faith of the decision of the Court of Exchequer, we shall say nothing, except that it will be but little comfort to them to reflect, that the law by which they suffer the loss of thousands is a very absurd one.

Whereas by the Industrial and Provident Society's Act, 1852, it is enacted, "that all the provisions of the laws relating to friendly societies shall apply to every society to be constituted under the said act, except in so far as any such provision might be expressly varied by the said act, or by any rule expressly authorised to be made thereby;" and whereas it is expedient to vary the provisions of such laws in relation to societies registered under the act aforesaid, so far as concerns the manner in which legal proceedings shall be carried on in any matter concerning any such society: be it therefore enacted As follows—

Sect. 1. After the passing of this act no suit or proceeding shall be commenced or prosecuted by or against the trustees of any society registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852, except in the case hereinafter provided;

but all suits and proceedings, whether at law, in equity, or in bankruptcy or sequestration, or otherwise howsoever, as well in Great Britain and Ireland as in the colonies and dependencies thereof, by or on behalf of any such society, against any person or persons, whether bodies politic or others, and whether members or not of such society, shall be commenced and prosecuted in the name of one of the two officers for the time being appointed to sue and be sued on behalf of such society, and registered in pursuance of the directions for such appointment and registration respectively hereinafter contained; and all suits and proceedings, whether at law or in equity, or by or on behalf of any person or persons, whether bodies politic or others, and whether or not members of such society, against such society, shall be commenced and prosecuted against such officers, or if there shall be no such officer for the time being, then against the trustees of the said society.

2. Every such society shall, within one calendar month after the passing of this act, appoint two officers to sue or be sued on behalf thereof in manner aforesaid, and make or cause to be made a return to the Registrar of Friendly Societies of the names and descriptions of the officers so appointed; and every such society may from time to time remove any officer so appointed; and in case of the death, resignation, or removal of any such officer, the said society shall, within one calendar month thereafter, appoint in his stead another officer to sue and be sued on behalf of such society, and make or cause to be made a return to the said registrar as aforesaid, containing as well the name and description of the person who has ceased to be such officer in manner aforesaid as the name and description of the officer who has been appointed in his stead to sue and be sued on behalf of such society; and every such return shall be signed by three members of such society, and countersigned by the officers or officer so appointed, and shall be kept with the rules of the society; and in case any society should neglect or refuse to appoint any officers or officer to sue and be sued as aforesaid, the trustees of such society, or the majority of them, may appoint any members or member of such society to be such officers or officer, and shall forthwith make such return as last aforesaid under the hand of such trustees and such officers or officer; and every appointment so made shall be as effectual for all the purposes of this act as if it had been made by such society.

3. Any person shall be at liberty to require a copy of such return to be certified by the registrar; and there shall be paid for such certificate a fee of 1s. 6d., and no more; and the day of the registration of every return to be made in pursuance of this act shall be written on such return by the said registrar; and a copy, so certified as aforesaid, of such return, including the date to be marked thereon, shall be received in evidence in all proceedings, whether civil or criminal, and shall also be received as evidence of the day of the registering thereof.

4. No action, suit, or proceeding, whether civil or criminal, commenced either by or against any such society, (whether in the name of one of the officers appointed to sue and be sued as aforesaid, or of some member of such society, in the case and in manner aforesaid), shall be abated or prejudiced by the death or by any act of such officer or person, or by the resignation or removal of such officer either before or after the commencement of such action, suit, or proceeding, or by any change in the members of such society, but the same shall be continued in the name of such officer or member (as the case may be) notwithstanding such death or act, or such resignation or removal, and notwithstanding such change in the members of such society.

5. All judgments, decrees, interlocutors, and orders obtained in any such actions, suits, or other proceedings as aforesaid, against such officer or member, in manner aforesaid, whether such member or officer respectively be party to such actions, suits, or proceedings as plaintiff, pursuer, petitioner, or defendant or defender, shall have the same effect against the property and effects of such society as if such judgments, decrees, interlocutors, or orders had been obtained in suits or proceedings against the trustees of such society, and execution or diligence shall be issued thereon accordingly.

6. The bankruptcy, insolvency, or stopping payment of any officer or member of such society in his individual capacity shall not be construed to be the bankruptcy, insolvency, or stopping payment of such society; and the property and effects of such society shall, notwithstanding such bankruptcy, insolvency, or stopping payment, be liable to execution or diligence in the same manner as if such bankruptcy, insolvency, or stopping payment had not taken place.

7. In all cases wherein it may be necessary for any person to serve any summons, demand, or notice, or any writ or other proceeding, at law or in equity, or otherwise, upon any such society, service thereof respectively on the secretary of the said society, or by leaving the same at the head office for the time being of the said society, or in case such secretary shall not be found or known, then service thereof on any agent or officer employed by the said society, or by leaving the same at the usual place of abode of such agent or officer, shall be deemed good and sufficient notice of the same respectively on such society.

8. In case of the dissolution of any such society, such society shall nevertheless be considered as subsisting, and be in all respects subject to the provisions of this act, so long and so far as any matters relating to the same remain unsettled, to the intent that such society may do all things necessary to the winding up of the concerns thereof, and that it may be sued and sue under the provisions of this act in respect of all matters relating to such society.

9. When any action, suit, or prosecution shall, at the passing of this act, be pending by or on behalf of or against the trustee or trustees of any society, the same shall and may be proceeded in by or against such registered officer as aforesaid, in the proper name or names of the person or persons commencing or defending the same; and such officer shall pay or receive like costs as if the action or suit had commenced in his or their name or names for the benefit of or to be reimbursed from the funds of such society.

10. The provisions of the laws relating to friendly societies, whereby the trustees of any society are declared incapable of prosecuting any action or proceeding in any court of law or equity on behalf of such society until they shall have duly furnished to the registrar a general statement of the funds and effects of such society, shall not apply to the prosecution of any action or other proceeding by the registered officer of any society registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852.

8. Short Title.

Whereas it is expedient to make better provision for regulating the traffic on railways and canals: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sec. 1. In the construction of this act, "the Board of Trade" shall mean the Lords of the Committee of her Majesty's Privy Council for Trade and Foreign Plantations:

The word "traffic" shall include, not only passengers and their luggage, and goods, animals, and other things conveyed by any railway company or canal company, or railway and canal company, but also carriages, waggons, trucks, boats, and vehicles of every description adapted for running or passing on the railway or canal of any such company:

The word "railway" shall include every station of or belonging to such railway used for the purposes of public traffic: and,

The word "canal" shall include any navigation wherein tolls are levied by authority of Parliament, and also the wharfs and landing-places of and belonging to such canal or navigation, and used for the purposes of public traffic:

The expression "railway company," "canal company," or "railway and canal company," shall include any person being the owner or lessee of, or any contractor working, any railway or canal or navigation constructed or carried on under the powers of any act of Parliament:

A station, terminus, or wharf shall be deemed to be near another station, terminus, or wharf when the distance between such stations, termini, or wharfs shall not exceed one mile, such stations not being situate within five miles from St. Paul's Church, in London.

2. Every railway company, canal company, and railway and canal company shall, according to their respective powers, afford all reasonable facilities for the receiving and forwarding and delivering of traffic upon and from the several railways and canals belonging to or worked by such companies respectively, and for the return of carriages, trucks, boats, and other vehicles, and no such company shall make or give any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to or in favour of any particular person or company, or any particular description of traffic, in any respect whatsoever, nor shall any such company subject any particular person or company, or any particular description of traffic, to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever; and every railway company, and canal company, and railway and canal company, having or working railways or canals which form part of a continuous line of railway or canal or railway and canal communication, or which have the terminus, station, or wharf of the one near the terminus, station, or wharf of the other, shall afford all due and reasonable facilities for receiving and forwarding all the traffic arriving by one of such railways or canals by the other, without any unreasonable delay, and without any such preference or advantage, or prejudice or disadvantage, as aforesaid, and so that no obstruction may be offered to the public desirous of using such railways or canals or railways and canals as a continuous line of communication, and so that all reasonable accommodation may, by means of the railways and canals of the several companies, be at all times afforded to the public in that behalf.

3. It shall be lawful for any company or person complaining against any such companies or company of anything done, or of any omission made, in violation or contravention of this act, to apply in a summary way, by motion or summons, in England to her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, or in Ireland to any of her Majesty's superior Courts in Dublin, or in Scotland to the Court of Session in Scotland, as the case may be, or to any judge of any such court; and upon the certificate to her Majesty's Attorney-General in England or Ireland, or her Majesty's Lord Advocate in Scotland, of the Board of Trade, alleging any such violation or contravention of this act by any such companies or company, it shall also be lawful for the said Attorney-General or Lord Advocate to apply in like manner to any such court or judge, and in either of such cases it shall be lawful for such court or judge to hear and determine the matter of such complaint; and for that purpose, if such court or judge shall think fit, to direct and prosecute, in such mode and by such engineers, barristers, or other persons as they shall think proper, all such inquiries as may be deemed necessary to enable such court or judge to form a just judgment on the matter of such complaint; and if it be made to appear to such court or judge on such hearing, or on the report of any such person, that anything has been done, or omission made, in violation or contravention of this act, by such company or companies, it shall be lawful for such court or judge to issue a writ of injunction or interdict, restraining such company or companies from further continuing such violation or contravention of this act, and enjoining obedience to the same; and in case of disobedience of any such writ of injunction or interdict it shall be lawful for such court or judge to order that a writ or writs of attachment, or any other process of such court incident or applicable to writs of injunction or interdict, shall issue against any one or more of the directors of any company, or against any owner, lessee, contractor, or other person, failing to obey such writ of injunction or interdict; and such court or judge may also, if they or he shall think fit, make an order directing the payment by any one or more of such companies of such sum of money as such court or judge shall determine, not exceeding for each company the sum of 200*l.* for every day, after a day to be named in the order, that such company or companies shall fail to obey such injunction or interdict; and such monies shall be payable as the court or judge may direct, either to the party complaining, or into court, to abide the ultimate decision of the court, or to her Majesty, and payment thereof may, without prejudice to any other mode of recovering the same, be enforced by attachment or order in the nature of a writ of execution, in like manner as if the same had been recovered by decree or judgment in any superior court at Westminster or Dublin, in England or Ireland, and in Scotland by such diligence as is competent on an extracted decree of the Court of Session; and in any such proceeding as aforesaid such court or judge may order and determine that all or any costs thereof or thereon incurred shall and may be paid by or to the one party or the other, as such court or judge shall think fit; and it shall be lawful for any such engineer, barrister, or other person, if directed so to do by such court or judge, to receive evidence on oath relating to the matter of any such inquiry, and to administer such oath.

4. It shall be lawful for the said Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, or any three of the judges thereof, of whom the Chief Justice shall be one, and it shall be lawful for the said Courts in Dublin, or any nine of the judges thereof, of whom the Lord Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, the Lords Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, shall be five, from time to time to make all such general rules and orders as to the forms of proceedings and process, and all other matters and things touching the practice and otherwise in carrying this act into execution before such courts and judges, as they may think fit, in England or Ireland, and in Scotland it shall be lawful for the Court of Session to make such acts of sederunt for the like purpose as they shall think fit.

5. Upon the application of any party aggrieved by the order made upon any such motion or summons as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the court or judge by whom such order was made to direct, if they think fit so to do, such motion or application on summons to be reheard before such court or judge, and upon such rehearing to rescind or vary such order.

6. No proceeding shall be taken for any violation or contravention of the above enactments, except in the manner herein provided; but nothing herein contained shall take away or diminish any rights, remedies, or privileges of any person or company against any railway or canal or railway and canal company under the existing law.

7. Every such company as aforesaid shall be liable for the loss of or for any injury done to any horses, cattle, or other animals, or to any articles, goods, or things, in the receiving, forwarding, or delivering thereof, occasioned by the neglect or default of such company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice, condition, or declaration made and given by such company contrary thereto, or in anywise limiting such liability, every such notice, condition, or declaration being hereby declared to be null and void: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the said companies from making such conditions with respect to the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of any of the said animals, articles, goods, or things as shall be adjudged by the court or judge before whom any question relating thereto shall be tried to be just and reasonable: provided always, that no greater damages shall be recovered for the loss of or for any injury done to any of such animals beyond the sums hereinafter mentioned: (that is to say), for any horse, 50*l.*; for any neat cattle, per head, 15*l.*; for any sheep or pigs, per head, 2*l.*; unless the person sending or delivering the same to such company shall, at the time of such delivery, have declared them to be respectively of higher value than as above mentioned, in which case it shall be lawful for such company to demand and receive, by way of compensation for the increased risk and care thereby occasioned, a reasonable per-centage upon the excess of the value so declared above the respective sums so limited as aforesaid, and which shall be paid in addition to the ordinary rate of charge; and such per-centage or increased rate of charge shall be notified in the manner prescribed in the stat. 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68, and shall be binding upon such company in the manner therein mentioned: provided also, that the proof of the value of such animals, articles, goods, and things, and the amount of the injury done thereto, shall in all cases lie upon the person claiming compensation for such loss or injury: provided also, that no special contract between such company and any other parties respecting the receiving, forwarding, or delivering of any animals, articles, goods, or things as aforesaid, shall be binding upon or affect any party unless the same be signed by him or by the person delivering such animals, articles, goods, or things respectively for carriage: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall alter or affect the rights, privileges, or liabilities of any such company under the said act of the 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68, with respect to articles of the descriptions mentioned in the said act.

8. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854."

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 2, 1854.

THE Common-law Amendment Act, recently passed, makes a further and wider step towards the amalgamation of law and equity than anything yet attempted. There are some things in which the act makes courts of common law more equitable than equity itself, and gives them powers of racking the conscience, at the bare mention of which a few years ago an equity judge would have stood aghast, and the existence of which a pure common-law judge would have deemed impossible, and if possible, fatal to the constitution.

By the 51st section, for instance, a defendant may, in support of his plea, deliver written interrogatories to the plaintiff, requiring discovery, which the plaintiff must answer, as an old Chancery defendant was bound to answer the bill.

Again: by the 48th section, any person who, in a proceeding which may be made by affidavits, refuses to make an affidavit, may be compelled to appear, and be examined as a witness, either before the Court or before a Master of the court.

The two subjects, however, on which the great step towards amalgamation has been made, are the action of mandamus, and the pleading of equitable defences. In any action, except replevin and ejectment, the plaintiff at law may have a writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to fulfil any duty in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested. This, if liberally construed, will go far beyond the bill for specific performance, which, as equity practitioners know, is hampered by many formal and conventional difficulties. At the common law, it seems clear, that a party will now be able to sue for damages, or, in the alternative, for, in effect, specific performance, wherever specific performance is rationally practicable; and that he will obtain whichever he desires, assuming him to shew ground for the relief that he seeks.

The 79th, 80th, 81st, and 82nd clauses give to Courts of law the entire jurisdiction by injunction, hitherto exclusively possessed by Courts of equity. As we understand these clauses, in almost every imaginable case in which a plaintiff, claiming a legal right, might have filed a bill and moved for an injunction, he may now do so at law, in the action brought to try the legal right. Waste, patent, copyright, nuisance, breach of contract—these, and others, in which bills were filed, and injunctions asked, to protect the right or property, pending the inquiry into the legal right, will be cases in which, the action being brought to try the right, an injunction may be moved for at common law.

No doubt, in applying this new jurisdiction, the Courts of law will pay great respect to, and probably follow, the principles on which it has been hitherto administered in equity; but that, so far from making the step less a step towards amalgamation, will only make it more so.

Next comes the 83rd section, which in certain actions authorises defence on equitable grounds—that is, in any case in which, "if judgment were obtained, he (the party) would be entitled to relief against such judgment on equitable grounds."

This is, in fact, an investiture of Courts of common law with a vast equitable jurisdiction—a jurisdiction strictly and literally equitable, because it is only to arise in cases where relief could before be obtained in equity, against the judgment at law; consequently the Court of law will be bound, before it acts on the equitable defence, to determine, on the principles of equity and the authorities recognised by Courts of equity, whether such a defence would have induced a Court of equity to act, to deprive the party having the judgment, of the benefit of it.

For a time, at least, some additional labour, in the way of legal study, will be cast upon the gentlemen who shall practise at the common law, or, what is still more probable, equity men will be imported to assist in arguing equitable common-law causes, if we may venture on the expression, just as common-law counsel are now occasionally imported in the courts of equity and the examiner's office to examine witnesses. Thus fusion has commenced, and no one can venture to predict that there will in a few years be more than one general Bar—at least, as far as regards juniors.

We are not here to discuss the advantage or propriety of the change; it seems a fait accompli; and valeat quantum, the change must and will take place.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION.—MICH. TERM, 1854.

THE Council of Legal Education have approved of the following rules for the public examination of the students.

The attention of the students is requested to the following rules of the Inns of Court:—

“As an inducement to students to propose themselves for examination, studentships shall be founded of fifty guineas per annum each, to continue for a period of three years, and one such studentship shall be conferred on the most distinguished student at each public examination; and further, the examiners shall select and certify the names of three other students who shall have passed the next best examinations, and the Inns of Court to which such students belong may, if desired, dispense with any terms, not exceeding two, that may remain to be kept by such students previously to their being called to the Bar. Provided that the examiners shall not be obliged to confer or grant any studentship or certificate unless they shall be of opinion that the examination of the students they select has been such as entitles them thereto.”

“At every call to the Bar those students who have passed a public examination, and either obtained a studentship or a certificate of honour, shall take rank in seniority over all other students who shall be called on the same day.”

“No student shall be eligible to be called to the Bar who shall not either have attended during one whole year the lectures of two of the Readers, or have satisfactorily passed a public examination.”

RULES FOR THE PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR HONOURS, OR CERTIFICATES ENTITLING STUDENTS TO BE CALLED TO THE BAR.

An examination will be held in next Michaelmas Term, to which a student of any of the Inns of Court, who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship or honours, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name at the treasurer's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs on or before Monday, the 23rd day of October next; and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship or other honourable distinction, or whether he is merely desirous of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar.

The examination will commence on Monday, the 30th day of October next, and will be continued on the Tuesday and Wednesday following.

It will take place in the Benchers' Reading-room of Lincoln's-inn; and the doors will be closed ten minutes after the time appointed for the commencement of the examination.

The examination by printed questions will be conducted in the following order:—

Monday morning, the 30th October, at half-past nine, on Constitutional Law and Legal History; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on Equity.

Tuesday morning, the 31st October, at half-past nine, on Common Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on the Law of Real Property, &c.

Wednesday morning, the 1st November, at half-past nine, on Jurisprudence and the Civil Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, a paper will be given to the students including questions bearing upon all the foregoing subjects of examination.

The oral examination will be conducted in the same order, during the same hours, and on the same subjects, as those already marked out for the examination by printed questions, except that on Wednesday afternoon there will be no oral examination.

The oral examination of each student will be conducted apart from the other students; and the character of that examination will vary, according as the student is a candidate for honours or a studentship, or desires simply to obtain a certificate.

The oral examination and printed questions will be founded on the books below mentioned, regard being had, however, to the particular object with a view to which the student presents himself for examination.

In determining the question, whether a student has passed the examination in such a manner as to entitle him to be called to the Bar, the examiners will principally have regard to the general knowledge of law and jurisprudence which he has displayed.

A student may present himself at any number of examinations, until he shall have obtained a certificate.

Any student who shall obtain a certificate may present himself a second time for examination as a candidate for the studentship, but only at one of the three examinations immediately succeeding that at which he shall have obtained such certificate; provided, that if any student so presenting himself shall not succeed in obtaining the studentship, his name shall not appear in the list.

Students who have kept more than eleven terms shall not be admitted to an examination for the studentship.

THE READERS ON CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND LEGAL HISTORY will expect all students to answer any general questions relating to the History of England, and to know the outlines of Constitutional Law.

The candidates for distinction will be expected to know the progress of our institutions, and the changes of our Constitutional Government. They will be particularly examined as to the struggles in the Reigns of Edward III and Richard II; to give an account of the remarkable State Trials down to the end of Queen Anne; and to be thoroughly and minutely conversant with the History of the Reigns of Henry VIII, Elizabeth, the House of Stuart, and William III.

Books for the ordinary examination will be Rapin, Hallam, Creasy on the Constitution, and Sullivan's Lectures.

Those for candidates for distinction will be the State Trials, Parliamentary History, Clarendon, Burnet, Millar, Rapin, Tindal, and Blackstone's Commentaries.

The READER on EQUITY proposes to examine in the following books:—

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 9, 1854.

We are somewhat consoled for the comparative barrenness of the last Session of Parliament by the fact, that we have not only fewer statutes, in point of number, added to the mass, but also that they are respectively shorter in form than is generally the case. The same causes that led to the withdrawal of so many bills induced also the striking out, or the abbreviation, of clauses in those which reached the final stage of the royal assent. Among those which were deemed worthy of this honour, several will be found of great practical importance; and we propose to lay the substance of these briefly before our readers, with such comments as they may suggest.

The number of statutes passed in the Session of 1854 (17 & 18 Victoria) are 125; and omitting those enactments which relate to the army, the navy, and the militia, together with the concomitant statutes for increased income-tax, and others of a less interesting character, we come to the stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 16,

VOL. XVIII.

I I

(County Courts), intituled "An Act to amend an Act of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, and 15 & 16 Vict. c. 54."

It will be remembered that the Court of Exchequer decided that no appeal lay from a county court in cases where the claim exceeded 50l., and was brought by agreement of the parties within its jurisdiction. By this act the right of appeal is given in such cases; but it may be excluded if the parties express their desire, in the memorandum of agreement filed with the clerk of the court, that the decision of the county court judge shall be final.

By a former act (15 & 16 Vict. c. 54, s. 18) a registry of every county court judgment for the sum of 10l. and upwards is to be kept; and that provision is now, by the 2nd section of this act, extended to all petitions for protection from process made to a county court.

It is sufficient merely to mention the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 25, for amending "the Industrial and Provident Societies Act, 1852;" and c. 26, for assimilating "the law and practice existing in cases of high treason in Ireland to the law and practice existing in cases of high treason in England."

Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, "the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1854."—By this act every railway and canal company is to afford all reasonable facilities for the conveyance of traffic, both on their own railways and canals and on those near* to them, and not to shew any undue preference in favour of any particular class of persons or description of goods. (Sect. 2). In case of any violation of this act, complaint may be made by summons or on motion to the Court of Common Pleas, or any judge thereof*, who may direct necessary inquiries to be made by engineers, barristers, or others, and restrain the company, by writ of injunction or interdict, from violating the act, and enforce obedience thereto by attachment of the directors, or some of them, or other person disobeying the writ, and direct payment of a sum not exceeding 200*l.* for each day, after a day to be named in the order, that the company shall fail to obey the writ, and the money shall be payable as the court or a judge may direct, to the party complaining, or into court to abide the ultimate decision, or to the Queen. Costs may also be awarded. (Sect. 3). A rehearing may be directed, and the order varied or rescinded. (Sect. 5).

For the purpose of obviating the effect of recent decisions, that railway companies may limit their liability as to animals and the like, even in cases of gross negligence, (Carr v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 17 Jur., part 1, p. 379; 21 L. J., Ex., 261; Chippendale v. The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 21 L. J., Q. B., 22; The Great Northern Railway Company v. Morville, 16 Jur., part 1, p. 528; Austin v. The Manchester Railway Company, 16 Jur., part 1, p. 763), it is enacted, that every such company is to be liable for the loss of, or any injury done to, horses or other animals, or to any goods, occasioned by the neglect or default of the company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice or condition contrary thereto, or in anywise limiting such liability, every such notice, condition, or declaration being declared to be void; but such conditions, with respect to the receiving, forwarding, and delivering the said animals, &c., may be made as shall be adjudged, by the court or judge before whom any question relating thereto shall be tried, to be just and reasonable; and no greater damages shall be recovered than as follow:—For a horse, 50*l.*; for any neat cattle, per head, 15*l.*; for any sheep or pigs, per head, 2*l.*; unless the person sending them declares them to be of higher value, in which case the company may charge a reasonable per-centage in addition to the ordinary rate, and such per-centage is to be notified in the manner prescribed by the Carriers Act, 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 68†.

The proof of value, and of the amount of injury, is always to be on the party claiming compensation. No special contract between the company and any party respecting the receiving, forwarding, or delivering of animals, &c., shall be binding upon such party unless the same be signed by him, or by the person delivering the animals, &c. (Sect. 7).

General rules for carrying the act into execution may be framed. (Sect. 4).

Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 34, (Evidence), after reciting the inconvenience of the superior Courts not being able to compel the attendance of witnesses resident in one part of the United Kingdom at a trial in another part, provide for the issuing of process by special order for that purpose, and also, if sufficient money has been tendered for the expenses of coming, attending, and returning from the trial, for the punishment of the party disobeying such process, (sects. 1—4); but the act is not to affect the power of the Courts to issue a commission, or the admissibility of any evidence at any trial, where such evidence is now receivable, on the ground of any witness being beyond the jurisdiction of the Court. (Sects. 5, 6).

Stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, “an act for preventing frauds upon creditors by secret bills of sale of personal chattels,” enacts, that every bill of sale of personal chattels made after the passing of the act, (10th July, 1854), and every schedule or inventory thereto, or a true copy thereof, and of every attestation of the execution thereof, shall, together with an affidavit of the time of such bill being made or given, and a description of the residence and occupation of the person making or giving the same, and of the attesting witness to such bill, be filed with the Clerk of the Docquets and Judgments in the Queen’s Bench within twenty-one days after the making or giving such bill, (in like manner as a warrant of attorney in any personal action given by a trader*), or it shall be void against assignees in bankruptcy or insolvency, assignees for the benefit of creditors, and against execution creditors, so far as regards the property in such goods which at or after the time of such bankruptcy, &c., and after the expiration of the said period of twenty-one days, shall be in the possession or apparent possession of the person making such bill of sale. (Sect. 1†). If the bill is subject to any defeasance or condition or declaration of trust not contained in it, such defeasance, &c. shall be taken, for the purposes of this act, to be part of the bill, and shall be written on the same paper or parchment before the filing thereof, or the bill shall be void as if it had not been filed. (Sect. 2). The officer is to keep a book containing the particulars of each bill of sale so filed, and any judge of the Court of Queen’s Bench may order satisfaction to be entered upon any bill of sale, if it appears to him that the debt has been satisfied. (Sects. 3—6). The interpretation clause shews what meanings are to be affixed to “bill of sale” and “personal chattels,” and when the latter are to be deemed in the “apparent possession” of the person making the bill of sale. (Sect. 7).

It is remarkable, that although this act contains provisions so materially affecting the rights of parties taking bills of sale, and allows only twenty-one days for registration from the execution or giving thereof, no future period was fixed for its coming into operation: it thus took effect immediately from the time of its receiving the royal assent, (10th July, 1854), and in consequence of this, there are doubtless many instances in which parties, ignorant of the enactment, have failed to register their bills of sale within the limited period.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Neville Parker, Esq., to be a Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court of the Province of New Brunswick, with rank and precedence in the said Court next after the Chief Justice; and Joseph Hensley, Esq., to be Attorney-General, and Dennis O’Meara, Esq., to be Solicitor-General, for the Island of Prince Edward.

* This is the only mode of proceeding for a violation of the above enactments. Provision is also made for complaints in Ireland and Scotland. (Sect. 2).

† Nothing in the principal act contained is to affect the rights or liabilities of any company under the Carriers Act with respect to articles of the descriptions therein mentioned.

* See 2 Arch. Prac., by Chitty, 862—866.

† It also provides in similar terms for bills of sale “made or given by any person under or in the execution of any process.” (See sect. 1).

ENGLISH COPYRIGHT IN FOREIGN COMPOSITIONS.

(From a Correspondent).

Our literary privateers seem to have very much mistaken the scope of the letters of mart recently issued by the House of Lords in Jefferys v. Boosey. Up to the present moment the making prize of literary works of foreigners first published in this country after the 1st July, 1842, (when the stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, was passed), has not been sanctioned by a single decision of any Court, and it is not quite safe to assume either that the 4th section of the Alien Act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, (cited below), is wholly inoperative, or that a construction of the repealed Copyright Acts which is not tenable on any ground, whether of criticism, of principle, of common sense, of policy, or of authority, will be imitated, to the further discredit of the Court of ultimate appeal, when judgment is to be given according to the effect of the very differently worded statutes which are now in force, and which were passed with the intention of making essential alterations in the law. If the commonly-received explanation of Jefferys v. Boosey—that it was decided with a view to the possible renewal of the late abortive negotiations with the United States for a copyright treaty, (a notion receiving some countenance from the ill-judged allusion to those negotiations made by Lord St. Leonards)—were correct, there might be some reason for fearing a second decision of the same quality; but if we reject that libel on the sense and honour of the Court, and are content to rank its late decision with Lord Lincoln's case, and other inexplicable though unquestionable blunders, there may be some hope that with a new case a better light may break in, and shew the way to a sounder conclusion.

Before we consider the differences between the existing and the repealed statutes it will be useful to shew that the late decision, though binding and irreversible as regards all cases of the same kind which are governed by the repealed statutes, is (unless it be rested on an accidental objection to the plaintiff's title, which Lord St. Leonards relied on) wholly unsound and contrary to principle and authority, and therefore not to be followed in any case depending on the existing statutes. In doing this we shall avail ourselves of an article which appeared in THE JURIST (vol. 14, part 2, p. 46) shortly after the decision in Boosey v. Purday, (13 Jur., part 1, p. 918).

The common-law right of an author and his representatives to restrain others from selling copies of his unpublished works has always been recognised, and still subsists. Thus, in The Duke of Queensberry v. Shabbeare, (2 Eden, 329), the publication of Lord Clarendon's History of the Reign of Charles the Second was restrained on the application of his executors, who had the MS., then nearly a century old. Other authorities to the same effect are Webb v. Rose, (cited 4 Burr. 2330; 3 Swanst. 674); Pope v. Curl, (2 Atk. 342); Macklin v. Richardson, (Amb. 694); Thompson v. Stanhope, (1d. 737); Southey v. Sherwood, (2 Mer. 436); Pritchard v. Gee, (2 Swanst. 425); Paley's case, (cited 2 V. & B. 23); Perceval v. Phipps, (2 V. & B. 19); Morris v. Kelly, (1 J. & W. 481); and Abernethy v. Hutchinson, (2 L. J., O. S., Ch., 209). In Prince Albert v. Strange, (1 Mac. & G. 43), Lord Cottenham said, "The property of an author or composer of any work, whether of literature, art, or science, in such work, unpublished, and kept for his private use or pleasure, cannot be disputed after the many decisions in which that right has been affirmed or assumed." That this right is a species of property, and not a mere right to privacy, is shewn by Paley's case, and by Macklin v. Richardson and Abernethy v. Hutchinson, where the publication of the work in a parish, on the stage, or in the lecture-room, was held not to destroy the right, (though now the public representation of a play is by statute equivalent to publishing it as a book. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, s. 20).

This right is not lost by publication. Publication in the lecture-room, or on the stage, did not destroy it; nor, in the case of letters, does the receiver take, with the right of property in the letter itself, a right to publish its contents; that remains with the writer. It is not lost by circulating manuscript copies, as in Paley's case; nor even by selling such copies, as in White v. Gerock, (2 B. & Al. 298). There is nothing in the act of selling printed copies which should have a different effect. It is a mode of enjoying, and not an abandonment of the property. The author gives the use of his work to the public in a modified manner, and upon certain terms, which cannot be varied without his consent, (see Abernethy v. Hutchinson, 2 L. J., O. S., Ch., 209), any more than (as was said in Tonson v. Collins) the borrower or purchaser of a key, admitting him to private grounds, can make other keys from that, and sell them.

The early development of the law of copyright was impeded by many circumstances. In the infancy of the art of printing, the profits of authorship were not thought of; the value of the materials, and the labour and skill employed in setting up the types of a book, constituted the principal elements of its cost; and copyright was first claimed by the printer, who sought to be protected from rival editions until his own was sold off. This was secured, in individual cases, by exclusive license from the Crown, which assumed not only a right of censorship over the press, but also the sole use of the art of printing, pretending that it had been introduced into the realm at the expense of the Crown. When the author's copy became valuable, protection was sought for it from the same source. The prerogative was then stronger than the law. These patents to individuals, the privileges of the Stationers' Company, (which was established in the reign of Philip & Mary as a kind of literary inquisition), and the several acts for licensing printed books, (the last of which expired in 1694), hindered the free application of the common law to this species of property; and the usurpations of the prerogative were scarcely abated before the common-law right was abolished, in respect of published works, by the stat. 8 Ann. c. 19; but its existence up to the passing of that act is clearly established. The exclusive licenses granted to individuals were always understood to be an exercise of the Crown's right of censorship, founded in each case on the author's title to his copy. They were never classed with the monopolies prohibited by the statute of James I. The inherent right of an author and his assigns to his copy, independently of royal grant, is assumed in all the acts of Parliament and ordinances for the regulation of printing which preceded the statute of Anne. Thus, in the Licensing Act of the 13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 33, s. 6, it is enacted, that no one shall print any book "which any person, by force or virtue of any letters-patent granted as aforesaid, or (where the same is not granted by any letters-patent) by force or virtue of any entry thereof duly made in the register-book of the said Company of Stationers, or in the register-book of either of the universities respectively, has, or shall have, the right, privilege, authority, or allowance solely to print, without the consent of the owner of such book." Now, registry with the Stationers' Company conferred no property, but was merely a condition precedent to the liberty of publishing at all; and it was expressly held that this statute gave no new right, but only the new remedy of an action of debt. (The Stationers' Company v. Parker, Skin. 233). The preamble to the stat. 8 Ann. c. 19, is to the same effect:—"Whereas printers, booksellers, and other persons have of late frequently taken the liberty of printing, reprinting, and publishing books and other writings without the consent of the authors or proprietors of such books and writings, to their very great detriment," &c.; language clearly referring to the invasion of an existing right, though at that time the Licensing Acts had expired, and the notion and practice of obtaining a privilege of monopoly by royal grant were exploded. Indeed, the title of the Crown itself to what were called prerogative copies (such as law books, the translation of the Bible, almanacks, &c.) was always founded on the expense bestowed by the Crown, directly or indirectly, on the compilation of those works. Again: in the enacting part of the statute of Anne, the copyright in books then already printed was secured to the authors, if they had not transferred their copies, or to their assignees, for twenty-one years, "and no longer." There could be no assignees if there were no property to assign. The copyright in books then "already composed, and not printed and published, or that should thereafter be composed," is secured to the authors and their assignees for the term of fourteen years from the day of the first publishing the same, "and no longer." The leaving of a longer term to works already published than was allowed to future works, shews that the act was understood to be restrictive of an existing right. The original bill was intended to give better protection to the common-law perpetual copyright.

Before the ultimate decision in Donaldson v. Beckett (2 Bro. P. C. 129; 4 Burr. 2303) it was held in several cases that the statute merely gave additional remedies for a term, leaving the author to his right at common law after that term had expired. (Tonson v. Walker, 3 Swanst. 673, and the cases there cited; Millar v. Taylor, 4 Burr. 2303). In Tonson v. Collins, cited in Millar v. Taylor, the Court of Queen's Bench, and afterwards the Court of Exchequer Chamber, were prepared to decide unanimously to that effect, but the case was dismissed on the ground of suspected collusion. Those cases were overruled by the House of Lords in Donaldson v. Beckett, as it seems on the satisfactory ground that the words "and no longer," in the statute of Anne, cut down the perpetuity of the common-law right, in cases within the statute, to the period therein specified. The ground of that decision can only be surmised; but as seven of the eleven judges who were consulted, and also Lord Mansfield, who did not speak, were of opinion that at the common law copyright was not destroyed by publication, it is plain that Donaldson v. Beckett did not overrule the prior decisions as to the effect of publication. Of the four judges who spoke the other way, one (Eyre, B.) thought that an author had not the sole right of printing even before publication; and two (Perrott, B., and Adams, B.) thought, that though he had that right, he could not bring an action against a person printing from his manuscript, unless the copy was obtained by fraud or violence—errors so obvious as greatly to lessen the weight of the opinions with which they were associated.

The objection so strenuously urged by Mr. Justice Yates and others, against including copyright in that notion of property which comprises such incorporeal rights as advowsons, tolls, and franchises, seems absurd enough. It was also beside the question, which was not as to the proper denomination of the right, but whether it existed by the common law in a book printed, as it certainly did in a book merely written, and whether it existed independently of the statute, as it certainly did by virtue of it. The common law recognises other rights than those of property, and has a scope as unlimited as that of the Legislature itself.

It was also urged that literary compositions ought to stand on the same footing as inventions in manufactures; but not to insist on the marked distinction between a literary work, which has an unmistakeable individuality both in itself and in its origin, and an invention, which is a mere conception of a mode of action, that may, and generally does, occur independently to many minds, so that it would be impossible to distinguish between piracy and re-invention, the same considerations of expediency which are the grounds for giving protection in either case, and upon which the institution of property in general is founded, supply a reason for limiting the rights of the inventor more strictly than those of the author. Copyright merely prevents others from making a pecuniary profit of the particular work, and in no way limits the use of the ideas contained in it, or restrains others in the exercise of their own abilities; for two authors cannot write the same book, though two men may invent the same machine. A patent not only secures to the inventor the use of his invention, but prevents another, who may arrive at the same result by his own ingenuity, from turning it to account. To give a perpetual monopoly to the one who happens first to perceive and put in practice that which in the natural progress of the arts is sure to occur to many, would be to fetter and not to encourage improvement.

The right of an alien author to protection for his copies by the common law does not appear to have been expressly decided; but it is a necessary consequence of the rules of law with respect to aliens. With some exceptions as to land, founded on feudal and political reasons, an alien, whether resident here or abroad, has the same rights in respect of property and contracts as a natural-born subject would have under the same circumstances. It was resolved in Calvin's case (7 Rep. 17) that "an alien friend may by the common law have, acquire, and get, within the realm, by gift, trade, or other lawful means, any treasure or goods personal whatsoever, as well as any Englishman, and may maintain any action for the same; for if they should be disabled to acquire and maintain these things, it were in effect to deny unto them trade and traffic, which is the life of every island." (See Dy. 2 b; Cro. Car. 8; 2 Taunt. 37; Bac. Ab., "Alien," D.; Com. Dig., "Alien," C. 5). So completely are all the personal rights of an alien, not involving the possession of land, or the exercise of constitutional privileges, recognised by our law, that an alien resident abroad may maintain an action for the slander of his reputation in this country: Tuerloote v. Morrison, (Yelv. 198; Bulst. 134); Pisani v. Lawson, (8 Scott, 182), in which last case the doctrine was rested upon general considerations of justice, and not on the expediency of encouraging commerce. This maxim of the common law has been confirmed by a declaration in the recent Alien Act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, s. 4, (stated below). An alien author was therefore clearly entitled by the common law to the same protection of his property in his unpublished compositions as a native, and the act of publishing or procuring the publication of the work here could not be an abandonment of that right in the one case more than in the other. It seems to us that the right might have been carried further; for as publication here is not an abandonment of the copy, publication abroad, whether by a British subject or by a stranger, cannot be so, unless that interpretation is put upon it by the local law, in which case it might perhaps be thought to defeat the right everywhere. But see Beard v. Egerton, (3 C. B. 97). Subject, however, to the effect of any local law, it seems to be clear that by the common law an author, whether native or alien, and whether he first published here or abroad, had a perpetual copyright in his works.

The question remains, whether this right has been taken away by the Legislature in the case of an alien. The provisions of the Copyright Acts must be as extensively applicable as the common law which they superseded, unless their operation is limited by express words or necessary implication. The stat. 8 Ann. c. 19, after giving protection for twenty-one years to books then already printed, confers on the author of a book or books "already composed, and not printed and published, or that shall hereafter be composed," a copyright for fourteen years from the day of the first publishing the same. Here the word "composed" is evidently used merely for the purpose of distinguishing the class of future books from that of existing copyrights, which are secured for a longer term; and it cannot be taken to refer to compositions in this country exclusively, although in Clementi v. Walker (2 B. & Cr. 861) the words "printed and published" appear to have been read with that limitation. In the stat. 12 Geo. 2, c. 36, "for prohibiting the importation of books reprinted abroad, and first composed or written and printed in Great Britain," the conjunctive "and" certainly makes the fact of composition in this country essential to bring a book within the protection of that act; but any argument founded on that expression is displaced by the language of the stat. 41 Geo. 3, c. 107, "for the further encouragement of learning," &c., where the words are, (sect. 7), "first composed, written, or printed and published in any part of the United Kingdom."

There was nothing, then, in the repealed acts to place aliens upon a less advantageous footing than natural-born subjects in respect to copyright. Either they gave to an alien the same copyright which they gave to a subject, or they did not apply to him at all, and left him his common-law right. An expression in the first International Copyright Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 59, s. 1, has been supposed to sanction a different construction of the repealed acts. That act authorised the Crown, by order in Council, to direct that the authors of books which should be published in any foreign country, to be therein specified, should have the sole liberty of printing and reprinting such books within the British dominions, for such term as her Majesty should direct, "not exceeding the term which authors, being British subjects, are now by law entitled to in respect to books first published within the United Kingdom." If this means anything adverse to the rights of foreigners, it must mean that an alien cannot acquire a copyright even by publishing during a temporary residence here—a proposition expressly repudiated by the noble Lords who delivered judgment in the late case. The widest inference that can be drawn from it is, that it was thought there might be a doubt as to the rights of aliens. The object was to furnish a precise measure of the term to be granted—not to risk the efficacy of the enactment on the correctness of a reference purporting to embrace every case, but to select an instance which should be free from doubt. If the expression suggests a doubt as to aliens, it leaves the question open, whether aliens, if not within the Copyright Acts, may have a perpetual copyright by the common law. That the intention was not to refer to every possible case of copyright is also plain from the reference to first publication here, coupled with the enactment in the 14th section of the same act, "that the author of any book to be, after the passing of this act, first published out of her Majesty's dominions, shall have no copyright therein within her Majesty's dominions, otherwise than such (if any) as he may become entitled to under this act:" an enactment not declaratory of an existing law, but confined to publication subsequent to its passing, and implying that, under the prior law, first publication here was not essential, although, as we shall see, prompt publication was. A further inference from that enactment is, that foreign authors first publishing here would still be entitled to copyright.

The conclusion which we have drawn from general considerations is well supported by authority. That an alien author, temporarily residing in this country, and first publishing here, is entitled to protection, was assumed in Bach v. Longman, (Cowp. 623).

In Clementi v. Walker (2 B. & Cr. 861) a piece of music had been published at Paris in June, 1814, with the sanction of the composer, who in the September following, being in England, verbally sold the work to the plaintiffs, who published here in the same month. In 1818 the defendant published without the plaintiffs' authority. In 1822 the composer executed a formal assignment, in writing, to the plaintiffs. It was held, that, the parol assignment being ineffectual, there was no publication here, either by the author or by his assignee, before the year 1822, and that the work, having in the meantime been fairly published by a third party, became publici juris. The Court was of opinion that the statutes contemplated books printed as well as published here, and that no protection was intended to be given where the author prints and publishes abroad only, without ever publishing here, or without publishing within a reasonable time after the publication abroad, and before any other person has fairly published on his own account. Whether the act of publishing abroad made the work at once publici juris it was not necessary to decide. In that case the Court assumed, that if the author had first published here he would have been entitled to protection; so that, as far as it goes, it favours the alien's claim. Bayley, J., said, "The case, therefore, is reduced to this—whether an author, who first publishes abroad, and, instead of using due diligence to publish here, forbears to publish until some other, fairly and without blame, publishes here, can insist upon his privilege." What privilege, if he could not have a copyright under any circumstances? Again: "The different statutes which give protection to authors do not give it as to all books, but as to printed books only." This observation is the key to the whole of the judgment; and, if it had been well considered in Boosey v. Purday, might have led to a different conclusion.

107. Act not to extend to Ireland or Scotland.

Be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. The parties to any cause may, by consent in writing, signed by them or their attorneys, as the case may be, leave the decision of any issue of fact to the court, provided that the court, upon a rule to shew cause, or a judge on summons, shall, in their or his discretion, think fit to allow such trial; or provided the judges of the superior courts of law at Westminster shall, in pursuance of the power hereinafter given to them, make any general rule or order dispensing with such allowance, either in all cases or in any particular class or classes of cases to be defined in such rule or order; and such issue of fact may thereupon be tried and determined, and damages assessed where necessary, in open court, either in term or vacation, by any judge who might otherwise have presided at the trial thereof by jury, either with or without the assistance of any other judge or judges of the same court, or included in the same commission at the assizes; and the verdict of such judge or judges shall be of the same effect as the verdict of a jury, save that it shall not be questioned upon the ground of being against the weight of evidence; and the proceedings upon and after such trial, as to the power of the court or judge, the evidence, and otherwise, shall be the same as in the case of trial by jury.

2. It shall be lawful for any one of the judges of any of the superior courts at Westminster, at the request of the Lord Chief Justice or Lord Chief Baron, to try the causes entered for trial at Nisi Prius in Westminster and London in either of the courts, on the same days on which the said Lord Chief Justice or Lord Chief Baron, or any other judge of the same court, shall be sitting to try causes at those places respectively, or at either of them, so that the trial of two causes may be proceeded with at the same time; and all jurors, witnesses, and other persons who may have been summoned or required to attend at or for the trial of any cause before the said Lord Chief Justice or Lord Chief Baron, as the case may be, shall give their attendance at and for the trial thereof before such other judge as may be sitting to try the same by virtue of this act; and it shall be lawful for the associates and other officers of the Lord Chief Justice or Lord Chief Baron, as the case may be, to appoint from time to time fit and proper persons, to be approved by the said Lord Chief Justice or Lord Chief Baron, to attend for them and on their behalf respectively before such judge; and the trial of every cause which shall be so had by virtue of this act shall, if necessary, be entered of record, as having been had before the judge by whom such cause in fact was tried.

3. If it be made appear, at any time after the issuing of the writ, to the satisfaction of the court or a judge, upon the application of either party, that the matter in dispute consists wholly or in part of matters of mere account which cannot conveniently be tried in the ordinary way, it shall be lawful for such court or judge, upon such application, if they or he think fit, to decide such matter in a summary manner, or to order that such matter, either wholly or in part, be referred to an arbitrator appointed by the parties, or to an officer of the court, or, in country causes, to the judge of any county court, upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as such court or judge shall think reasonable; and the decision or order of such court or judge, or the award or certificate of such referee, shall be enforceable by the same process as the finding of a jury upon the matter referred.

4. If it shall appear to the court or a judge that the allowance or disallowance of any particular item or items in such account depends upon a question of law fit to be decided by the court, or upon a question of fact fit to be decided by a jury, or by a judge upon the consent of both parties as hereinbefore provided, it shall be lawful for such court or judge to direct a case to be stated, or an issue or issues to be tried; and the decision of the court upon such case, and the finding of the jury or judge upon such issue or issues, shall be taken and acted upon by the arbitrator as conclusive.

5. It shall be lawful for the arbitrator upon any compulsory reference under this act, or upon any reference by consent of parties where the submission is or may be made a rule or order of any of the superior courts of law or equity at Westminster, if he shall think fit, and if it is not provided to the contrary, to state his award, as to the whole or any part thereof, in the form of a special case for the opinion of the court, and when an action is referred, judgment, if so ordered, may be entered according to the opinion of the court.

6. If upon the trial of any issue of fact by a judge under this act it shall appear to the judge that the questions arising thereon involve matter of account which cannot conveniently be tried before him, it shall be lawful for him, at his discretion, to order that such matter of account be referred to an arbitrator appointed by the parties, or to an officer of the court, or, in country causes, to a judge of any county court, upon such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as such judge shall think reasonable; and the award or certificate of such referee shall have the same effect as hereinbefore provided as to the award or certificate of a referee before trial; and it shall be competent for the judge to proceed to try and dispose of any other matters in question, not referred, in like manner as if no reference had been made.

7. The proceedings upon any such arbitration as aforesaid shall, except otherwise directed hereby or by the submission or document authorising the reference, be conducted in like manner, and subject to the same rules and enactments, as to the power of the arbitrator and of the court, the attendance of witnesses, the production of documents, enforcing or setting aside the award, and otherwise, as upon a reference made by consent under a rule of court or judge's order.

8. In any case where reference shall be made to arbitration as aforesaid the court or a judge shall have power at any time, and from time to time, to remit the matters referred, or any or either of them, to the re-consideration and re-determination of the said arbitrator, upon such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as to the said court or judge may seem proper.

9. All applications to set aside any award made on a compulsory reference under this act shall and may be made within the first seven days of the term next following the publication of the award to the parties, whether made in vacation or term; and if no such application is made, or if no rule is granted thereon, or if any rule granted thereon is afterwards discharged, such award shall be final between the parties.

10. Any award made on a compulsory reference under this act may, by authority of a judge, on such terms as to him may seem reasonable, be enforced at any time after seven days from the time of publication, notwithstanding that the time for moving to set it aside has not elapsed.

11. Whenever the parties to any deed or instrument in writing to be hereafter made or executed, or any of them, shall agree that any then existing or future differences between them or any of them shall be referred to arbitration, and any one or more of the parties so agreeing, or any person or persons claiming through or under him or them, shall nevertheless commence any action at law or suit in equity against the other party or parties, or any of them, or against any person or persons claiming through or under him or them in respect of the matters so agreed to be referred, or any of them, it shall be lawful for the court in which action or suit is brought, or a judge thereof, on application by the defendant or defendants, or any of them, after appearance, and before plea or answer, upon being satisfied that no sufficient reason exists why such matters cannot be or ought not to be referred to arbitration according to such agreement as aforesaid, and that the defendant was at the time of the bringing of such action or suit, and still is, ready and willing to join and concur in all acts necessary and proper for causing such matters so to be decided by arbitration, to make a rule or order staying all proceedings in such action or suit, on such terms, as to costs and otherwise, as to such court or judge may seem fit: provided always, that any such rule or order may at any time afterwards be discharged or varied, as justice may require.

12. If in any case of arbitration the document authorising the reference provide that the reference shall be to a single arbitrator, and all the parties do not, after differences have arisen, concur in the appointment of an arbitrator; or if any appointed arbitrator refuse to act, or become incapable of acting, or die, and the terms of such document do not shew that it was intended that such vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties do not concur in appointing a new one; or if, where the parties or two arbitrators are at liberty to appoint an umpire or third arbitrator, such parties or arbitrators do not appoint an umpire or third arbitrator; or if any appointed umpire or third arbitrator refuse to act, or become incapable of acting, or die, and the terms of the document authorising the reference do not shew that it was intended that such a vacancy should not be supplied, and the parties or arbitrators respectively do not appoint a new one; then and in every such instance any party may serve the remaining parties or the arbitrators, as the case may be, with a written notice to appoint an arbitrator, umpire, or third arbitrator respectively; and if within seven clear days after such notice shall have been served no arbitrator, umpire, or third arbitrator be appointed, it shall be lawful for any judge of any of the superior courts of law or equity at Westminster, upon summons to be taken out by the party having served such notice as aforesaid, to appoint an arbitrator, umpire, or third arbitrator, as the case may be, and such arbitrator, umpire, and third arbitrator respectively shall have the like power to act in the reference and make an award as if he had been appointed by consent of all parties.

13. When the reference is, or is intended to be, to two arbitrators, one appointed by each party, it shall be lawful for either party, in the case of the death, refusal to act, or incapacity of any arbitrator appointed by him, to substitute a new arbitrator, unless the document authorising the reference shew that it was intended that the vacancy should not be supplied; and if on such a reference one party fail to appoint an arbitrator, either originally or by way of substitution as aforesaid, for seven clear days after the other party shall have appointed an arbitrator, and shall have served the party so failing to appoint with notice in writing to make the appointment, the party who has appointed an arbitrator may appoint such arbitrator to act as sole arbitrator in the reference, and an award made by him shall be binding on both parties as if the appointment had been by consent: provided, however, that the court or a judge may revoke such appointment, on such terms as shall seem just.

14. When the reference is to two arbitrators, and the terms of the document authorising it do not shew that it was intended that there should not be an umpire, or provide otherwise for the appointment of an umpire, the two arbitrators may appoint an umpire at any time within the period during which they have power to make an award, unless they be called upon by notice as aforesaid to make the appointment sooner.

15. The arbitrator acting under any such document or compulsory order of reference as aforesaid, or under any order referring the award back, shall make his award under his hand, and (unless such document or order respectively shall contain a different limit of time) within three months after he shall have been appointed, and shall have entered on the reference, or shall have been called upon to act by a notice in writing from any party, but the parties may by consent in writing enlarge the term for making the award; and it shall be lawful for the superior court of which such submission, document, or order is or may be made a rule or order, or for any judge thereof, for good cause to be stated in the rule or order for enlargement, from time to time to enlarge the term for making the award; and if no period be stated for the enlargement in such consent or order for enlargement, it shall be deemed to be an enlargement for one month; and in any case where an umpire shall have been appointed it shall be lawful for him to enter on the reference in lieu of the arbitrators, if the latter shall have allowed their time or their extended time to expire without making an award, or shall have delivered to any party or to the umpire a notice in writing stating that they cannot agree.

16. When any award made on any such submission, document, or order of reference as aforesaid directs that possession of any lands or tenements capable of being the subject of an action of ejectment shall be delivered to any party, either forthwith or at any future time, or that any such party is entitled to the possession of any such lands or tenements, it shall be lawful for the court, of which the document authorising the reference is or is made a rule or order, to order any party to the reference who shall be in possession of any such lands or tenements, or any person in possession of the same claiming under or put in possession by him since the making of the document authorising the reference, to deliver possession of the same to the party entitled thereto, pursuant to the award, and such rule or order to deliver possession shall have the effect of a judgment in ejectment against every such party or person named in it, and execution may issue, and possession shall be delivered by the sheriff as on a judgment in ejectment.

17. Every agreement or submission to arbitration by consent, whether by deed or instrument in writing, not under seal, may be made a rule of any one of the superior courts of law or equity at Westminster, on the application of any party thereto, unless such agreement or submission contain words purporting that the parties intend that it should not be made a rule of court; and if in any such agreement or submission it is provided that the same shall or may be made a rule of one in particular of such superior courts, it may be made a rule of that court only; and if, when there is no such provision, a case be stated in the award for the opinion of one of the superior courts, and such court be specified in the award, and the document authorising the reference have not, before the publication of the award to the parties, been made a rule of court, such document may be made a rule only of the court specified in the award; and when in any case the document authorising the reference is or has been made a rule or order of any one of such superior courts, no other of such courts shall have any jurisdiction to entertain any motion respecting the arbitration or award.

18. Upon the trial of any cause the addresses to the jury shall be regulated as follows:—The party who begins, or his counsel, shall be allowed, in the event of his opponent not announcing, at the close of the case of the party who begins, his intention to adduce evidence, to address the jury a second time at the close of such case, for the purpose of summing up the evidence; and the party on the other side, or his counsel, shall be allowed to open the case, and also to sum up the evidence, (if any); and the right to reply shall be the same as at present.

19. It shall be lawful for the court or judge, at the trial of any cause, where they or he may deem it right, for the purposes of justice, to order an adjournment for such time, and subject to such terms and conditions as to costs and otherwise, as they or he may think fit.

20. If any person called as a witness, or required or desiring to make an affidavit or deposition, shall refuse or be unwilling from alleged conscientious motives to be sworn, it shall be lawful for the court or judge, or other presiding officer, or person qualified to take affidavits or depositions, upon being satisfied of the sincerity of such objection, to permit such person, instead of being sworn, to make his or her solemn affirmation or declaration in the words following: vide icet,

"I, A. B., do solemnly, sincerely, and truly affirm and declare, that the taking of any oath is, according to my religious belief, unlawful; and I do also solemnly, sincerely, and truly affirm and declare" &c.:

which solemn affirmation and declaration shall be of the same force and effect as if such person had taken an oath in the usual form.

21. If any person making such solemn affirmation or declaration shall wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirm or declare any matter or thing, which, if the same had been sworn in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, every such person so offending shall incur the same penalties as by the laws and statutes of this kingdom are or may be enacted or provided against persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury.

22. A party producing a witness shall not be allowed to impeach his credit by general evidence of bad character, but he may, in case the witness shall, in the opinion of the judge, prove adverse, contradict him by other evidence, or, by leave of the judge, prove that he has made at other times a statement inconsistent with his present testimony; but before such last-mentioned proof can be given, the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, must be mentioned to the witness, and he must be asked whether or not he has made such statement.

23. If a witness, upon cross-examination as to a former statement made by him relative to the subject-matter of the cause, and inconsistent with his present testimony, does not distinctly admit that he has made such statement, proof may be given that he did in fact make it; but before such proof can be given, the circumstances of the supposed statement, sufficient to designate the particular occasion, must be mentioned to the witness, and he must be asked whether or not he has made such statement.

24. A witness may be cross-examined as to previous statements made by him in writing, or reduced into writing, relative to the subject-matter of the cause, without such writing being shewn to him; but if it is intended to contradict such witness by the writing, his attention must, before such contradictory proof can be given, be called to those parts of the writing which are to be used for the purpose of so contradicting him: provided always, that it shall be competent for the judge, at any time during the trial, to require the production of the writing for his inspection, and he may thereupon make such use of it for the purposes of the trial as he shall think fit.

25. A witness in any cause may be questioned as to whether he has been convicted of any felony or misdemeanour, and, upon being so questioned, if he either denies the fact, or refuses to answer, it shall be lawful for the opposite party to prove such conviction; and a certificate, containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for such offence, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, (for which certificate a fee of 5s., and no more, shall be demanded or taken), shall, upon proof of the identity of the person, be sufficient evidence of the said conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

26. It shall not be necessary to prove by the attesting witness any instrument to the validity of which attestation is not requisite; and such instrument may be proved by admission or otherwise, as if there had been no attesting witness thereto.

27. Comparison of a disputed writing with any writing proved to the satisfaction of the judge to be genuine shall be permitted to be made by witnesses; and such writings, and the evidence of witnesses respecting the same, may be submitted to the court and jury as evidence of the genuineness, or otherwise, of the writing in dispute.

28. Upon the production of any document as evidence at the trial of any cause, it shall be the duty of the officer of the court whose duty it is to read such document to call the attention of the judge to any omission or insufficiency of the stamp; and the document, if unstamped, or not sufficiently stamped, shall not be received in evidence until the whole or (as the case may be) the deficiency of the stamp duty, and the penalty required by statute, together with the additional penalty of 1*l.*, shall have been paid.

29. Such officer of the court shall, upon payment to him of the whole or (as the case may be) of the deficiency of the stamp duty payable upon or in respect of such document, and of the penalty required by statute, and of the additional penalty of 1*l.*, give a receipt for the amount of the duty or deficiency which the judge shall determine to be payable, and also of the penalty, and thereupon such document shall be admissible in evidence, saving all just exceptions on other grounds; and an entry of the fact of such payment, and of the amount thereof, shall be made in a book kept by such officer; and such officer shall, at the end of each sittings or assizes, (as the case may be), duly make a return to the Commissioners of the Inland Revenue of the monies, if any, which he has so received by way of duty or penalty, distinguishing between such monies, and stating the name of the cause and of the parties from whom he received such monies, and the date, if any, and description of the document, for the purpose of identifying the same; and he shall pay over the said monies to the Receiver-General of the Inland Revenue, or to such person as the said commissioners shall appoint or authorise to receive the same; and in case such officer shall neglect or refuse to furnish such account, or to pay over any of the monies so received by him as aforesaid, he shall be liable to be proceeded against in the manner directed by the 8th section of the 13 & 14 Vict. [c. 97], intituled "An Act to repeal certain Stamp Duties, and to grant others in lieu thereof, and to amend the Laws relating to the Stamp Duties;" and the said commissioners shall, upon request, and production of the receipt hereinbefore mentioned, cause such documents to be stamped with the proper stamp or stamps in respect of the sums so paid as aforesaid: provided always, that the aforesaid enactment shall not extend to any document which cannot now be stamped after the execution thereof on payment of the duty and a penalty.

30. No document made or required under the provisions of this act shall be liable to any stamp duty.

31. No new trial shall be granted by reason of the ruling of any judge that the stamp upon any document is sufficient, or that the document does not require a stamp.

32. Error may be brought upon a judgment upon a special case in the same manner as upon a judgment upon a special verdict, unless the parties agree to the contrary; and the proceedings for bringing a special case before the court of error shall, as nearly as may be, be the same as in the case of a special verdict; and the court of error shall either affirm the judgment or give the same judgment as ought to have been given in the court in which it was originally decided, the said court of error being required to draw any inferences of fact from the facts stated in such special case which the court where it was originally decided ought to have drawn.

33. In every rule nisi for a new trial, or to enter a verdict or nonsuit, the grounds upon which such rule shall have been granted shall be shortly stated therein.

34. In all cases of rules to enter a verdict or nonsuit upon a point reserved at the trial, if the rule to shew cause be refused or granted, and then discharged or made absolute, the party decided against may appeal.

35. In all cases of motions for a new trial upon the ground that the judge has not ruled according to law, if the rule to shew cause be refused, or, if granted, be then discharged or made absolute, the party decided against may appeal, provided any one of the judges dissent from the rule being refused, or, when granted, being discharged or made absolute, as the case may be, or provided the court in its discretion think fit that an appeal should be allowed: provided, that where the application for a new trial is upon matter of discretion only, as on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence or otherwise, no such appeal shall be allowed.

36. The Court of Error, the Exchequer Chamber, and the House of Lords shall be courts of appeal for the purposes of this act.

37. No appeal shall be allowed unless notice thereof be given in writing to the opposite party or his attorney, and to one of the masters of the court, within four days after the decision complained of, or such further time as may be allowed by the court or a judge.

38. Notice of appeal shall be a stay of execution, provided bail to pay the sum recovered and costs, or to pay costs where the appellants was plaintiff below, be given, in like manner and to the same amount as bail in error, within eight days after the decision complained of, or before execution delivered to the sheriff.

39. The appeal hereinbefore mentioned shall be upon a case to be stated by the parties, (and in case of difference, to be settled by the court or a judge of the court appealed from), in which case shall be set forth so much of the pleadings, evidence, and the ruling or judgment objected to, as may be necessary to raise the question for the decision of the court of appeal.

40. When the appeal is from the refusal of the court below to grant a rule to shew cause, and the court of appeal grant such rule, such rule shall be argued and disposed of in the court of appeal.

41. The court of appeal shall give such judgment as ought to have been given in the court below; and all such further proceedings may be taken thereupon as if the judgment had been given by the court in which the record originated.

42. The court of appeal shall have power to adjudge payment of costs, and to order restitution; and they shall have the same powers as the court of error in respect of awarding process and otherwise.

43. Upon an award of a trial de novo by any one of the superior courts or by the court of error, upon matter appearing upon the record, error may at once be brought; and if the judgment in such or any other case be affirmed in error, it shall be lawful for the court of error to adjudge costs to the defendant in error.

44. When a new trial is granted, on the ground that the verdict was against evidence, the costs of the first trial shall abide the event, unless the court shall otherwise order.

45. Upon motions founded upon affidavits it shall be lawful for either party, with leave of the court or a judge, to make affidavits in answer to the affidavits of the opposite party, upon any new matter arising out of such affidavits, subject to all such rules as shall hereafter be made respecting such affidavits.

46. Upon the hearing of any motion or summons it shall be lawful for the court or judge, at their or his discretion, and upon such terms as they or he shall think reasonable, from time to time to order such documents as they or he may think fit to be produced, and such witnesses as they or he may think necessary to appear, and be examined vivâ voce, either before such court or judge, or before the master, and upon hearing such evidence, or reading the report of such master, to make such rule or order as may be just.

47. The court or judge may by such rule or order, or any subsequent rule or order, command the attendance of the witnesses named therein, for the purpose of being examined, or the production of any writings or other documents to be mentioned in such rule or order; and such rule or order shall be proceeded upon in the same manner, and shall have the same force and effect, as a rule of the court under an act passed in the 1 Will. 4, [c. 22], intituled "An Act to enable Courts of Law to order the Examination of Witnesses upon Interrogatories or otherwise;" and it shall be lawful for the court, or judge, or master to adjourn the examination from time to time, as occasion may require; and the proceedings upon such examination shall be conducted, and the depositions taken down, as nearly as may be, in the mode now in use with respect to the vivâ voce examination of witnesses under the last-mentioned act.

48. Any party to any civil action or other civil proceeding in any of the superior courts, requiring the affidavit of a person who refuses to make an affidavit, may apply by summons for an order to such person to appear and be examined upon oath before a judge or master, to whom it may be most convenient to refer such examination, as to the matters concerning which he has refused to make an affidavit; and a judge may, if he think fit, make such order for the attendance of such person before the person therein appointed to take such examination, for the purpose of being examined as aforesaid, and for the production of any writings or documents to be mentioned in such order, and may therein impose such terms as to such examination, and the costs of the application and proceedings thereon, as he shall think just.

49. Such order shall be proceeded upon in like manner as an order made under the hereinbefore-mentioned act passed in the 1 Will. 4, and the examination thereon shall be conducted, and the depositions taken down and returned, as nearly as may be, in the mode now used on vivâ voce examinations under the said act of Parliament.

50. Upon the application of either party to any cause or civil proceeding in any of the superior courts, upon an affidavit by such party of his belief that any document, to the production of which he is entitled for the purpose of discovery or otherwise, is in the possession or power of the opposite party, it shall be lawful for the court or judge to order that the party against whom such application is made, or if such party is a body corporate, that some officer to be named of such body corporate, shall answer on affidavit, stating what documents he or they has or have in his or their possession or power relating to the matters in dispute, or what he knows as to the custody they or any of them are in, and whether he or they objects or object (and if so, on what grounds) to the production of such as are in his or their possession or power; and upon such affidavit being made, the court or judge may make such further order thereon as shall be just.

51. In all causes in any of the superior courts, by order of the court or a judge, the plaintiff may, with the declaration, and the defendant may, with the plea, or either of them by leave of the court or a judge may, at any other time, deliver to the opposite party or his attorney (provided such party, if not a body corporate, would be liable to be called and examined as a witness upon such matter) interrogatories in writing upon any matter as to which discovery may be sought, and require such party, or in the case of a body corporate any of the officers of such body corporate, within ten days to answer the questions in writing by affidavit, to be sworn and filed in the ordinary way; and any party or officer omitting, without just cause, sufficiently to answer all questions as to which a discovery may be sought, within the above time, or such extended time as the court or a judge shall allow, shall be deemed to have committed a contempt of the court, and shall be liable to be proceeded against accordingly.

52. The application for such order shall be made upon an affidavit of the party proposing to interrogate, and his attorney or agent, or, in the case of a body corporate, of their attorney or agent, stating that the deponents or deponent believe or believes that the party proposing to interrogate, whether plaintiff or defendant, will derive material benefit in the cause from the discovery which he seeks, that there is a good cause of action or defence upon the merits, and, if the application be made on the part of the defendant, that the discovery is not sought for the purpose of delay: provided, that where it shall happen, from unavoidable circumstances, that the plaintiff or defendant cannot join in such affidavit, the court or judge may, if they or he think fit, upon affidavit of such circumstances by which the party is prevented from so joining therein, allow and order that the interrogatories may be delivered without such affidavit.

53. In case of omission, without just cause, to answer sufficiently such written interrogatories, it shall be lawful for the court or a judge, at their or his discretion, to direct an oral examination of the interrogated party, as to such points as they or he may direct, before a judge or master; and the court or judge may by each rule or order, or any subsequent rule or order, command the attendance of such party or parties before the person appointed to take such examination, for the purpose of being orally examined as aforesaid, or the production of any writings or other documents to be mentioned in such rule or order, and may impose therein such terms as to such examination, and the costs of the application, and of the proceedings thereon, and otherwise, as to such court or judge shall seem just.

54. Such rule or order shall have the same force and effect, and may be proceeded upon in like manner, as an order made under the said hereinbefore-mentioned act passed in the 1 Will. 4.

55. Whenever, by virtue of this act, an examination of any witness or witnesses has been taken before a judge of one of the said superior courts, or before a master, the depositions taken down by such examiner shall be returned to and kept in the master's office of the court in which the proceedings are pending; and office copies of such depositions may be given out, and the depositions may be otherwise used, in the same manner as in the case of depositions taken under the hereinbefore-mentioned act passed in the 1 Will. 4, [c. 22].

56. It shall be lawful for every judge or master named in any such rule or order as aforesaid for taking examinations under this act, and he is hereby required, to make, if need be, a special report to the court in which such proceedings are pending, touching such examination, and the conduct or absence of any witness or other person thereon or relating thereto; and the court is hereby authorised to institute such proceedings and make such order and orders upon such report as justice may require, and as may be instituted and made in any case of contempt of the court.

57. The costs of every application for any rule or order to be made for the examination of witnesses by virtue of this act, and of the rule or order and proceedings thereon, shall be in the discretion of the court or judge by whom such rule or order is made.

58. Either party shall be at liberty to apply to the court or a judge for a rule or order for the inspection by the jury, or by himself, or by his witnesses, of any real or personal property the inspection of which may be material to the proper determination of the question in dispute; and it shall be lawful for the court or a judge, if they or he think fit, to make such rule or order, upon such terms as to costs and otherwise, as such court or judge may direct: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall affect the provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, or any previous act, as to obtaining a view by a jury: provided also, that all rules and regulations now in force and applicable to the proceedings by view under the said last-mentioned act shall be held to apply to proceedings for inspection by a jury under the provisions of this act, or as near thereto as may be.

59. The several courts, or any judge thereof, may make all such rules or orders upon the sheriff or other person as may be necessary to procure the attendance of a special or common jury for the trial of any cause or matter depending in such courts, at such time and place and in such manner as they or he may think fit.

60. It shall be lawful for any creditor who has obtained a judgment in any of the superior courts to apply to the court or a judge for a rule or order that the judgment debtor should be orally examined as to any and what debts are owing to him before a master of the court, or such other person as the court or judge shall appoint; and the court or judge may make such rule or order for the examination of such judgment debtor, and for the production of any books or documents, and the examination shall be conducted in the same manner as in the case of an oral examination of an opposite party before a master under this act.

61. It shall be lawful for a judge, upon the ex parte application of such judgment creditor, either before or after such oral examination, and upon affidavit by himself or his attorney stating that judgment has been recovered, and that it is still unsatisfied, and to what amount, and that any other person is indebted to the judgment debtor, and is within the jurisdiction, to order that all debts owing or accruing from such third person (hereinafter called the garnishee) to the judgment debtor shall be attached to answer the judgment debt; and by the same or any subsequent order it may be ordered that the garnishee shall appear before the judge or a master of the court, as such judge shall appoint, to shew cause why he should not pay the judgment creditor the debt due from him to the judgment debtor, or so much thereof as may be sufficient to satisfy the judgment debt.

62. Service of an order that debts due or accruing to the judgment debtor shall be attached, or notice thereof to the garnishee, in such manner as the judge shall direct, shall bind such debts in his hands.

63. If the garnishee does not forthwith pay into court the amount due from him to the judgment debtor, or an amount equal to the judgment debt, and does not dispute the debt due or claimed to be due from him to the judgment debtor, or if he does not appear upon summons, then the judge may order execution to issue, and it may be sued forth accordingly, without any previous writ or process, to levy the amount due from such garnishee towards satisfaction of the judgment debt.

64. If the garnishee disputes his liability, the judge, instead of making an order that execution shall issue, may order that the judgment creditor shall be at liberty to proceed against the garnishee by writ, calling upon him to shew cause why there should not be execution against him for the alleged debt, or for the amount due to the judgment debtor, if less than the judgment debt, and for costs of suit; and the proceedings upon such suit shall be the same, as nearly as may be, as upon a writ of revivor issued under the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852.

65. Payment made by or execution levied upon the garnishee under any such proceeding as aforesaid shall be a valid discharge to him as against the judgment debtor to the amount paid or levied, although such proceeding may be set aside or the judgment reversed.

66. In each of the superior courts there shall be kept at the master's office a debt attachment book, and in such book entries shall be made of the attachment and proceedings thereon, with names, dates, and statements of the amount recovered, and otherwise; and the mode of keeping such books shall be the same in all the courts; and copies of any entries made therein may be taken by any person, upon application to any master.

67. The costs of any application for an attachment of debt under this act, and of any proceedings arising from or incidental to such application, shall be in the discretion of the court or a judge.

68. The plaintiff in any action in any of the superior courts, except replevin and ejectment, may indorse upon the writ and copy to be served a notice that the plaintiff intends to claim a writ of mandamus, and the plaintiff may thereupon claim in the declaration, either together with any other demand which may now be enforced in such action, or separately, a writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to fulfil any duty in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested.

69. The declaration in such action shall set forth sufficient grounds upon which such claim is founded, and shall set forth that the plaintiff is personally interested therein, and that he sustains or may sustain damage by the non-performance of such duty, and that performance thereof has been demanded by him, and refused or neglected.

70. The pleadings and other proceedings in any action in which a writ of mandamus is claimed shall be the same in all respects, as nearly as may be, and costs shall be recoverable by either party, as in an ordinary action for the recovery of damages.

71. In case judgment shall be given to the plaintiff that a mandamus do issue, it shall be lawful for the court in which such judgment is given, if it shall see fit, besides issuing execution in the ordinary way for the costs and damages, also to issue a peremptory writ of mandamus to the defendant, commanding him forthwith to perform the duty to be enforced.

72. The writ need not recite the declaration or other proceedings, or the matter therein stated, but shall simply command the performance of the duty, and in other respects shall be in the form of an ordinary writ of execution, except that it shall be directed to the party and not to the sheriff, and may be issued in term or vacation, and returnable forthwith; and no return thereto, except that of compliance, shall be allowed, but time to return it may, upon sufficient grounds, be allowed by the court or a judge, either with or without terms.

73. The writ of mandamus so issued as aforesaid shall have the same force and effect as a peremptory writ of mandamus issued out of the Court of Queen's Bench, and in case of disobedience may be enforced by attachment.

74. The court may, upon application by the plaintiff, besides or instead of proceeding against the disobedient party by attachment, direct that the act required to be done may be done by the plaintiff, or some other person appointed by the court, at the expense of the defendant; and upon the act being done, the amount of such expense may be ascertained by the court, either by writ of inquiry or reference to a master, as the court or a judge may order; and the court may order payment of the amount of such expenses and costs, and enforce payment thereof by execution.

75. Nothing herein contained shall take away the jurisdiction of the Court of Queen's Bench to grant writs of mandamus; nor shall any writ of mandamus issued out of that court be invalid by reason of the right of the prosecutor to proceed by action for mandamus under this act.

76. Upon application by motion for any writ of mandamus in the Court of Queen's Bench, the rule may in all cases be absolute in the first instance, if the court shall think fit; and the writ may bear teste on the day of its issuing, and may be made returnable forthwith, whether in term or in vacation, but time may be allowed to return it, by the court or a judge, either with or without terms.

77. The provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, and of this act, so far as they are applicable, shall apply to the pleadings and proceedings upon a prerogative writ of mandamus issued by the Court of Queen's Bench.

78. The court or a judge shall have power, if they or he see fit so to do, upon the application of the plaintiff in any action for the detention of any chattel, to order that execution shall issue for the return of the chattel detained, without giving the defendant the option of retaining such chattel upon paying the value assessed, and that if the said chattel cannot be found, and unless the court or a judge should otherwise order, the sheriff shall distrain the defendant by all his lands and chattels in the said sheriff's bailiwick, till the defendant render such chattel, or, at the option of the plaintiff, that he cause to be made of the defendant's goods the assessed value of such chattel: provided that the plaintiff shall, either by the same or a separate writ of execution, be entitled to have made of the defendant's goods the damages, costs, and interest in such action.

79. In all cases of breach of contract or other injury, where the party injured is entitled to maintain and has brought an action, he may, in like case and manner as hereinbefore provided with respect to mandamus, claim a writ of injunction against the repetition or continuance of such breach of contract or other injury, or the committal of any breach of contract or injury of a like kind, arising out of the same contract, or relating to the same property or right; and he may also in the same action include a claim for damages or other redress.

80. The writ of summons in such action shall be in the same form as the writ of summons in any personal action, but on every such writ and copy thereof there shall be indorsed a notice, that in default of appearance the plaintiff may, besides proceeding to judgment and execution for damages and costs, apply for and obtain a writ of injunction.

81. The proceedings in such action shall be the same, as nearly as may be, and subject to the like control, as the proceedings in an action to obtain a mandamus under the provisions hereinbefore contained; and in such action judgment may be given that the writ of injunction do or do not issue, as justice may require; and in case of disobedience, such writ of injunction may be enforced by attachment by the court, or, when such courts shall not be sitting, by a judge.

82. It shall be lawful for the plaintiff at any time after the commencement of the action, and whether before or after judgment, to apply ex parte to the court or a judge for a writ of injunction to restrain the defendant in such action from the repetition or continuance of the wrongful act or breach of contract complained of, or the committal of any breach of contract or injury of a like kind, arising out of the same contract, or relating to the same property or right; and such writ may be granted or denied by the court or judge upon such terms, as to the duration of the writ, keeping an account, giving security, or otherwise, as to such court or judge shall seem reasonable and just; and in case of disobedience, such writ may be enforced by attachment by the court, or, when such courts shall not be sitting, by a judge: provided always, that any order for a writ of injunction made by a judge, or any writ issued by virtue thereof, may be discharged or varied or set aside by the court, on application made thereto by any party dissatisfied with such order.

83. If shall be lawful for the defendant or plaintiff in replevin in any cause in any of the superior courts in which, if judgment were obtained, he would be entitled to relief against such judgment on equitable grounds, to plead the facts which entitle him to such relief by way of defence, and the said courts are hereby empowered to receive such defence by way of plea: provided that such plea shall begin with the words, "For defence on equitable grounds," or words to the like effect.

84. Any such matter which, if it arose before or during the time for pleading, would be an answer to the action by way of plea, may, if it arise after the lapse of the period during which it could be pleaded, be set up by way of audita querela.

85. The plaintiff may reply, in answer to any plea of the defendant, facts which avoid such plea upon equitable grounds: provided that such replication shall begin within the words, "For replication on equitable grounds," or words to the like effect.

86. Provided always, that in case it shall appear to the court, or any judge thereof, that any such equitable plea or equitable replication cannot be dealt with by a court of law so as to do justice between the parties, it shall be lawful for such court or judge to order the same to be struck out, on such terms as to costs and otherwise as to such court or judge may seem reasonable.

87. In case of any action founded upon a bill of exchange, or other negotiable instrument, it shall be lawful for the court or a judge to order that the loss of such instrument shall not be set up, provided an indemnity is given, to the satisfaction of the court or judge, or a master, against the claims of any other person upon such negotiable instrument.

88. The superior courts, or any judge thereof, may, upon summary application, by rule or order, exercise such and the like jurisdiction as may, under the provisions of an act of Parliament made and passed in the 53 Geo. 3, [c. 159], intituled "An Act to limit the Responsibility of Shipowners in certain Cases," be exercised by any court of equity.

89. Any person who shall, upon any examination upon oath or affirmation, or in any affidavit in proceedings under this act, wilfully and corruptly give false evidence, or wilfully and corruptly swear or affirm anything which shall be false, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to the penalties of wilful and corrupt perjury.

90. Writs of execution to fix bail may be tested and returnable in vacation.

91. Proceedings against executors upon a judgment of assets in futuro may be had and taken in the manner provided by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, as to writs of revivor.

92. Where an action would, but for the provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, have abated by reason of the death of either party, and in which the proceedings may be revived and continued under that act, the defendant or person against whom the action may be so continued may apply by summons to compel the plaintiff, or person entitled to proceed with the action in the room of the plaintiff, to proceed according to the provisions of the said act within such time as the judge shall order; and in default of such proceeding the defendant or other person against whom the action may be so continued as aforesaid shall be entitled to enter a suggestion of such default, and of the representative character of the person by or against whom the action may be proceeded with, as the case may be, and to have judgment for the costs of the action and suggestion against the plaintiff, or against the person entitled to proceed in his room, as the case may be, and in the latter case to be levied of the goods of the testator or intestate.

93. If any person shall bring an action of ejectment after a prior action of ejectment for the same premises has been or shall have been unsuccessfully brought by such person, or by any person through or under whom he claims, against the same defendant, or against any person through or under whom he defends, the court or a judge may, if they or he think fit, on the application of the defendant at any time after such defendant has appeared to the writ, order that the plaintiff shall give to the defendant security for the payment of the defendant's costs, and that all further proceedings in the cause shall be stayed until such security be given, whether the prior action has been or shall have been disposed of by discontinuance, or by nonsuit, or by judgment for the defendant.

94. No writ of execution issued before the 24th day of October, 1852, if unexecuted, shall remain in force for more than six calendar months after the 24th day of October, 1854, unless the same be renewed as hereinafter mentioned, but all such writs may be renewed from time to time in the same manner as writs issued after the 24th day of October, 1852, may now be renewed under the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, sect. 124.

95. The superior courts may appoint and hold sittings either in banc, or for the trial of issues in fact by judge or jury, at any time or times, whether in term or vacation, not being between the 10th of August and the 24th October.

96. It shall be lawful for the superior courts of common law, and every judge thereof, and any judge sitting at Nisi Prius, at all times to amend all defects and errors in any proceedings under the provisions of this act, whether there is anything in writing to amend by or not, and whether the defect or error be that of the party applying to amend or not; and all such amendments may be made with or without costs, and upon such terms as to the court or judge may seem fit; and all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining in the existing suit the real question in controversy between the parties shall be so made, if duly applied for.

97. It shall be lawful for the judges of the said courts, or any eight or more of them, of whom the chiefs of each of the said courts shall be three, from time to time to make all such general rules and orders for the effectual execution of this act, and of the intention and object hereof, and for fixing the costs to be allowed for and in respect of the matters herein contained, and the performance thereof, as in their judgment shall be necessary or proper, and for that purpose to meet from time to time as occasion may require: provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to restrain the authority or limit the jurisdiction of the said courts or of the judges thereof to make rules or orders, or otherwise to regulate and dispose of the business therein.

98. Such new or altered writs and forms of proceedings may be issued, entered, and taken, as may by the judges of the said courts, or any eight or more of them, of whom the chiefs of each of the said courts shall be three, be deemed necessary or expedient for giving effect to the provisions hereinbefore contained, and in such forms as the judges of such courts respectively shall from time to time think fit to order; and such writs and proceedings shall be acted upon and enforced in such and the same manner as writs and proceedings of the said courts are now acted upon and enforced, or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit; and any existing writ or proceeding, the form of which shall be in any manner altered in pursuance of this act, shall nevertheless be of the same force and virtue as if no alteration had been made therein, except as far as the effect thereof may be varied by this act.

99. In the construction of this act the word "court" shall be understood to mean one of the superior courts of common law at Westminster; and the word "judge" shall be understood to mean a judge or baron of any of the said courts; and the word "master" shall be understood to mean a master of any of the said courts; and the word "action" shall be understood to mean any personal action in any of the said courts.

100. All the enactments and provisions of this act not relating exclusively to the sittings for trials of causes or issues in fact at London or Westminster shall extend and apply to the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and the Court of Pleas at Durham, and actions and proceedings therein respectively, subject to the following modifications: all the powers given by this act to the judges of the said superior courts of common law at Westminster to make general rules and orders shall and may be exercised by the respective judges of the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and Court of Pleas at Durham, being judges of one of the said common-law courts, at Westminster, or any two of them respectively, with respect to the said Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and Court of Pleas at Durham respectively, and matters and proceedings therein within the jurisdiction of the same courts respectively; and all powers under this act exercisable by any one judge of the superior courts at Westminster shall and may be exercisable by one judge of the said superior courts of the said counties palatine, being also a judge of one of the said courts at Westminster, as to matters and proceedings in the said superior courts of the said counties palatine.

101. Provided always, that all the provisions of this act applicable to masters of the said courts at Westminster shall apply to the respective prothonotaries of the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and Court of Pleas at Durham and their respective deputies acting in the execution of the duties of such offices, which acting officers respectively may singly exercise, with reference to matters and proceedings in the last-mentioned courts respectively, the powers hereby given to the masters of the superior courts at Westminster.

102. Provided also, as to proceedings in appeal, that the Court of Queen's Bench, being the court of error from the Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and Court of Pleas at Durham respectively, shall also be the court of appeal from the said respective courts for the purposes of this act in reference to motions for new trials, or to enter verdicts or nonsuits previously made to the judges of the said respective Court of Common Pleas at Lancaster and Court of Pleas at Durham respectively.

103. The enactments contained in sects. 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, and 32 of this act shall apply and extend to every court of civil judicature in England and Ireland.

104. The provisions of this act shall come into operation on the 24th October, 1854.

105. It shall be lawful for her Majesty from time to time, by an order in Council, to direct that all or any part of the provisions of this act, or of the rules to be made in pursuance thereof, shall apply to all or any court or courts of record in England and Wales, and within one month after such order shall have been made and published in the London Gazette such provisions and rules respectively shall extend and apply in manner directed by such order, and any such order may be in like manner from time to time altered and annulled; and in and by any such order her Majesty may direct by whom any powers or duties incident to the provisions applied under this act, or the Common-law Procedure Act, 1852, shall and may be exercised with respect to matters in such court or courts, and may make any orders or regulations which may be deemed requisite for carrying into operation in such court or courts the provisions so applied.

106. In citing this act in any instrument, document, or proceeding it shall be sufficient to use the expression, "The Common-law Procedure Act, 1854."

107. Nothing in this act shall extend to Ireland or Scotland, save as aforesaid.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 16, 1854.

WE propose in this paper to offer some observations on the already celebrated Beer Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 79—an act of an importance not to be measured by the loftiness of its subjects and incidents, but rather by the nature of its objects, or professed objects—an act also which has perhaps carried further than any act of Parliament yet has, in a given space, that principle of looseness and ambiguity of expression which is the dominant feature of legislative literature. Whom the act means to exclude from participating in Sunday libations, in the hours made by it uncanonical, it has already puzzled magistrates, and good magistrates too, to divine. Several magistrates have held that a person migrating, for purposes of personal recreation, from London to Hampstead, or, of course, by parity of reasoning, any other suburban village, is a bonâ fide traveller within the meaning of the act. Another very able magistrate appeared startled by this doctrine, and, without actually overruling it, distinguished between such an amateur traveller and a professional traveller driving or conducting an omnibus between a suburban village and London, and held the latter species of traveller to be, at any rate, not within the act. We confess that we should rather have decided both cases in a different manner. That a gentleman who saunters up from Bedford-square to Hampstead for a morning's stroll should be called a traveller would certainly astonish Park, Burckhardt, or Layard, or even our own accomplished Eothen; on the other hand, what a man is, who rides a hundred miles a day on the step of an omnibus, professedly to guide and direct a machine for conveying other people on their affairs, unless he is a traveller, is puzzling to make out. In the meantime, however, the proprietors of the country taverns in the regions round about London, and the excursionists, have tolerably settled the matter practically, by acting in concert, and in such masses, that it defies the ubiquitous vigilance of the police to collect the necessary evidence for laying the matter fully before the magistracy. The publicans and the sinners have combined, and there is no making head against them.

Ourselves being somewhat addicted to Sabbatarian pedestrianism—being, like other mere mortals, capable of hunger and thirst, and that not always necessarily at one invariable hour, and not deeming it either agreeable or altogether decent on all occasions to carry ostentatiously exposed supplies of food and wine, we have too much sympathy with the amateur bonâ fide traveller to form, perhaps, an unbiassed opinion whether the Legislature meant, by that term, any person walking or riding for his pure pleasure and recreation from London to Richmond, or from Richmond to Kew, or the like. Certainly, if clothing himself with the dust of the north road for four miles, clothes a man also with the character of a traveller, it is difficult to say that he is not equally a traveller who, embarking on a steam-boat at London-bridge, debouches on the quay at Richmond. At the same time, although in old plays and novels one does meet the expression of “travelling” and “traveller” applied to journeys of such distances, he recollects at the same time, that, in the days therein described, a journey of pleasure purely, on any London road, was not. An invitation to dine at Richmond or Hounslow, if such a thing existed, involved peril of life or limb, or at least of purse, and required a brace of pistols and a long sword. But it certainly would at this day startle any gentleman receiving, at his villa at Richmond or Wimbledon, the visit of a London friend, to be told that he had travelled from London.

If the Legislature had taken the greatest pains to search for the word in the language the least capable of bearing an accurate meaning, they could hardly have been more successful than in selecting the word "traveller." Clearly, the mere fact of travelling a short distance at a time cannot exclude the application of the word "traveller;" clearly also it is not necessary to travel for business to be a traveller, for no one would dispute that a man who roams about Syria or Egypt is a traveller; clearly, on the other hand also, a man who goes habitually within a given circle, small or large, round any trading town, to obtain orders for a tradesman, is a traveller, whether he does it with a pack on his back, or in a large phaeton with a large horse, or in the comfortable arm-chairs of first-class railway carriages. So that it is not travelling for business, nor is it necessarily travelling a great distance, nor is it the mode of travelling, that constitutes a traveller; and yet, if a gentleman, or any one else, walks a short distance, for his amusement, in the neighbourhood of this great city, or rows his outrigger from Searle's to Richmond, it clashes with all one's notions of the use of language, to call him a "bonâ fide traveller."

What the broad meaning, the policy of the Legislature, was in passing the Beer Act, is equally difficult to ascertain. It cannot have meant to exclude Sunday trading in the forbidden hours, because it permits it sub modo, and with an exception so vague as to have already rendered the act nearly a dead letter. And, moreover, it will be observed, that the act only excludes the keeping open for the sale of drinks; eatables are not mentioned in the act; and we apprehend it to be clear, that anybody taking his own wine or other drinkables with him might lawfully be entertained with any amount of dinner, of any degree of sumptuousness, between the hours of half-past two and six. The act cannot have been addressed simply to the prevention of tippling and drunkenness, because bonâ fide travellers, once in the sanctum, may be permitted to tinkle to their heart's content without any infringement of the act.

Then, again, it ought not to be supposed, looking at the language of the act, that it meant to exclude from participation in the uses of a tavern those only who live in the immediate neighbourhood, letting in, as it does let in, all those who come from any, even an almost illusory, distance; for the result of that would be neither to prevent trading nor drinking, but simply to make every man desirous of drinking go a little distance for it, instead of walking across the street; and one ought not to suppose the Legislature so very clumsy. Nevertheless, this, we apprehend, was the intention of the Legislature, viz. to prevent simply the congregation of habitual drinkers in each tavern, and not to interfere with the moderate and legitimate use of a tavern by persons requiring its use for rational refreshment. That it has failed in doing anything beyond puzzling a few magistrates for a short time, and eliciting a few speeches from a few tavern-masters, is clear. But it may be questioned whether this is a subject on which any amount of legislative wisdom could draw an act practically advantageous to the whole public, as the circumstances of different towns and of different classes of society are so varied, that a regulation perfectly wholesome for one may be tyrannical towards another, and useless towards a third. The real evils to be removed are, Sunday trading not absolutely necessary, and drunkenness and riot. Long custom has established the total unnecessary of tavern trading during the hours of divine service; but out of those hours, there are very few data for determining the question when and where it is unavoidable, and that difficulty would be much better dealt with if left to the good feeling and religious sentiments of the community at large, than it can be by specific rules laid down by a body of gentlemen necessarily ignorant of the details of the plebeian life, for which they are legislating. The real, practical, and crying evil of drunkenness and riot would be much better provided for by the total abolition of the system of public-house licenses, throwing open altogether that trade, and making it as lawful for any one who chooses to trade as a publican to do so, as it is for him to be a tailor or a baker; coupling, however, with such perfect freedom of trade, a liability in publicans to be personally responsible for the good behaviour of their guests, and making them subject to fines, and pretty heavy fines, for permitting any drunkenness or riot in their houses. If this were made the principle of legislation for houses of public entertainment, it might safely be left to the prudence of their owners to keep them open at all the hours on the Sunday, on which the present act has vainly attempted to put its veto.

ENGLISH COPYRIGHT IN FOREIGN COMPOSITIONS.

Delondre v. Shaw (2 Sim. 237) has no bearing on this question. In that case an application to restrain the piracy of a label constituting a trade-mark was refused because the bill did not charge a fraudulent use of the mark to promote the sale of a spurious article. The Vice-Chancellor added, that the case could not be rested on copyright, because the Court does not protect the copyright of a foreigner. That was said with reference to a label which not only was first printed and published in France, but was not a literary composition at all, and, as an engraving, was, by the express terms of the stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 57, unprotected, because engraved out of Great Britain. That was the single point decided in Pags v. Townsend, (5 Sim. 395).

Guichard v. Mori (9 L. J., O. S., Ch., 227) was a mere repetition of Clementi v. Walker.

In D'Almaine v. Boosey, (1 Y. & C. 288), Lord Abinger, C. B., sitting in equity, decided that the English assignee of a foreign work, first publishing here, was entitled to copyright, though the assignment was executed abroad, and the author never came to this country.

In Bentley v. Forster (10 Sim. 329) the assignee of a foreign author domiciled in England was held entitled to protection for a work which had been composed, as it seems, abroad. The Vice-Chancellor continued the injunction, and said that, in his opinion, a work first published here was protected, although composed abroad by an alien. He directed an action to be brought, according to the usual practice, but the defendant submitted.

In Chappell v. Purday (4 Y. & C. 485) the question was the same as in Clementi v. Walker, and Lord Abinger, C. B., treating it as doubtful, refused to interfere by injunction, but he reiterated his opinion on the general principle.

In the second case of Chappell v. Purday (14 M. & W. 303) the point actually decided was the same as in Clementi v. Walker. The Court said, that clearly a foreigner, first publishing abroad, could neither have nor confer a copyright here at common law or by the statute; and though admitting that the authorities pointed to a different conclusion, they added that they thought it doubtful whether a foreigner, not resident here, could have an English copyright at all. This doubt was the germ of the decision by the same Court in Boosey v. Purday.

In Cocks v. Purday (5 C. B. 860) the case came within the present Copyright Act, and after full argument it was decided that there was copyright in the work of an alien residing abroad, published here, contemporaneously with the publication abroad, by an English publisher, claiming under a verbal assignment from the author, which was valid according to the law of the place where it was made. The decision was expressly founded on the general principle, that an alien may acquire personal rights and maintain personal actions in respect of injuries to them in this country.

In Boosey v. Davidson (13 Jur., part 1, p. 678; 13 Q. B. 257) the case differed from that of Cocks v. Purday in not coming within the stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45. Bellini, being an alien, resident in the Austrian dominions, had assigned the copyright of his unpublished opera, "La Sonnambula," to Ricordi, an alien, also resident abroad. Ricordi, coming to London, assigned the copyright to Boosey, who published the work in London on the same day on which it was first published at Milan, but a few hours later—a circumstance which in Boosey v. Purday, mentioned below, the Court of Exchequer (overruling the decision of Pollock, C. B., at Nisi Prius, commented upon 12 Jur., part 2, p. 323) held to be immaterial. The publication was in 1831, so that the case was governed by the old Copyright Acts. It was fully argued, and the Court of Queen's Bench decided in favour of the copyright.

In Boosey v. Purday (13 Jur., part 1, p. 918; 4 Exch. 145) the work in question was Bellini's "Sonnambula," and the Court of Exchequer held that Boosey had no copyright.

In Ollendorf v. Black (14 Jur., part 1, p. 1080) an alien author domiciled abroad, but occasionally residing in England, first published his work in London in 1843, while residing there. On a motion for an injunction, it was urged that the author's temporary residence here distinguished the case from Boosey v. Purday, and the distinction was noticed by the judge, (Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, V. C.), who, however, expressed a strong opinion in favour of the doctrine in Cocks v. Purday. His Honor said, "Can any conclusion be imagined more injurious to literature than the decision in Boosey v. Purday? Surely literature is of no country, and the object of the act of Parliament was to protect literature generally."

The litigation commenced in Boosey v. Purday was continued (substantially between the same parties, for the persons chiefly interested in defeating the foreign copyright subscribed to the expenses of the defence) in Boosey v. Jefferys, (15 Jur., part 1, p. 540; 6 Exch. 580). There also the title to the music in "La Sonnambula" was in question; and Rolfe, B., having held at Nisi Prius against the copyright, his decision was unanimously reversed by the Court of Exchequer Chamber, (consisting of Lord Campbell, C. J., Patteson, Maule, Wightman, Cresswell, Erle, and Williams, JJ.)

Pending the appeal in Boosey v. Jefferys, the case of Buxton v. James (16 Jur., part 1, p. 15; 5 De G. & S. 80) was decided upon the effect of the stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45. The work in question was Mendelssohn's music to "The Midsummer Night's Dream," sold by the composer, an alien residing abroad, to the plaintiff, a publisher residing in London, and first published in London in 1844. Sir J. Parker, V. C., granted an injunction, observing that he never had any doubt on the subject.

Up to this point it appears that the authorities, with the single exception of Boosey v. Purday, are consistent with each other and with principle, and that the right of a foreigner residing abroad at the time of publication has been affirmed in four cases, two of them under the repealed statutes, and by the Court of Exchequer Chamber in Boosey v. Jefferys.

We now come to the ultimate decision in Boosey v. Jefferys. The opinions of Coleridge, Maule, Wightman, Erle, Williams, and Crompton, JJ., were in favour of the copyright. To this list we must add Lord Campbell, C. J., Patteson and Cresswell, JJ., who had joined in the decision in the Exchequer Chamber, and Wilde, C. J., and Coltman, J., who joined in deciding Cocks v. Purday, and Lord Abinger, Sir J. L. Knight Bruce, and Sir James Parker. The minority against the copyright consisted of Jervis, C. J., Pollock, C. B., Parke and Alderson, BB. The Peers who advised the reversal of the decision below were the Lord Chancellor, Lord Brougham, and Lord St. Leonards.

The Lord Chancellor distinguished between the right of the author of an unpublished work to prevent its publication, and the copyright which may subsist after publication. The latter, he said, is now entirely regulated by statute, and in determining its limits, we must look exclusively to the statutes on which it depends, which in the present case were the 8 Ann. c. 19, and the 54 Geo. 3, c. 156. The term "author" in the statute of Anne must refer to British authors only. Prima facie the Legislature of this country must be taken to make laws for its own subjects exclusively; and when an exclusive privilege is given to a particular class at the expense of the rest of the subjects, the object must be taken to have been national, and the privileged class to be confined to a portion of the community for the general advantage of which the enactment is made, including as subjects all persons within the Queen's dominions, though owing her only a temporary allegiance. A stranger having composed a work abroad, and coming here and publishing the first week or day of his arrival, would be within the act. Copyright commences at the moment of publication; and if the author is at that time in England, he is an English author. He is not an English author, if, being abroad and a foreigner, he publishes by an agent here. This construction agrees with the admitted condition, that the first publication must be here. There is no reason in that exception if the statute extends to foreigners at all. [Why not? It makes the place of first publication the test, not the status of the author. An English author residing here, and first publishing abroad, loses his copyright. Nothing can shew more clearly that the status of the author, who may be dead before any publication takes place, is absolutely immaterial.] His Lordship then reviewed the cases, but erred in stating that the decision in Chappell v. Purday (11 M. & W. 303) was adverse to the foreigner's title, and that the authorities were nearly equally balanced.

Lord Brougham denied the existence of a copyright at the common law, treating that question as entirely open and speculative, because it was not decided in Donaldson v. Beckett. As the existence of the common-law right, until it was repealed by the statute of Anne, is established by the authorities cited above, which have never been overruled, and was indeed assumed in the statute of Anne, his Lordship's argument is noticeable only as a curiosity. Its drift is to prove that the notion of literary property is impossible, or a logical contradiction, and therefore could not have been parcel of the common law, but required for its establishment the energy of the royal prerogative or of Parliament; for though neither God nor the common law can will a contradiction, the Queen or the Legislature, it seems, may.

"The negation of that right," said his Lordship, "only implies that we refuse to acknowledge a property in things by their nature incapable of being held in severalty, and that we recoil from adopting a position which involves contradiction."

Lord St. Leonards adopted and aggravated the old confusion of inventions in manufactures with literary works, with a view to shew that copyright could not have existed by the common law; adding, however, that a common-law recognition of copyright would not help a foreigner residing abroad. [Why not, as much as the recognition of any other kind of property or right? A., being a Roman in possession of a picture at Rome, assigns it there to B.; the picture never comes to B.'s possession, but is wrongfully converted by C., and brought to this country. Has not B. a remedy in our courts by the common law? What difference can it make that the chattel is incorporeal, if it be recognised as property by our law? The common law protects a man's character without inquiring whether he be native or alien, resident here or abroad. It is admitted that an author has by the common law a remedy against the pirate of his manuscript works. Has not an alien author such a remedy, or must he be in this country when the wrong is committed?] After repeating the proposition that a statute is intended only for the benefit of residents and subjects, his Lordship made the extravagant assertion that there was no authority of any weight on the point to be decided. We must quote the next passage, as an amusing instance of the mistakes to which even a great lawyer is liable when he undertakes to criticise at sight. The statute of Anne "is by no means scientifically framed, and singularly enough, in the very statement of it, one would hardly suppose what its object was, for it is stated, in the first place, that the object is to give to authors the right to copies. . . . The truth is, the copies, as copies, are vested in the authors without the assistance of Parliament at all." We must infer that his Lordship has taken the non-existence of adverse authorities on trust, for he cannot have read the reports of Millar v. Taylor, and the other copyright cases decided in George the Third's reign, without noticing the constant use of "copy" in the sense of pattern or mould, to express the exclusive right to make copies, of which phrase our present word "copyright" is a mere inversion. His Lordship admitted that a natural-born subject residing abroad might acquire a copyright here, because of his natural allegiance, which he could not shake off. But the act intended, that as to a foreign book, it must be first published here, first printed here, and the publication of it here must be personally superintended by the author. There being no common-law right in a foreigner, and the statute not applying to foreigners, quâ foreigners, a person must be a subject of the realm for the time being, at least, to have the benefit of the act. Bellini at Milan could have no copyright here under the Milanese law, nor under our law while he remained there. If he had no right in himself, he could assign none. What he assigned to Ricordi was the Milanese copyright. [It was all the right existing or obtainable anywhere in respect of the work assigned.] The assignment by Ricordi to Boosey was confined to publication in the United Kingdom, excluding other parts of the British dominions. Now, it is perfectly clear that copyright (as distinguished from the right to license) is indivisible. [This, if perfectly clear, is also perfectly new.] The assignment, therefore, being partial, would be void. [Why not good as a license? (See Sweet v. Cator, 5 Jur. 68; 11 Sim. 578; 17 Jur., part 2, p. 487).] The assignment to Ricordi was, at any rate, void for want of two witnesses. [This last objection is the only one of any weight. The statute of Anne (sect. 1) prohibited the printing or reprinting of any book without the consent of the proprietor first given in writing, attested by two witnesses—a prohibition which clearly extended to books in manuscript. From this it has been inferred, and is now settled law, that while that act was in force no assignment of copyright was valid without the attestation of two witnesses. (Davidson v. Bohn, 6 C. B. 456).]

The substance of the judgments may be thus recapitulated:—First, the question as to copyright under the repealed acts has nothing to do with the so-called copyright which an author is supposed to have before publication. Secondly, the repealed statutes only give copyright when the author is at the moment of publication either a British subject or a person within the British dominions. Thirdly, (per Lords Brougham and St. Leonards), there never was any copyright by the common law. Fourthly, (per Lord St. Leonards), an assignment of copyright limited to a part of the Queen's dominions is wholly void. Fifthly, (per Lord St. Leonards), an assignment of copyright under the repealed acts is void if it is not attested by two witnesses.

Some curious consequences flow from these propositions. Thus:—an English author assigns his copyright and dies before publication: the purchaser loses the copyright, for copyright does not exist and cannot be assigned before publication, and the author was neither a subject nor a resident at the time of publication. Again:—the author of a book first published abroad cannot have the benefit of the International Copyright Act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 12, unless he owes allegiance to the Queen at the time of making the prescribed entry; for that act expresses no intention to benefit persons who do not owe allegiance to the Queen.

Let us now see how these propositions (not one of which, however, is incontrovertible law, for the decision may be rested either on the second alone, on the fourth alone, or on the fifth alone) affect by analogy the construction of the existing Copyright Acts, under which it is settled, by authorities not yet overruled, (Cocks v. Purday, Buxton v. James, and the dictum in Ollendorf v. Black), that copyright may be acquired by the first publication in this country of the work of an alien who never comes here.

The dicta of Lords Brougham and St. Leonards denying the common-law right prior to the statutes, being unsupported by a single decision, and contradicted by many, may be disregarded. It is settled, first, that the author of a book has up to the time of publication the sole right to publish; secondly, that this right is perpetual, and transmissible to executors, (Queensbury v. Shebbeare, 2 Eden, 329; Webb v. Rose, 4 Burr. 2330; 3 Swanst. 674); and, thirdly, that being transmissible to executors, it is property, and assignable. Now, these are rights at the common law, and there is no pretence for saying that the common law has made a special exemption of literary property from its general recognition of the rights of property in an alien who resides abroad. If the unpublished work of an alien author were copied and published here without his consent, he would, while residing abroad, have the same remedies here as if he had been a British subject. An alien author, then, has in this country, independently of any statute, rights of property in respect of his unpublished work. Such rights are, of necessity, assignable, and being personal rights, assignable according to the law of the place where the assignment is made.

We now turn to the present Copyright Act, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45. It repeals the former acts, and expressly excludes the construction put upon them in Jefferys v. Boosey, by defining "copyright" to mean "the sole and exclusive liberty of printing or otherwise multiplying copies of any subject to which the said word is herein applied;" and "assigns" to mean and include "every person in whom the interest of an author in copyright shall be vested, whether derived from such author before or after the publication of any book, and whether acquired by sale, gift, bequest, or by operation of law, or otherwise." It then enacts, "that the copyright in every book which shall, after the passing of this act, be published in the lifetime of its author, shall endure for the natural life of such author, and for the further term of seven years, commencing at the time of his death, and shall be the property of such author and his assigns; provided that if the said term of seven years shall expire before the end of forty-two years from the first publication of such book, the copyright shall in that case endure for such period of forty-two years; and that the copyright in every book which shall be published after the death of its author shall endure for the term of forty-two years from the first publication thereof, and shall be the property of the proprietor of the author's manuscript from which such book shall be first published, and his assigns."

We have, then, this much clear—that a foreign author, resident abroad, has the exclusive right of multiplying copies of his unpublished work; that such right is a common-law copyright expressly recognised in, but not depending on or affected by, the present act, and is assignable; that the assignee before publication is expressly within the purview of the act; and therefore that even admitting the principle of the late decision to be applicable to the present act, an assignee, resident here, of the copyright of the unpublished work of an alien residing abroad, is within the act, and may acquire a copyright by first publishing here. The word "composed" occurs but once in the act. The expression throughout is "first publication;" except in the 17th section, which is founded on the prohibitory clauses in some of the repealed acts, (referred to in an article on this subject in 12 Jur., part 2, p. 322), and prohibits under penalties the unauthorised importation of copies "of any printed works first composed or written, or printed and published in any part of the United Kingdom, wherein there shall be copyright." Even as it stands, this 17th section does not extend to the work of an English author printed abroad but first published here, although there can be no doubt that there would be copyright in such a work.

But we contend further, that the rule of construction laid down in the late case does not exist, and will not be recognised hereafter; that the decision must be treated as an anomaly, only to be followed in cases identical in circumstances and governed by the same statutes. It is a clear principle that every person (not being by hostility or otherwise an outlaw) is entitled to the benefit of every rule of the common law and every enactment within the terms of which he can bring himself. Residence in this country, or allegiance to the Crown, has nothing to do with rights of property here, except in the cases specially provided for. Indeed, the contrary proposition, though it has been asserted in the highest court, will not bear a moment's examination. It would deprive non-resident foreigners of the benefit of almost every statute on the roll. There is scarcely an enactment giving or facilitating remedies in our courts, or providing for the protection of personal property, which makes any mention of foreigners; yet no one supposes that a person, bringing himself in all respects within the terms of any of these enactments, is beyond their scope, if he be an alien not resident here. Whatever rights in respect of personal property a British subject may acquire in this country, through an agent or otherwise, while he resides abroad, an alien friend may acquire, unless his alienage has been expressly made a disqualification. There are some rights which an alien, wherever domiciled or resident, cannot acquire; these are all the subjects of express statutory or common-law rules. There are other rights which depend upon domicile. There are others which, from the nature of things, can only be enjoyed by a person within the jurisdiction. But the notion of a class of rights to the acquisition of which alienage is no disqualification if the person is within the jurisdiction, and absence is no disqualification if the person is not an alien—rights which an agent can acquire for a native principal wherever he may be, and which an agent in London can acquire for an alien principal to-day if that principal happens to be in New Zealand, but cannot acquire for him if he sailed yesterday for New York—the notion of such a class of rights is peculiar to the judges who have decided Boosey v. Jefferys, and is not likely to be adopted in any different case.

The International Copyright Act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 12, s. 2, fortunately supplies a short demonstration ex absurdo of the inapplicability of the late decision to the existing statutes. That act enables the Queen, by order in Council, to direct, "that as respects all or any particular class or classes of the following works, namely, books, prints, articles of sculpture, and other works of art to be defined in such order, which shall after a future time to be specified in such order be first published in any foreign country to be named in such order, the authors thereof respectively, their respective executors, &c., shall have the privilege of copyright therein during such period or respective periods as shall be defined in such order, not exceeding" &c. This does not apply to any work first published in this country. It clearly does apply to the works of non-resident aliens. Now, if the construction in Jefferys v. Boosey is to be extended to the present Copyright Acts, this absurdity will follow—that under the convention with France, a French author, first publishing abroad, may acquire a British copyright without leaving France, but he cannot do so if he publish first in England.

We have, lastly, the 4th section of the Alien Act, 7 & 8 Vict. c. 66, which enacts,

"That from and after the passing of this act every alien, being the subject of a friendly state, shall and may take and hold, by purchase, gift, bequest, representation, or otherwise, every species of personal property, [copyright is, by the stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, s. 25, expressly declared to be personal property], except chattels real, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, and with the same rights, remedies, exemptions, privileges, and capacities, as if he were a natural-born subject of the United Kingdom."

This enactment is not unexceptionable in form. It is, in fact, merely declaratory of the common law, and should not have been expressed prospectively; but, however taken, it either condemns the decision in Jefferys v. Boosey, or confines it to cases which arose before the passing of the Alien Act.

It appears therefore:—

1. That the copyright of a foreigner residing abroad, and first publishing here after the 1st July, 1842, is established by the plain language of the statutes, and by two independent decisions.

2. That such right is not negated by a single decision or dictum.

3. That neither the decision in the recent case in the House of Lords, nor the reasons given for that decision, can in any way govern the construction of the statutes which are now in force.

The Queen has been pleased to direct letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal granting the dignity of a Baronet of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland unto John Beverley Robinson, Esq., C. B., Chief Justice of that part of her Majesty's province of Canada called Upper Canada; also unto Louis Hypolite Lafontaine, Esq., of the city of Montreal, Chief Justice of that part of her Majesty's province of Canada called Lower Canada, and to their heirs male lawfully begotten.

Sect. 1. Rents and Fines may be apportioned.

2. Parties to the Apportionment.

3. Jury may apportion.

4. Apportioned Rent to be recoverable by the same Remedies as the entire Rent.

5. How Sums secured by Way of Insurance, &c. may be apportioned.

6. Act to extend to Cases where Part of Hereditaments are included in Leases, &c.

7. Act to extend to Contracts for Leases.

8. Acts herein referred to.

Be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. If any hereditaments to be acquired for any of the purposes of any of the Church Building Acts are included in a lease or underlease with any other hereditaments, the rent reserved by such lease or underlease, and any fine certain to be paid on any renewals thereof, may be apportioned between the hereditaments so to be acquired and the remainder of the hereditaments, or may be wholly charged on such remainder, in exoneration of the hereditaments so to be acquired.

2. Such apportionment or exoneration may be effected by the parties respectively having power to assign or convey the leasehold interest, and to assign or convey the reversion expectant on such leasehold interest, in the hereditaments so to be acquired.

3. In cases where the value of the hereditaments to be acquired is to be ascertained by a jury, the jury may also apportion any such rent or fine as aforesaid.

4. On the acquiring as aforesaid of any hereditaments included with other hereditaments in a lease or underlease, or leases or underleases as aforesaid, the rent or apportioned rent by any such apportionment or exoneration expressed to be made payable out of the hereditaments which shall not be acquired as aforesaid, and out of the hereditaments which shall be so acquired respectively, shall be recoverable, as regards such hereditaments respectively, by the same remedies by which before such acquiring the rent reserved by the lease or underlease was recoverable out of the whole of the hereditaments therein comprised; and all the covenants, conditions, and agreements in such lease or underlease contained, as well those relating to rent as others, so far as regards the part acquired and the residue not acquired as aforesaid respectively of the hereditaments comprised in such lease or underlease, shall continue and shall subsist upon and against and with regard to such part so acquired and such residue respectively, in like manner as if such part or residue only had been originally comprised in such lease or underlease; and in case such lease or underlease shall contain provisions for renewal upon payment of a fine certain, such provisions for renewal shall apply to the part acquired and the residue not acquired as aforesaid respectively of the hereditaments comprised in such lease or underlease, in the same manner as if such part or residue only had been originally comprised in such lease or underlease, and the fine certain to be paid on any renewal had been the fine certain which in the exoneration or apportionment shall be expressed to be payable in respect of the same hereditaments.

5. Sums of money to be secured by way of insurance, and all other sums of money or other payments or services, may be apportioned or exclusively charged in the same manner, and with the same effects in all respects, as are herein provided with respect to the apportionment or exclusive charge of rent.

6. The provisions of this act extend to all cases where a part of the hereditaments included in any lease or underlease is to be acquired for the purposes of any of the Church Building Acts, although no apportionment of or exoneration from rent may take place, by reason that no rent, or a rent only nominal, is reserved by the lease or underlease.

7. The provisions of this act relate to contracts for leases and underleases as well as to leases and underleases.

8. The acts herein referred to as the Church Building Acts are, the act of the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, "to amend the Church Building Acts," and the acts in that act enumerated as the Church Building Acts, and also the act of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, "to make better provision for the spiritual care of populous parishes."

CAP. XXXIII.

An Act to place Public Statutes within the Metropolitan Police District under the Control of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings.

[10th July, 1854.]

CAP. XXXIV.

An Act to enable the Courts of Law in England, Ireland, and Scotland to issue Process to compel the Attendance of Witnesses out of their Jurisdiction, and to give Effect to the Service of such Process in any Part of the United Kingdom.

[10th July, 1854.]

Sect. 1. Courts of Law in England, Ireland, and Scotland may issue Process to compel the Attendance of Witnesses, although not within their Jurisdiction.

2. Statement to be made at Foot of Writ that it is issued by special Order,

3. Witnesses making Default to be punished by the Courts of the Country in which the Process was served.

4. Persons not to be punished if it shall appear that sufficient Money has not been tendered to pay Expenses.

5. Act not to prevent the issuing of a Commission to examine Witnesses.

6. Not to affect the Admissibility of Evidence where now receivable.

Whereas great inconvenience arises in the administration of justice from the want of a power in the superior courts of law to compel the attendance of witnesses resident in one part of the United Kingdom at a trial in another part, and the examination of such witnesses by commission is not in all cases a sufficient remedy for such inconvenience: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. If in any action or suit now or at any time hereafter depending in any of her Majesty's superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster or Dublin, or the Court of Session or Exchequer in Scotland, it shall appear to the Court in which such action is pending, or, if such Court is not sitting, to any judge of any of the said courts respectively, that it is proper to compel the personal attendance at any trial of any witness who may not be within the jurisdiction of the Court in which such action is pending, it shall be lawful for such court or judge, if in his or their discretion it shall so seem fit, to order that a writ, called a writ of subpoena ad testificandum, or of subpoena duces tecum, or warrant of citation, shall issue in special form, commanding such witness to attend such trial, wherever he shall be within the United Kingdom, and the service of any such writ or process in any part of the United Kingdom shall be as valid and effectual, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been served within the jurisdiction of the Court from which it issues.

2. Every such writ shall have at foot thereof a statement or notice that the same is issued by the special order of the court or judge, as the case may be; and no such writ shall issue without such special order.

3. In case any person so served shall not appear, according to the exigency of such writ or process, it shall be lawful for the Court out of which the same issued, upon proof made of the service thereof, and of such default, to the satisfaction of the said Court, to transmit a certificate of such default, under the seal of the same Court, or under the hand of one of the judges or justices of the same, to any of her Majesty's superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster, in case such service was had in England; or in case such service was had in Scotland, to the Court of Session or Exchequer at Edinburgh; or in case such service was had in Ireland, to any of her Majesty's superior Courts of Common Law at Dublin; and the Court to which such certificate is so sent shall and may thereupon proceed against and punish the person so having made default, in like manner as they might have done if such person had neglected or refused to appear in obedience to a writ of subpoena or other process issued out of such last-mentioned court.

4. None of the said Courts shall in any case proceed against or punish any person for having made default by not appearing to give evidence in obedience to any writ of subpoena or other process issued under the powers given by this act, unless it shall be made to appear to such Court that a reasonable and sufficient sum of money to defray the expenses of coming and attending to give evidence, and of returning from giving such evidence, had been tendered to such person at the time when such writ of subpoena or process was served upon such person.

5. Nothing herein contained shall alter or affect the power of any of such Courts to issue a commission for the examination of witnesses out of their jurisdiction, in any case in which, notwithstanding this act, they shall think fit to issue such commission.

6. Nothing herein contained shall alter or affect the admissibility of any evidence at any trial where such evidence is now by law receivable, on the ground of any witness being beyond the jurisdiction of the Court, but the admissibility of all such evidence shall be determined as if this act had not passed.

CAP. XXXV.

An Act to repeal certain Provisions of an Act of the fifth and sixth Years of her present Majesty, concerning the holding of Assizes for the County of Warwick.

[10th July, 1854.]

CAP. XXXVI.

An Act for preventing Frauds upon Creditors by secret Bills of Sale of personal Chattels.

[10th July, 1854.]

Sect. 1. Bills of Sale to be void, unless the same or a Copy thereof be filed within twenty-one Days, in like Manner as Warrants of Attorney.

2. Defeasance or Condition of every Bill of Sale to be written on the same Paper or Parchment.

3. Officer of Court to keep a Book containing Particulars of each Bill of Sale.

4. Officer entitled to a Fee of 1s. for filing Bill of Sale, and to account for the same.

5. Office Copies or Extracts to be given on paying as for Copies of Judgments.

6. Satisfaction may be entered.

7. Interpretation of Terms.

8. Extent of Act.

Whereas frauds are frequently committed upon creditors by secret bills of sale of personal chattels, whereby persons are enabled to keep up the appearance of being in good circumstances and possessed of property, and the grantees or holders of such bills of sale have the power of taking possession of the property of such persons, to the exclusion of the rest of their creditors: for remedy whereof, be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. Every bill of sale of personal chattels made after the passing of this act, either absolutely or conditionally, or subject or not subject to any trusts, and whereby the grantee or holder shall have power, either with or without notice, and either immediately after the making of such bill of sale or at any future time, to seize or take possession of any property and effects comprised in or made subject to such bill of sale, and every schedule or inventory which shall be thereto annexed or therein referred to, or a true copy thereof, and of every attestation of the execution thereof, shall, together with an affidavit of the time of such bill of sale being made or given, and a description of the residence and occupation of the person making or giving the same, or in case the same shall be made or given by any person under or in the execution of any process, then a description of the residence and occupation of the person against whom such process shall have issued, and of every attesting witness to such bill of sale, be filed with the officer acting as clerk of the docket and judgments in the Court of Queen's Bench within twenty-one days after the making or giving of such bill of sale, (in like manner as a warrant of attorney in any personal action given by a trader is now by law required to be filed), otherwise such bill of sale shall, as against all assignees of the estate and effects of the person whose goods, or any of them, are comprised in such bill of sale under the laws relating to bankruptcy or insolvency, or under any assignment for the benefit of the creditors of such person, and as against all sheriffs' officers and other persons seizing any property or effects comprised in such bill of sale in the execution of any process of any court of law or equity authorising the seizure of the goods of the person by whom or of whose goods such bill of sale shall have been made, and against every person on whose behalf such process shall have been issued, be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever, so far as regards the property in or right to the possession of any personal chattels comprised in such bill of sale, which at or after the time of such bankruptcy, or of filing the insolvent's petition in such insolvency, or of the execution by the debtor of such assignment for the benefit of his creditors, or of executing such process, (as the case may be), and after the expiration of the said period of twenty-one days, shall be in the possession or apparent possession of the person making such bill of sale, or of any person against whom the process shall have issued, under or in the execution of which such bill of sale shall have been made or given, as the case may be.

2. If such bill of sale shall be made or given subject to any defeasance or condition or declaration of trust not contained in the body thereof, such defeasance or condition or declaration of trust shall, for the purposes of this act, be taken as part of such bill of sale, and shall be written on the same paper or parchment on which such bill of sale shall be written, before the time when the same or a copy thereof respectively shall be filed, otherwise such bill of sale shall be null and void to all intents and purposes, as against the same persons and as regards the same property and effects, as if such bill of sale or a copy thereof had not been filed according to the provisions of this act.

3. The said officer of the said Court of Queen's Bench shall cause every bill of sale, and every such schedule and inventory as aforesaid, and every such copy filed in his said office under the provisions of this act, to be numbered, and shall keep a book or books in his said office, in which he shall cause to be fairly entered an alphabetical list of every such bill of sale, containing therein the name, addition, and description of the person making or giving the same, or in case the same shall be made or given by any person under or in the execution of process as aforesaid, then the name, addition, and description of the person against whom such process shall have issued, and also of the person to whom or in whose favour the same shall have been given, together with the number, and the dates of the execution and filing of the same, and the sum for which the same has been given, and the time or times (if any) when the same is thereby made payable, according to the form contained in the schedule to this act, which said book or books, and every bill of sale or copy thereof filed in the said office, may be searched and viewed by all persons at all reasonable times, paying to the officer for every search against one person the sum of 6d., and no more; and that, in addition to the last mentioned book, the said officer of the said Court of Queen's Bench shall keep another book or index, in which he shall cause to be fairly inserted, as and when such bills of sale are filed in manner aforesaid, the name, addition, and description of the person making or giving the same, or of the person against whom such process shall have issued, as the case may be, and also of the persons to whom or in whose favour the same shall have been given, but containing no further particulars thereof; which last-mentioned book or index all persons shall be permitted to search for themselves, paying to the officer for such last-mentioned search the sum of 1s.

4. The said officer shall be entitled to receive, for his trouble in filing and entering every such bill of sale or a copy thereof as aforesaid, the sum of 1s., and no more; and such officer shall render a like account to the commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, and the said commissioners shall have the like powers in every particular with respect to such account, and the amount of remuneration of such officer, and with respect to any surplus of the fees received by him, as is provided by the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 75, with respect to the officers of the Court of Common Pleas therein mentioned.

5. Any person shall be entitled to have an office copy or an extract of every bill of sale, or of the copy thereof filed as aforesaid, upon paying for the same at the like rate as for office copies of judgments in the said Court of Queen's Bench.

6. It shall be lawful for any judge of the said Court of Queen's Bench to order a memorandum of satisfaction to be written upon any bill of sale or copy thereof respectively as aforesaid, if it shall appear to him that the debt (if any) for which such bill of sale is given as security shall have been satisfied or discharged.

7. In construing this act the following words and expressions shall have the meanings hereby assigned to them, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such constructions; (that is to say)—

The expression "bill of sale" shall include bills of sale, assignments, transfers, declarations of trust without transfer, and other assurances of personal chattels, and also powers of attorney, authorities, or licenses to take possession of personal chattels as security for any debt, but shall not include the following documents; that is to say, assignments for the benefit of the creditors of the person making or giving the same; marriage settlements; transfers or assignments of any ship or vessel, or any share thereof; transfers of goods in the ordinary course of business of any trade or calling; bills of sale of goods in foreign parts or at sea; bills of lading; India warrants; warehouse keepers' certificates; warrants or orders for the delivery of goods, or any other documents used in the ordinary course of business as proof of the possession or control of goods, or authorising or purporting to authorise, either by indorsement or by delivery, the possessor of such document to transfer or receive goods thereby represented:

The expression "personal chattels" shall mean goods, furniture, fixtures, and other articles capable of complete transfer by delivery, and shall not include chattel interests in real estate, nor shares or interests in the stock, funds, or securities of any government, or in the capital or property of any incorporated or joint-stock company, nor choses in action, nor any stock or produce upon any farm or lands which by virtue of any covenant or agreement, or of the custom of the country, ought not to be removed from any farm where the same shall be at the time of the making or giving of such bill of sale:

Personal chattels shall be deemed to be in the "apparent possession" of the person making or giving the bill of sale, so long as they shall remain or be in or upon any house, mill, warehouse, building, works, yard, land, or other premises occupied by him, or as they shall be used and enjoyed by him in any place whatsoever, notwithstanding that formal possession thereof may have been taken by or given to any other person.

8. This act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 23, 1854.

THE 79th section of the Common-law Procedure Act (see ante, p. 319) seems to be intended to include all that class of cases which are termed, in equity, injunctions against wrongful acts of a special nature. The particular sub-divisions of the class in which the equity has been administered are, waste, copyright, patents, secret inventions, and the use of the name or trade-mark of others, nuisance, breach of contract, which includes breach of duty as between partners, and breach of parliamentary contract, that is, departure by bodies acting under parliamentary powers, from the strict limit of their powers. There are other cases falling under the general head of wrongful acts restrainable, but the above constitute the family of such cases generally, and a tolerably large family it is to be handed over, by one short section of an act, from equity to the concurrent jurisdiction of law. We say the concurrent jurisdiction, because there is nothing in the act to oust the jurisdiction of equity, and it will be still open to any party aggrieved, to lay his complaint before a Court of equity, though he may also, if he likes, lay it before a Court of law.

As we presume that, the jurisdiction being equitable in its nature, the Courts of law will apply it in conformity with the general principles followed by Courts of equity, it will become necessary for common-law practitioners to inform themselves upon those principles more minutely than they will have hitherto found necessary in the acquisition of merely general professional knowledge; and we propose from time to time, if other more weighty subjects of inquiry do not prevent it, to offer a few remarks of a practical nature on this subject.

The first principle to be borne in mind in determining the application of equitable interference against acts of a wrongful nature is, that the plaintiff is expected to shew a balance of probability that he has—that is, that he will ultimately establish—a legal title. It is not because B. is doing something of which A. complains, and which he suggests is a wrong, that an injunction would be granted. A. must shew that he either has an established legal title, or that he has enjoyed it so long unmolested that a presumption is in favour of it; or that, on the face of the matters before the Court, the Court will, using that degree of knowledge of pure law, as distinguished from equity, which no accomplished equity judge can reasonably disclaim, see that the legal presumption of a legal title in the plaintiff is strong. On these principles it is that in cases of patent rights, the Court never grants an injunction at once, if the patent is of very recent creation, and the defendant disputes its validity; and that, on the contrary, it grants an injunction, even in the face of some material doubt, if the user of the patent, without challenge, has been long and uninterrupted. So it is on these principles that in copyright cases, as the jurisdiction on subjects of this nature is assumed merely for the purpose of making effectual the legal right, which cannot be made effectual by an action for damages, a Court of equity acts to make the legal right effectual, by preventing the publication altogether; and accordingly, in the exercise of that jurisdiction, where a fair doubt appears as to the plaintiff's legal right, will always direct it to be tried, making some provision in the interim, the best that can be made, for the benefit of both parties. (See 17 Ves. 424).

Another leading principle of equity is, that as there never can be a dispute as to the right of the plaintiff to prevent the defendant from doing what the plaintiff terms a wrongful act, without the possibility, or at least without the Court being bound to assume the possibility, that the plaintiff may be himself wrong; and as the Court of equity interferes, not to decide the right, but to prevent injury to the property or right claimed pending the litigation; it looks at the circumstances of both parties, and balances the injury which may result to the defendant from the granting of an injunction, if he should in the event prove right, against that which may result to the plaintiff from withholding it, if he should in the event prove right. On this ground it is, that, as between individuals and public companies, the Court has frequently granted or refused an injunction, where, upon the principle first enunciated, strictly followed, it would probably have done quite the reverse of what it has done. Thus is explained the case of The Attorney-General v. The Corporation of Liverpool, (1 My. & C. 171). In that case there was a strong equity for an injunction, the Legislature having fastened on property a trust to come into operation at a future day, and the defendants seeking to deal with the property as if they were absolute owners. There was some doubt whether the particular acts sought to be done were or not within the act of Parliament; but that doubt would, according to the general principle, certainly not have prevented an injunction; but the acts intended would not, it appeared, have done any substantial injury to the property; and if they were not done within a given time, they could not be done at all. The result was, that if the defendants were right, and they were prevented from doing the acts intended, they lost their right wholly; while, if the plaintiffs were right, they suffered no substantial infraction of their rights by the doing of the acts; and the Court, therefore, refused an injunction.

On the same principle it is that the Court of Chancery has always, especially of late years, been very cautious in granting injunctions in matters of patent right. Because if the defendant is wrong, being put to keep an account, the plaintiff can, in general, be recouped for the loss he may have sustained; whereas, if the defendant is right, then by being enjoined, not only he may lose entirely his position and opportunity, but he must lose a considerable portion of his trade. But for the very same reason, if the invention affects a trade in which it is very difficult for the plaintiff to have the benefit of a substantial account, the Court will lean more strongly to an injunction, pending the trial of the legal right.

The Right Hon. Sir John Jervis, Knt., Lord Chief Justice of her Majesty's Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, has appointed Francis James Coleridge, of Ottery St. Mary, Devonshire, Gent., to be one of the Perpetual Commissioners for taking the acknowledgments of deeds to be executed by married women, in and for the county of Devon.

Whereas certain friendly societies were established and inrolled under the acts passed in the 10 Geo. 4, c. 56, and the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 40, relating to friendly societies, or under one of them; and whereas the scope and operation of friendly societies since the passing of the said acts have been limited by law in respect to the amount for which policies of assurance payable on the death of members of such societies may be granted; but some of the said societies, established as aforesaid, and which grant or effect policies of assurance payable on death, have not been so limited, and such last-mentioned societies have therefore been excluded the benefit of certain provisions and privileges made for and granted to friendly societies in respect to exemption from stamp duties and otherwise; and it is desirable that there should be special provisions made with respect to such of the said societies so excepted and excluded as aforesaid: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act shall relate to and include such of the said societies only as grant and effect policies of assurance payable at death exceeding the sum of 1000*l.*; and from and after the passing of this act the said societies shall cease to be friendly societies, and shall not be affected by the provisions of any act passed in the present or any future session of Parliament relating to friendly societies, unless therein expressly named.

2. The several provisions contained in the acts relating to friendly societies which were wholly or in part in force on the first day of this present session of Parliament with respect to the societies intended to be affected and provided for by this act, save and except the 37th and 51st sections of the act of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 115, shall, so far as they now affect such societies, remain and be in force and unrepealed with respect to the said societies, except as is hereinafter provided.

3. No exemption from any of the duties granted by any act or acts relating to stamp duties shall, from and after the passing of this act, extend or be construed to extend to any of the societies intended to be affected and provided for by this act; and it shall not be lawful for such societies, after the passing of this act, to assure the payment of any money on the death of any member or person whomsoever to any nominee of such member or person, but only to the person or persons effecting and contracting for any assurance with the said societies respectively, or to his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns.

4. The societies intended to be affected and provided for by this act may carry on, transact, and effect all the business and purposes which have been from time to time and are duly specified in and allowed by the enrolled or certified rules of the said societies respectively, and also may grant, make, or effect all such assurances on lives, survivorships, contingencies, and events dependent on or connected with life or otherwise as may by law be made or effected, and may make such new rules or alterations in rules as shall not be repugnant to law, without being required to submit the same to the Registrar of Friendly Societies, and shall not be required to transmit to such registrar any statement or return of sickness or mortality or of assets or liabilities.

5. The trustees of the several societies intended to be affected and provided for by this act may from time to time lay out and invest the funds of such societies, as well in the manner and upon the stocks, funds, and securities which are now authorised by law with regard to such societies, as also in or upon Exchequer bonds and bills, and any stocks, funds, or securities guaranteed by the Government of Great Britain, and bonds of the city of London, or on mortgage, or in the purchase of any reversionary, contingent, or other estate or interest in any freehold, leasehold, or copyhold property in Great Britain or Ireland, or of any such estate or interest, in any of the stocks, funds, or securities hereinbefore mentioned and referred to respectively, or of any such estate or interest in any sum or sums of money secured upon any such real and personal estate as aforesaid, or upon the security of any rates, tolls, duties, assessments, bonds, stocks, debentures, or other securities of any persons, body, or company authorised by act of Parliament, charter, or otherwise to be raised, levied, or mortgaged, and also upon security of any life policy or policies, although the amount of the loan may exceed the then present value thereof, provided the premiums on such policy or policies and the interest of the loan be collaterally secured by or upon some of the securities hereinbefore mentioned, and shall and may from time to time vary and transpose the said securities so purchased, and sell the same respectively.

6. All powers and provisions of any act or acts of Parliament for ordering and enforcing the attendance of witnesses before an arbitrator under any reference made a rule of court, and for punishing disobedience to any such order, shall apply to any arbitration of any difference or dispute under or pursuant to the rules of any of the societies intended to be affected and provided for by this act, for which purpose a copy of the resolution of the board of directors, or committee or board of management of any such society, authorising such reference, signed by the chairman, or any director, or the secretary of such society, may be made a rule of any of her Majesty's Courts at Westminster.

7. The trustees for the time being of any society intended to be affected and provided for by this act may from time to time, with the consent of the board of directors, or board or committee of management thereof, purchase, hire, or take upon lease, and adapt and furnish, any buildings for the purpose of holding the meetings and transacting the business of such society, and shall hold the same in trust for the use of such society, and may, with such consent as aforesaid, mortgage, sell, exchange, or let the same or any part thereof; and the receipt in writing of such trustees shall be a valid and legal discharge for the money arising from any such mortgage, sale, exchange, or lease, and for any other monies payable to them by virtue of this act; and no purchaser, mortgagee, lessee, assignee, or other person shall be bound to ascertain or show whether any such consent shall have been given as aforesaid, or be answerable for the misapplication or non-application of the monies in any such receipt expressed to be received, or be bound to see to the application thereof: provided always, that any building which now belongs to any such society may be held and dealt with in the same manner as if it had been acquired under or by virtue of this act.

8. It shall not be lawful for the trustees of any friendly society coming under the provisions of this act to make any investment of the funds of such society either in a savings bank or with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt: provided always, that where the funds, or any part thereof, of any such friendly society shall be invested in a savings bank or with the said commissioners, such funds shall be withdrawn from such savings bank or from the said commissioners by the said trustees within the space of twelve months after the passing of this act, if required by the said commissioners.

9. In citing this act in other acts of Parliament, and in legal proceedings and instruments, it shall be sufficient to use the expression "The Friendly Societies Discharge Act, 1854."

10. This act shall extend to Great Britain and Ireland, and the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, and Man.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.

PRESIDENT.—ANTHONY HUDSON, Esq., Banker.
VICE-PRESIDENT.—Lieut.-General Sir ROBT. JOHN HARVEY, C.B.
It is provided by the constitution of the Society that the insured shall be free from all responsibility; and to guarantee the engagements of the office, a fund of 550,000l. has been subscribed by a numerous and opulent proprietary, which fund has been further increased by the accumulation of an additional reserve, now amounting to 96,800l. Returns of three-fifths of the profits of the Company are periodically made to parties insuring, who have thus from time to time received from the Society sums amounting in the aggregate to nearly 380,000l.

The rates of premium are in no case higher than those charged by the other principal offices making no returns to their insurers.

The business of the Company exceeds 62,000,000l., and, owing to the liberality with which its engagements have been performed, is rapidly increasing. The duty paid to Government for the year 1852 was 74,037l. 9s. 11d.; and the amount insured on farming stock was upwards of 9,066,080l.

For Prospectuses apply at the Society's Offices, 6, Crescent, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars; and Surrey-street, Norwich.

LONDON, SEPTEMBER 30, 1854.

In continuing our review of the statutes of practical importance passed during the last session, we come to one for the suppression of gaming-houses, (17 & 18 Vict. c. 38), which has been in force since the 1st August last. Owing to the dexterity with which the implements of gaming were disposed of before the police could enter the room, the former law, requiring that they should be found on the premises, had become a dead letter, and it is consequently now enacted that any person who wilfully obstructs or endeavours to obstruct the entrance of an officer authorised to enter gaming-houses shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding 100*l.*, or to imprisonment for six months; and if such officer be obstructed, or the means of obstruction, or the instruments of gaming, or means for concealing or destroying the same, be found on the premises, it shall be prima facie evidence of the place being a common gaming-house, and of the persons found there having been unlawfully playing. (Sects. 1, 2). Any person found therein refusing to give his name and address, or giving a false one, is liable to a penalty not exceeding 50*l.*, or a month's imprisonment. (Sect. 3). The owner, occupier, or keeper of the place using it for the purpose of unlawful gaming, or knowing it to be so used, or advancing money for such purpose, may, on conviction before two justices, be adjudged to pay a penalty not exceeding 500*l.*, or to be imprisoned for twelve months, with or without hard labour. (Sect. 4). The wording of this and other sections shews how carefully the Legislature have to deal with the class of persons against whom the act is directed, so as to prevent escape from its provisions. In furtherance of the object of the act, persons found in a place entered under a warrant or order (granted by virtue of the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109) may be required to be examined on oath touching unlawful gaming in the house, or obstructing the entry of the officers, and shall not be excused from answering on the ground that their evidence may criminate themselves, and may be committed for contempt if they will not be sworn or answer. If, however, they make a true and faithful discovery, to the best of their knowledge, they are to receive a certificate to that effect, which will indemnify them against proceedings. (Sect. 6). The remaining sections (sects. 7—15) relate to the mode of enforcing and appropriating the penalties, the substitution of an informer (if necessary) for the one who laid the information, the giving an appeal, the taking away of the certiorari, and the protection of persons acting under the act.

Ecclesiastical Courts, (17 & 18 Vict. c. 47).—Witnesses may be summoned and examined herein viva voce as well as by deposition, and notes of such evidence shall be taken down in writing by some officer of the court or person directed by the court to do so.

Admiralty Courts.—It was lately decided in Reg. v. Stone (17 Jur., part 1, p. 1106) that commissioners to administer oaths in Chancery had no power to administer oaths in the High Court of Admiralty, although it had long been the practice to do so, and therefore that perjury could not be assigned on an oath so taken. This is now altered, and further provision is made for the taking of oaths in that court. (17 & 18 Vict. c. 78, ss. 3—12). The remaining sections (sects.

13—23) relate to the procedure in the court, and to the payment of fees by stamps.

Friendly Societies are again legislated for by two statutes, (17 & 18 Vict. c. 58, 101). The former relates only to such as grant policies of assurance payable at death for sums exceeding 1000*l.*, which are no longer to be friendly societies, nor to be affected by acts passed in the last or in future sessions relating thereto. No exemption from stamp duties is to extend to such societies, and they are not to assure in favour of nominees, but only of the person assuring, or his executors, administrators, or assigns; but they may effect the objects allowed by their rules, and all legal assurances. Provision is made for the investment of the funds of such societies, but they are not to invest in savings banks, or with the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt; they may purchase and hold buildings for offices; the attendance of witnesses before arbitrators under their rules may be enforced. The act is to extend to Great Britain and Ireland, and the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, and Man, and may be cited as "The Friendly Societies Discharge Act, 1854." (Sects. 1—10).

The second act merely continues stat. 13 & 14 Vict. c. 115, and enacts, that all transcripts of the rules of friendly societies, now filed with the rolls of the sessions of the peace, shall be taken off the file and sent to the registrars, who shall keep the same, as directed by one of the Secretaries of State.

Parliament.—Sheriffs of counties are to be returning officers for parliamentary electors in boroughs situate in such counties where the office of returning officer is vacant. (17 & 18 Vict. c. 57).

The laws relating to bribery, treating, and undue influence at parliamentary elections are consolidated and amended by the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, which, however, is to be in force only for one year. (Sect. 39). By this act, bribery, treating, and undue influence are defined, and their penal consequences declared. Payments made by a candidate or his agent for cockades, ribbons, or other mark of distinction, or for chairing, bands of music, or flags or banners, at an election, are declared to be illegal. (Sects. 1—7). Voters are not compellable to serve as special constables at elections. (Sect. 8). No indictment for bribery or undue influence is to be tried at quarter sessions. (Sect. 10). Auditors of election expenses are to be annually appointed. Persons having claims on a candidate in respect of elections must send in their bills to such candidates or their agents within a month from the day of the declaration of the election, otherwise their claims are to be barred. In case of the death of the creditor the time is extended. The bills are to be sent by the candidates to the election auditor, through whom payment is to be made, and who is to publish an abstract of the accounts in some newspaper of the county or borough. The candidate, however, may pay his own personal expenses, and the expenses of advertising. No refreshment, or money or ticket to obtain it, is to be given to any voter, by the candidates or their agents, on the day of nomination or day of polling, under a penalty of 2*l.* for each offence. Before the nomination each candidate is to give to the election auditor in writing the names of his agents, who alone are to have authority to expend money or incur expenses on his behalf. Among the acts repealed is stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 37, which disqualified persons employed at an election, as counsel, attorney, agent, or in any other capacity, from voting. (Sects. 15—34).

The prevention of cruelty to animals is sought to be rendered more effectual by the stat. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 60, whereby every person impounding or confining any animal, and supplying it with food and water, may recover from the owner not exceeding double the value of such food and water, or after seven clear days may sell the animal openly at any public market (after three days' public printed notice thereof) for the best price, and pay himself the expenses of the sale out of the proceeds, rendering the surplus (if any) to the owner. (Sect. 1). No person after the 1st January, 1855, is to use any dog for the purpose of drawing a cart, carriage, truck, or barrow on any public highway in any part of the United Kingdom, under a penalty of 40*s.* "Animal" is to mean any domestic animal, whether a quadruped or not. (Sects. 2, 3).

CAP. LXXV.

An Act to remove Doubts concerning the due Acknowledgment of Deeds by Married Women in certain Cases.

[7th August, 1854.]

- Sect. 1. Acknowledgment of Deed not impeachable by reason only of Party before whom same was taken being interested.
2. Staying Proceedings for quashing Certificate of Acknowledgment.
3. Court of Common Pleas may make Rules for preventing Commissioners who are interested from taking Acknowledgments.

Whereas by the act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, "for the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries, and for the Substitution of more simple Modes of Assurance," it is provided that every deed to be executed by a married woman for any of the purposes thereof, except such as may be executed by her in the character of protector, for the sole purpose of giving her consent to the disposition of a tenant in tail, shall, upon her executing the same or afterwards, be produced and acknowledged by her as her act and deed before a judge of one of the superior courts at Westminster, or a master in Chancery, or before two of the perpetual commissioners, or two special commissioners to be respectively appointed as therein provided, and a certificate of the taking of such acknowledgment is thereby directed to be lodged with some officer of the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, who is directed, after satisfying himself that the requisitions of the said act have been complied with in manner therein mentioned, to cause the said certificate to be filed of record in the said Court of Common Pleas: and whereas it is apprehended that deeds executed by married women under the provisions of the said act may be liable to be invalidated by the circumstance that the judge, or master in Chancery, or one or both of the commissioners, taking the acknowledgment, may be or may have been interested or concerned, either as a party or otherwise, in the transaction giving occasion for such acknowledgment, and it is not expedient that deeds executed in good faith under such circumstances should be invalidated: he it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. No deed which has been acknowledged or which shall hereafter be acknowledged by a married woman before a judge of one of the superior courts of Westminster, or a master in Chancery, or before two of the perpetual commissioners, or two special commissioners appointed as by the said act is required, shall be impeached or impeachable, at any time after the certificate of such acknowledgment has been filed of record in the Court of Common Pleas at Westminster, by reason only that such judge, or master in Chancery, or such commissioner, or either of them, was or were interested or concerned, either as a party or parties, or as attorney or solicitor, or clerk to the attorney or solicitor of one of the parties, or otherwise, in the transaction giving occasion for such acknowledgment.

2. Provided, that if any proceeding instituted before the 13th July, 1854, in the said Court of Common Pleas, for the purpose of quashing, or taking off the file of records of the said court, any certificate of an acknowledgment of a deed by a married woman, on the ground that such judge, or master in Chancery, or either of such commissioners, was interested or concerned as aforesaid, shall be pending at the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for the said Court to proceed with and dispose of the same as if this act had not passed, except that

If the said Court shall be satisfied that any person or persons acting bonâ fide has or have been induced by the terms of the orders made by the said Court in Hilary Term, 1834, to acknowledge, or to accept a title depending on the acknowledgment of, any deed or deeds before commissioners, one of whom may have been interested or concerned as aforesaid, the said Court may refuse to permit the certificate to be quashed or taken off the file, on such terms as to the payment of costs and expenses as the said Court shall think fit to make.

3. The Court of Common Pleas may from time to time make any rules which to them may seem fit for preventing any commissioners interested or concerned as aforesaid from taking any acknowledgment under the said recited act, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding, so nevertheless that no such rule shall make invalid any acknowledgment after the certificate shall have been filed of record as aforesaid.

CAP. LXXVII.

An Act to provide for the Mode of passing Letters-patent and other Acts of the Crown relating to India, and for vesting certain Powers in the Governor-General of India in Council. [7th August, 1854.]

- Sect. 1. Warrants, &c. under Royal Sign-manual relating to India to be countersigned by President of Board of Control.
2. If Office of President vacant, then by Secretary of State.
3. The immediate Government of any Part of the Indian Territories may be vested in the Governor-General of India in Council.
4. Governor-General may limit the Powers of Governors herein named.
5. Powers of Governor-General as Governor of Bengal transferred to the Governor of India in Council.
6. Past Acts declared valid.
7. Interpretation.
8. Act to be construed with the 16 & 17 Vict. c. 95.

Whereas doubts may arise as to the mode of passing letters-patent and other acts of the Crown relating to India in certain cases where her Majesty's pleasure is to be signified under her royal sign-manual, and it is expedient to remove such doubts, and to provide an uniform mode of proceeding in such cases: and whereas it is expedient to provide for the administration by the Governor-General of India in Council of such parts of the territories for the time being under the government of the East India Company as it may not be advisable to include in any presidency or lieutenant-governorship, and to vest in such Governor-General of India in Council the powers now vested in the Governor of the Presidency of Fort William, in Bengal: be it enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. Whenever it shall please her Majesty to cause letters-patent to be issued under the Great Seal of the United Kingdom for the nomination or appointment of any person to any office in India, or to any office relating to the government thereof, or for any other purpose whatsoever relating to India, the warrant under her Majesty's royal sign-manual for causing such letters-patent to be passed under the Great Seal shall be countersigned by the President of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, and by no other person, and shall be sealed with the privy seal, for which sealing such royal sign-manual so countersigned shall be sufficient warrant to the Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, and such warrant under the royal sign-manual, so countersigned and sealed as aforesaid, shall be a sufficient authority to the Lord High Chancellor, or Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners of the Great Seal of the United Kingdom, for passing letters-patent under such Great Seal, according to the tenor of the same warrant; and whenever her Majesty's royal sign-manual is or may be required to any warrant or writing for the appointment or removal of any person to or from any office in India, or any office relating to the government thereof, or is or may be required to any warrant or writing for the purpose of signifying her Majesty's approbation or consent to any appointment or removal to or from any such office, or for any other purpose whatsoever relating to India, such warrant or writing shall be countersigned by the president of the said board, and by no other person; and every such warrant or writing as aforesaid under her Majesty's royal sign-manual which may have been heretofore countersigned by such president shall not be deemed to have required any other counter-signature or verification.

2. During any vacancy in the office of President of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, any warrant or writing required under this act or otherwise to be countersigned by such president shall be countersigned by one of her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

3. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General of India in Council, with the sanction and approbation of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, acting under the control and direction of the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, from time to time, by proclamation duly published, to take under the immediate authority and management of the said Governor-General of India in Council any part or parts of the territories for the time being in the possession or under the government of the said company, and thereupon to give all necessary orders and directions respecting the administration of such part or parts of the said territories, or otherwise to provide for the administration thereof: provided always, that no law or regulation in force at any such time as regards any such portion of territory shall be altered or repealed except by law or regulation made by the Governor-General of India in Council.

4. It shall be lawful for the said Governor-General of India in Council, with the like sanction and approbation, from time to time to declare and limit the extent of the authority of the Governor in Council, Governor, or Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or of Agra, or the North-west Provinces, who is now or may be hereafter appointed.

5. All powers now or at any time vested in or exercised by the Governor in Council, or Governor of the Presidency of Fort William, in Bengal, or in or by the Governor-General of India in Council, in respect of such presidency, and which for the time being shall not have been transferred to the Governor in Council, Governor, or Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or of Agra, or the North-west Provinces, shall be vested in and may be exercised by the Governor-General of India in Council, and the Governor-General of India shall no longer be the Governor of the said Presidency of Fort William, in Bengal.

6. All acts of the Governor-General of India, or of the Governor-General of India in Council, done before the commencement of this act, in respect to the Presidency of Fort William, in Bengal, shall be as good and valid, and of the same force and effect, as if done by the Governor of the said Presidency.

7. In the construction of this act, "India" shall be construed to mean the territories for the time being in the possession and under the government of the East India Company.

8. This act shall be read and construed as part of the act of the last session of Parliament, c. 95.

Whereas doubts have arisen whether the "Commissioners to administer Oaths in Chancery" may lawfully administer oaths, or take declarations, affirmations, or attestations, in the High Court of Admiralty of England: and whereas it is expedient that fit and proper persons should be forthwith appointed for such purposes; and it is also expedient to provide for the collection of the fees payable in relation to proceedings in the said court by means of stamps to be provided and used for the purpose: be it enacted, &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may for all purposes be cited as "The Admiralty Court Act, 1854."

2. This act shall come into operation on the 1st day of August, 1854.

3. It shall be lawful for the judge of the High Court of Admiralty of England, and he is hereby empowered, from time to time, and as and when he may think fit, to appoint any person practising as a proctor, solicitor, or notary public in any part of England and Wales to administer oaths and take declarations, affirmations, and attestations in or relating to any matter, suit, or proceeding in the High Court of Admiralty of England; and such persons shall be styled "Commissioners to administer Oaths in Admiralty," and shall be entitled to charge and take a fee of 1s. 6d. for every oath administered by them, and for every declaration, affirmation, and attestation taken by them, subject to any order of the judge of the said court varying or annulling the same.

4. The fiat or document by which any such commissioner shall be appointed shall bear a stamp of 1l., and it shall not be necessary that any such appointment should be published in the London Gazette.

5. It shall not be necessary to sue out any commission to take the personal answers of any party in any matter, suit, or proceeding in the said court; and any such answers may be filed without any further or other formality than is required in the swearing and filing of an affidavit.

6. It shall not be necessary to sue out any commission for the examination of any witnesses in any matter, suit, or proceeding in the said court; and any examiner appointed by any order of the said court shall have the like power of administering oaths as commissioners now have under commissions issued by the court for the examination of witnesses.

7. All answers, examinations, affidavits, depositions on oath, declarations, affirmations, and attestations in or relating to any matter, suit, or proceeding in the said High Court of Admiralty shall and may be sworn and taken in England and Wales before any such commissioner appointed as aforesaid, or before any magistrate or justice of the peace, or before any commissioner to administer oaths in Chancery.

8. All answers, examinations, affidavits, depositions on oath, declarations, affirmations, and attestations in or relating to any matter, suit, or proceeding in the said High Court of Admiralty of England shall and may be sworn and taken in Scotland or Ireland, or the Isle of Man, or the Channel Islands, or any of them, or in any colony, island, plantation, or place under the dominion of her Majesty in foreign parts, before any judge, court, magistrate, notary public, or person lawfully authorised to administer oaths in such country, island, or plantation, or place respectively, or before any of her Majesty's consuls or vice-consuls in any foreign parts out of her Majesty's dominions; and the judge and other officers of the said High Court of Admiralty shall take judicial notice of the seal or signature, as the case may be, of any such judge, court, magistrate, notary public, person, consul, or vice-consul attached, appended, or subscribed to any such answers, examinations, affidavits, depositions on oath, declarations, affirmations, and attestations, or the documents to be used in the said court.

9. All persons swearing, declaring, affirming, or attesting before any person authorised by this act to administer oaths and take declarations, affirmations, and attestations, shall be liable to all such penalties, punishments, and consequences for any wilful and corrupt false swearing, declaring, affirming, or attesting contained therein, as if the matter sworn, declared, affirmed, or attested had been sworn, declared, affirmed, or attested before any court or person now by law authorised to administer oaths and take declarations, affirmations, and attestations.

10. If any person shall forge the signature or the official seal of any such commissioner, judge, court, magistrate, notary public, or other person lawfully authorised to administer oaths and take declarations, affirmations, or attestations under this act, or shall tender in evidence any answers, examination, deposition on oath, declaration, affirmation, attestation, or other judicial or official document, with a false or counterfeit signature or seal of any such commissioner, judge, court, magistrate, notary public, or other person authorised as aforesaid, attached or appended thereto, knowing the same signature or seal to be false or counterfeit, every such person shall be guilty of felony, and shall be liable to the same punishment as any offender under an act passed in the 8 & 9 Vict., intitled "An Act to facilitate the Admission in Evidence of certain official and other Documents."

11. The judge of the High Court of Admiralty of England may, whenever it shall appear to him necessary so to do, authorise any person to administer oaths and to take affidavits, depositions on oath, declarations, affirmations, and attestations during the time such person shall be on the high seas, or in any place not within her Majesty's dominions, in or relating to prize proceedings in the said court, and it shall not be necessary to affix any stamp to the fiat or document by which any such person shall be appointed.

12. Nothing herein contained shall abridge or lessen the power of the judge of the said High Court of Admiralty of England, as it now exists, to issue commissions as heretofore, and to appoint fit persons to administer oaths, take affidavits, depositions on oath, declarations, affirmations, and attestations, and generally to execute any commissions, nor shall affect in any manner the power of the judge or surrogates of the said court to administer oaths and take affidavits, depositions on oath, declarations, affirmations, and attestations as heretofore, in or relating to any matter, suit, or proceeding in the said court.

13. In all cases in which a party has a cause or right of action in the High Court of Admiralty of England against any ship, or freight, goods, or other effects whatever, it shall not be necessary to the institution of the suit for such person to sue out a warrant for the arrest thereof, but it shall be competent to him to proceed by way of monition, citing the owner or owners of such ship, freight, goods, or other effects to appear and defend the suit, and upon satisfactory proof being given that the said monition has been personally served upon such owner or owners, the said court may proceed to hear and determine the suit, and may make such order in the premises as to it shall seem right.

14. Her Majesty may by Order in Council from time to time vary, alter, or abolish all or any of the fees payable in relation to proceedings in the High Court of Admiralty of England, and may substitute one or more fee or fees in lieu thereof, and may direct that all or any of such fees shall, from a day to be named in such order and thenceforth, be collected by means of stamps, to be provided and used in manner hereinafter mentioned.

15. From and after the day named in such order the fees directed by such order to be received by stamps shall not be received in money, but by a stamp denoting the amount of the fee which otherwise would be payable; and where any fee shall be payable in respect of any document, such stamp shall, at the expense of the party liable to pay, and in such manner and under such regulations as shall by any order of the judge of the said court be directed, be stamped or affixed on the vellum, parchment, or paper on which the proceeding in respect whereof such fee is payable is written, printed, or ingrossed, or which may be otherwise used in reference to such proceeding.

16. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall from time to time, and as occasion shall require, give the necessary directions for carrying the same into effect, and shall provide everything that is requisite for that purpose, and shall do or cause to be done everything that is necessary for the receipt and collection of the money to be paid for such stamps, and the said commissioners shall cause separate and distinct accounts to be kept of all sums of money received or collected by them in respect of the sale of such stamps, and of all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by them, or by their direction, in carrying the same into effect.

17. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue may, if they think it necessary to do so, authorise proper persons for the sale and distribution of all or any of the stamps to be used under this act, and may allow to such persons the usual or customary discount or poundage thereon.

18. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall from time to time make such regulations as they shall think fit for the allowance of such stamps issued under the provisions of this act as may have been spoiled or rendered useless or unfit for the purpose intended, or for which the owner may have no immediate use, or which through mistake or inadvertence may have been improperly or unnecessarily used, and such allowance shall be made either by giving other stamps in lieu of the stamps so allowed, or by repaying the amount or value to the owner or holder thereof, after deducting the discount or poundage (if any) allowed on stamps of the like kind.

19. The provisions contained in the several acts for the time being in force relating to stamps under the care or management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall, (so far as the same are applicable and consistent with the provisions of this act), in all cases not hereby expressly provided for, be of full force and effect with respect to the stamps to be provided under or by virtue of this act, and to the vellum, parchment, or paper on or to which the same stamps shall be impressed or affixed, and be applied and put in execution for collecting and securing the sums of money denoted thereby, and for preventing, detecting, and punishing all frauds, forgeries, and other offences relating thereto, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if such provisions had been herein repeated and specially enacted with reference to the said last-mentioned stamps and sums of money respectively.

20. No document which by any order as aforesaid ought to have had a stamp impressed thereon or affixed thereto shall be received or filed or be used in relation to any proceeding in the High Court of Admiralty, or be of any validity for any purpose whatsoever, unless or until the same shall have a stamp impressed thereon or affixed thereto in the manner directed by such order: provided always, that if at any time it shall appear that any such document which ought to have had a stamp impressed thereon or affixed thereto has, through mistake or inadvertence, been received or filed or used without having such stamp impressed thereon or affixed thereto, the judge of the said court may, if he shall think fit, order that a stamp, not exceeding in value four times the amount of such original stamp, shall be impressed thereon or affixed thereto; and thereupon, when the proper stamp shall, in compliance with such order, have been impressed on such document or affixed thereto, such document, and every proceeding in reference thereto, shall be as valid and effectual as if such stamp had been impressed thereon or affixed thereto in the first instance.

21. If any officer of the High Court of Admiralty, or other person, shall do or commit or connive at any fraudulent act or practice in relation to any stamp to be used under the provisions of this act, or to any fee or sum of money to be collected or which ought to be collected by means of any such stamp, or if any such officer or person shall be guilty of any wilful act, neglect, or omission in relation to any such stamp or fee as aforesaid, whereby any fee or sum of money which ought to be collected shall be lost, or the payment thereof evaded, every such officer or person so offending may be dismissed from his office or employment by the judge of the said court.

22. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, on the recommendation of the judge of the High Court of Admiralty, to order to be paid to any person now or hereafter holding any office or employment in the said court, who shall be afflicted with some permanent infirmity disabling him from the due execution of his office, or shall be desirous of resigning the same, a superannuation or allowance; and in ascertaining and awarding the amount of such superannuation or allowance, the said commissioners shall proceed according to the principles laid down in the act of the 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 24.

23. Except where it shall be otherwise expressed, the provisions of this act shall apply to all instance, prize, and other matters, suits, and proceedings of which the High Court of Admiralty may legally take cognisance.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.

Established 1797.

PRESIDENT.—ANTHONY HUDSON, Esq., Banker.

VICE-PRESIDENT.—Lieut.-General Sir ROBT. JOHN HARVEY, C. B.

It is provided by the constitution of the Society that the insured shall be free from all responsibility; and to guarantee the engagements of the office, a fund of £50,000. has been subscribed by a numerous and opulent proprietary, which fund has been further increased by the accumulation of an additional reserve, now amounting to £6,800. Returns of three-fifths of the profits of the Company are periodically made to parties insuring, who have thus from time to time received from the Society sums amounting in the aggregate to nearly £30,000.

The rates of premium are in no case higher than those charged by the other principal offices making no returns to their insurers.

The business of the Company exceeds £2,000,000., and, owing to the liberality with which its engagements have been performed, is rapidly increasing. The duty paid to Government for the year 1852 was 74,937l. 9s. 11d.; and the amount insured on farming stock was upwards of 9,066,080l.

For Prospectuses apply at the Society's Office, 6, Crescent, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars; and Survey-street, Norwich.

TO TRADESMEN, MERCHANTS, SHIPPERS, OUT-FITTERS, &c.—Whereas it has lately come to my knowledge that some unprincipled person or persons have for some time past been imposing upon the public by selling to the Trade and others a spurious article under the name of BOND'S PERMANENT MARKING INK, this is to give Notice, that I am the ORIGINAL and SOLE PROPRIETOR and MANUFACTURER of the said article, and do not employ any traveller, or authorise any persons to represent themselves as coming from my Establishment for the purpose of selling the said Ink. LONDON, OCTOBER 7, 1854.

We resume the subject of injunctions, for the purpose of stating practical propositions, supported by authorities*. And, first, as to injunctions to stay proceedings at law, when the prosecution of the action would be inequitable.

If a party is proceeding at law on a bond or other legal instrument obtained by fraud, or by means of any inequitable transaction, a Court of equity will in general interfere by injunction. (Talleyrand v. Boulanger, 3 Ves. 447; Jervis v. White, 7 Ves. 413; Hodgson v. Murray, 2 Sim. 515; and see 3 Sim. 283).

Where, however, by the facts in evidence, de hors the instrument itself, it does not appear that the holder had knowledge of the illegal origin of a bill, he will not be restrained from proceeding on it at law. (Dunbar v. Wilson, 6 Bro. P. C. 231).

An injunction may be also granted to restrain proceeding under an agreement founded on a fraudulent representation. (Lovell v. Hicks, 2 Y. & C. 46).

Before the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 41, bills and notes given in respect of a gambling transaction were, by the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 1, absolutely void. But equity had jurisdiction to relieve against such instruments, and to decree repayment, if money had been paid under them; (Rawden v. Shadwell, Amb. 269); or to restrain proceedings at law, and to have them delivered up to be cancelled. (Newman v. Franco, 2 Anst. 519; Andrews v. Berry, 3 Anst. 634).

But because equity has this jurisdiction, it does not follow that it will always interfere against a bill given for a gambling transaction. In general, in the cases in which a Court of equity has interfered, it has been necessary for the plaintiff to come into that court for discovery, and for the purpose of connecting the instrument in question with the transaction on which its illegality is founded; and then, if the circumstances are suspicious, equity will restrain proceedings at law on the instrument till they are better explained. (Lord Portarlington v. Souby, 3 My. & K. 104; Wynne v. Jackson, 2 Russ. 351; but see Wilkinson v. L'Eauquier, 2 Y. & C. 363).

If the illegality appears at law, the Court will not interfere. (Graves v. Houlditch, 2 Price, 147).

The law has received a material alteration as to bills and notes given in consideration of gaming transactions, by the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 41, which repeals the provision above referred to of the 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 1, and enacts, that such bills and notes, instead of being absolutely void, shall be deemed and taken to have been made, drawn, accepted, given, or executed for an illegal consideration.

Where a person takes a bill drawn in the name of a firm by one of the partners, who by the partnership articles is expressly restricted from drawing bills in the name of the firm, and the holder fails to prove that it has been represented to him that the bill was the bill of the firm, he will be ordered to deliver it up. (Newman v. Milner, 2 Ves. jun. 483). And where an executor holds promissory notes made to him as executor, and shewing that fact upon the face of them, a party who takes those notes, in a transaction inconsistent with the due administration of the testator's assets, renders himself liable to the consequences of the devastavit. (Dawnes v. Power, 2 Ball & B. 491; but see Eddale v. La Nauge, 1 Y. & C. 394).

Where several persons become sureties for a sum of money, each in a separate bond for his proportional share of such sum, there will be a liability between them as sureties, even against the intention of the parties. (Dering v. Lord Winchelsea, 1 Cox, 318; and see, per Lord Eldon, Turn. & R. 429). But if the transaction is such as to shew that each is a surety by a distinct and separate transaction, and that it is not in fact the same transaction split into different parts, one of the sureties, who has executed his security, is bound, although another of the intended sureties may not have executed his; and the Court will not interfere to restrain the obligor from proceeding on that one of the separate securities which has been executed. (Coope v. Tyeonam, Turn. & R. 426).

In Jervis v. White and Hodgson v. Murray (supra) the jurisdiction of the Court was called in question.

On this point, viz. the jurisdiction of equity to interfere against instruments which cannot be proceeded upon at law, there is this distinction to be observed—where the illegality appears by the instrument itself, and where it depends on evidence dehors the instrument. (See on this Colman v. Sarrel, 1 Ves. sen. 50; see p. 51; Franco v. Bolton, 3 Ves. 368; Ryan v. Mackmath, 3 Bro. C. C. 15; Thrale v. Ross, Id. 57; Minshaw v. Jordan, Id. 16, note †; and Lisle v. Liddle, 3 Anst. 649).

It is now well settled by a great preponderance of modern authorities, that where the illegality of an instrument does not appear by the instrument itself, but depends on evidence dehors, equity will interfere by injunction, and, if necessary, by ordering the instrument to be delivered up to be cancelled. (Byne v. Vivian, 5 Ves. 604; Byne v. Potter, Id. 609; Bromley v. Holland, Id. 610; 7 Ves. 3; and see pp. 16 to 22. See also Hayward v. Dimdale, 17 Ves. 111, and the observations of Sir J. Leach, M. R., in Grover v. Hugell, 3 Russ. 432; Jones v. Lane, 3 Y. & C. 281).

But that equity will not interfere, where the illegality appears on the face of the instrument, was decided in Gray v. Mathias, (5 Ves. 286), by the whole Court of Exchequer, on a bond appearing on the face of it to have been given pro turpi causa; and the rule has since been confirmed, on great consideration, by Lord Cottenham, C., in a case in which all the authorities were most elaborately analysed by his Lordship. (Simpson v. Lord Howden, 3 My. & C. 97; and see also Jones v. Lane, 3 Y. & C. 294).

But it is necessary, in order to justify the interference of equity, that two incidents should co-exist—wrongful possession of the instrument, and the resting of the defence at law on circumstances the proof of which is dehors the instrument, and liable to be lost. (Jones v. Lane, 3 Y. & C. 281; Colombies or Columbiar v. Slim, cited by the Court in Jones v. Lane, Id. 284).

The Court will open a solicitor's bill after security given, and even after payment, if the client can point out in the bill gross errors, and charges amounting to imposition and fraud; but if nothing can be made out against the solicitor but a trifling inaccuracy, and no fraud, imposition, or material error is established, proceedings at law, upon a bond given by the client, will not be restrained merely because business was still going on when it was given. (Cook v. Settee, 1 V. & B. 126).

Whereas an act was passed in the 13 & 14 Vict. [c. 43], intituled "An Act to amend the Practice and Proceedings of the Court of Chancery of the County Palatine of Lancaster:" and whereas according to the present practice the jurisdiction in matters of appeal from the said Court of Chancery is exercised by the Chancellor of the Duchy and County Palatine of Lancaster in the court of the duchy chamber at Westminster, and sitting with two judges of assize for the said county for the time being; and such exercise of the said jurisdiction has been attended with much expense and inconvenience, and it is expedient to provide for the exercise thereof in a more convenient manner, and also to make further provision for the administration of justice in the said court of the county palatine: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

SECT. 1. The Chancellor of the Duchy and County Palatine of Lancaster and the two Lords Justices of the Court of Appeal in Chancery shall form the Court of Appeal in Chancery of the said county palatine.

2. All the jurisdiction, powers, and authorities of the court of appeal may be exercised either by one only of the said Lords Justices and the Chancellor of the said duchy and county palatine sitting together as such court of appeal, or by both of the said Lords Justices sitting as such court apart from the Chancellor of the said duchy and county palatine: provided always, that the Chancellor of the said duchy and county palatine may, while sitting alone or apart from the said Lords Justices, have and exercise the like jurisdictions, powers, and authorities as might have been exercised by the Chancellor of the said duchy and county palatine sitting alone if this act had not been passed.

3. All decisions, decrees, or orders of the court of appeal shall be subject to appeal to the House of Lords in the cases and under the conditions in and under which the like decisions and decrees or orders of the Chancellor of the said duchy and county palatine sitting alone, or together with any other person or persons, would have been subject to such appeal if this act had not been passed.

4. The decision of the majority of the court of appeal shall be taken and deemed to be the decision of the said court; and if the judges of the court be equally divided in opinion on any cause or matter brought before the court by way of appeal, the decree or order appealed from shall be taken and deemed to be affirmed.

5. The court of appeal shall make such regulations as may from time to time be necessary for fixing and regulating the sittings and business of the court; and the registrar and other officers who, according to the existing practice, are attendant upon the Chancellor of the said duchy and county palatine in matters of appeal in his Chancery shall be the registrar and officers of the court of appeal, and shall be in like manner attendant upon the said court of appeal: provided always, that any order of the said court of appeal may and shall be drawn up by any registrar of the High Court of Chancery, if so directed by the said Lords Justices or either of them.

6. Whereas it was enacted by the 1st section of the said recited act that it should be lawful, from and after the passing of the said act, for the Chancellor of the Duchy and County Palatine of Lancaster for the time being, with the advice and consent of the Vice-Chancellor of the said county palatine for the time being, and one of the Vice-Chancellors of the High Court of Chancery, to be named for that purpose by writing under the hand of the Lord High Chancellor or other officer having the custody of the Great Seal, or (if more than one) of the chief commissioner or officer having such custody, by any rules or orders to be by him from time to time made, with such advice and consent as aforesaid, to make such alterations as to him might seem expedient in the form of writs and commissions, and the mode of sealing, issuing, executing, and returning the same; and also in the form of and mode of filing bills, answers, depositions, affidavits, or other proceedings; and in the form or mode of obtaining discovery by answer in writing or otherwise; and in the form or mode of pleading and of taking evidence; and generally of proceeding to obtain relief in the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine, and in the general practice of the said court; and also in the form and mode of proceeding before the registrar of the said court; and of drawing up, entering, and inrolling orders and decrees, and of making and delivering copies of pleadings and other proceedings; and also to regulate the taxation, allowance, and payment of costs, and all other the business of the said court: be it enacted, that all the powers thereby given to the Chancellor of the said Duchy and County Palatine of Lancaster shall not, from and after the passing of this act, be exercised with such advice and assistance as aforesaid, but shall be exercised with the advice and consent of one of the Lords Justices of Appeal in Chancery for the time being and the Vice-Chancellor of the said county palatine for the time being.

7. In all cases in which, by reason of any person being out of the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine, or otherwise, effectual protection cannot be given to any ward of the said court, or to any executor, administrator, officer of the court, or other person entitled to the protection of the said court, against any action, suit, or other proceeding, or in which, for the same reason or otherwise, any contempt of the said court cannot be effectually punished, it shall be lawful for the court of appeal, upon the application of any person concerned, to make such order or orders for the protection of such ward, or of such executor, administrator, officer of the court, or other person as aforesaid, or for the punishment of any such contempt, as to the said court of appeal shall seem just, and according to the practice of the High Court of Chancery in like matters; and every such order shall have the same operation and effect as an order of the High Court of Chancery, and shall and may be enforced, and all proceedings shall and may be had thereupon, as if the same had been made by that court.

8. In all cases in which any person who may be a necessary or proper party to any suit or other matter in the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine shall not be subject to the jurisdiction of the said court, it shall be lawful for the court of appeal, on the application of the plaintiff in such suit, or of any person to whom the conduct of such suit may have been committed, or of the party proceeding in such other matter, if that court shall think fit, and according as it shall appear to that court best calculated to answer the ends of justice, either to order and direct that the said suit or other matter be transferred to the High Court of Chancery, or otherwise to order and direct that such service as may be proper be effected upon such person out of the jurisdiction of the said court of the said county palatine, and such application shall be made either ex parte, or upon such notice as the said court of appeal shall think fit: provided nevertheless, that if such order for service shall have been made without notice to any person affected thereby, it shall be lawful for the court of appeal, upon the subsequent application of any such person, to make such order for transferring the said suit or other matter to the High Court of Chancery, or otherwise, as to the said court of appeal shall seem just.

9. In case such suit or matter shall be directed to be transferred as aforesaid, all proceedings therein shall be transmitted by the officer of the court of the said county palatine to the proper officer of the High Court of Chancery to be filed, and the same shall thereafter be proceeded with according to the practice of that court; and in case service shall be directed as aforesaid, the same shall be of such and the same force and effect, and such and the same proceedings may be had thereupon, as if service had been duly effected within the jurisdiction of the said court of the said county palatine.

10. The provisions in the said recited act contained for enforcing decrees and orders made by the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine, by making them decrees or orders of the High Court of Chancery, shall extend and apply to decrees or orders made by the court of appeal.

11. And whereas by the 21st section of the Trustee Act, 1850, it was enacted, that as to any lands situated within the county palatine of Lancaster, it should be lawful for the Court of Chancery in the county palatine of Lancaster to make a like order in the same cases as to any lands within the jurisdiction of the same court as the Court of Chancery has, under the provisions thereinbefore contained, been enabled to make concerning any lands, and that every such order of the Court of Chancery in the county palatine of Lancaster should, as to such lands, have the same effect as an order of the Court of Chancery: provided always, that no person who is anywhere within the limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court of Chancery should be deemed by such local court to be an absent trustee or mortgagee within the meaning of that act: and whereas by an act of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, the provisions of the Trustee Act, 1850, were in some respects amended, and further and other provisions made: and whereas several provisions of the said Trustee Act, 1850, subsequent to the 21st section, and the provisions of the said act of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, are applicable and ought to be applied to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the said Court of Chancery of the county palatine of Lancaster: and whereas by the 11th section of the said act of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 43, it was enacted, that when, under and by virtue of any act of Parliament made and passed or which might thereafter be made and passed, or by any orders or regulations made in pursuance thereof, application is authorised or allowed to be made by petition or motion, or otherwise, to the High Court of Chancery, or any judge of the said court, and summary jurisdiction to be exercised thereon, (unless in any act of Parliament to be thereafter passed the contrary should be expressly enacted), it should be lawful for the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine, so far only as regards all persons and property within its jurisdiction, to exercise the like summary jurisdiction, and in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions in all respects, as the said High Court of Chancery or any judge thereof might exercise in the like matters: but whereas doubts are entertained as to the extent of the jurisdiction of the said Court of Chancery of the said county palatine with respect to trust estates within the said county palatine, so far as relates to the provisions of the said Trustee Act of 1850 subsequent to the 21st section, and to the provisions of the said act of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55: be it enacted, that all the powers and authorities given by the said Trustee Act of 1850, and by the said act of the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 55, to the Court of Chancery in England, and all the provisions therein contained, shall and may be exercised in like manner, and are hereby given and extended to the said Court of Chancery of the said county palatine, with respect to all lands and personal estate within the said county palatine: provided always, that no person who is anywhere within the limits of the jurisdiction of the High Court of Chancery shall be deemed by the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine to be an absent trustee or mortgagee within the meaning of the said acts.

12. When, under or by virtue of any act of Parliament already made and passed or which may hereafter be made and passed, power and jurisdiction are or shall be given to the High Court of Chancery to manage, dispose of, or deal with the property of infants or other persons under disability, or to manage, dispose of, or deal with property in the administration of assets, then and in every such case (unless in any act the contrary be expressly enacted) it shall be lawful for the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine, so far only as regards all persons and property within its jurisdiction, to exercise the like power and jurisdiction in the same manner and subject to the same restrictions in all respects as the said High Court of Chancery might exercise in the like matters.

13. And whereas by the 12th section of the said act of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 43, it was enacted, that all monies payable in respect of lands situate within the said county palatine, and which are authorised to be paid into or deposited in the Bank of England to the account of the Accountant-General of the High Court of Chancery under and by virtue of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, or any local or special act passed or to be passed incorporating the provisions of the said last-mentioned act, or otherwise authorising the taking or using of land situated in the said county palatine, and also that all monies and securities held by any party who might be sued in the Court of Chancery of the said county palatine in respect thereof, and which, under and by virtue of an act made and passed in the Parliament held in the 10 & 11 Vict., intitled "An Act for better securing Trust Funds, and for the Relief of Trustees," might be in like manner paid or transferred into or deposited in the Bank of England to the account of the said Accountant-General, might, from and after the passing of the said act now in recital, be in like manner paid or transferred into or deposited in the Bank of England to the joint account of the clerk of the council of the duchy of Lancaster and of the registrar and comptroller of the said county palatine court, in the matter in respect whereof such payment, transfer, or deposit should be made, and that the receipt of one of the cashiers of the said bank should be a full discharge to the person paying or transferring or depositing the same, and that such monies and securities, and all costs of application in respect thereof, should be dealt with by the said Court of Chancery of the county palatine in the same manner as the same might be dealt with by the High Court of Chancery, or by the Lord High Chancellor or any of the judges of the said high court, if such monies or securities had been paid or transferred into or deposited in the Bank of England to the credit of the Accountant-General of that court, and the lands in respect of which such payment, transfer, or deposit should be made might be dealt with in the same manner as if it had been made in manner prescribed by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act: and whereas since the passing of the said recited act the said county palatine has been divided into districts, and registrars and comptrollers have been appointed for such districts respectively: be it enacted, that any monies and securities to be paid or transferred or deposited under the said recited provision may be so paid or transferred into or deposited with some one or other of the branches of the Bank of England within the said county palatine, to the joint account of the clerk of the council of the duchy of Lancaster and the registrar and comptroller of the district within which such branch bank is so situate, and the receipt of the manager, or agent, or cashier of such branch bank shall be a full discharge to the person paying or transferring or depositing the same, and such payment, transfer, or deposit shall have the same force and effect as any payment, transfer, or deposit made under the said recited provision would have had: provided always, that no monies shall be so paid or deposited under or by virtue of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, or any local or special act as aforesaid, in case the party who would have been entitled to the rents and profits of the lands in respect of which such monies shall be payable, or his or her guardian or committee in case of infancy or lunacy, shall at any time before such payment or deposit serve or cause to be served a notice in writing at the office of the company taking the lands, requesting them not to make the payment or deposit.

14. In all proceedings under and by virtue of this act the said Court of Chancery of the county palatine and the Court of Appeal hereby constituted respectively shall have full jurisdiction to deal with the costs thereof and occasioned thereby, and all orders made by the said courts respectively, in pursuance of this act, shall be subject to appeal in the same manner in all respects as any other orders of the said Court of Chancery of the said county palatine.

15. Whenever it shall be necessary to cite or refer to the said first-recited act or this act, it shall be sufficient to cite or refer to the same respectively as "The Court of Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1850," and as "The Court of Chancery of Lancaster Act, 1854."

Whereas it is expedient to repeal the stamp duties now payable in respect of the several instruments, matters, and things mentioned or described in the schedule to this act annexed, and to impose other stamp duties in lieu thereof, and otherwise to amend the laws relating to stamp duties: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. From and after the 10th day of October, 1854, the stamp duties now payable in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, under or by virtue of any act or acts of Parliament for or in respect of the several instruments, matters, and things mentioned or described in the schedule to this act annexed, and whereon other duties are by this act granted, shall respectively cease and determine, and shall be and the same are hereby repealed; and in lieu thereof there shall be granted, charged, and paid in and throughout the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, unto and for the use of her Majesty, her heirs and successors, upon and in respect of the several instruments, matters, and things described or mentioned in the said schedule, or upon or in respect of the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which any of them respectively shall be written, the several duties or sums of money specified and set forth in the said schedule, which said schedule, and the several provisions, regulations, and directions therein contained, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act, and shall be applied, observed, and put in execution accordingly: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to repeal or alter any of the said stamp duties now payable in relation to any bill of exchange, promissory note, or other instrument which shall have been drawn, made, or signed, or which shall bear date before or upon the said 10th day of October, 1854.

2. The said duties by this act granted shall be denominated and deemed to be stamp duties, and shall be under the care and management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the time being; and all the powers, provisions, clauses, regulations, directions, allowances, and exemptions, fines, forfeitures, pains, and penalties contained in or imposed by any act or acts, or any schedule thereto, relating to any duties of the same kind or description heretofore payable in Great Britain and Ireland respectively, and in force at the time of the passing of this act, shall respectively be in full force and effect with respect to the duties by this act granted, and to the vellum, parchment, and paper, instruments, matters, and things charged and chargeable therewith, and to the persons liable to the payment of the said duties, so far as the same are or shall be applicable, in all cases not hereby expressly provided for, and shall be observed, applied, allowed, enforced, and put in execution for and in the raising, levying, collecting, and securing of the said duties hereby granted, and otherwise in relation thereto, so far as the same shall not be superseded by and shall be consistent with the express provisions of this act, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the same had been herein repeated and specially enacted, mutatis mutandis, with reference to the said duties by this act granted.

3. The duties by this act granted in respect of bills of exchange drawn out of the United Kingdom shall attach and be payable upon all such bills as shall be paid, indorsed, transferred, or otherwise negotiated within the United Kingdom, whosoever the same may be payable, and the said duties shall be denoted by adhesive stamps, to be provided by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for that purpose, and to be affixed to such bills as hereinafter directed.

4. Every bill of exchange which shall purport to be drawn at any place out of the United Kingdom shall, for all the purposes of this act, be deemed to be a foreign bill of exchange drawn out of the United Kingdom, and shall be chargeable with stamp duty accordingly, notwithstanding that in fact the same may have been drawn within the United Kingdom.

5. The holder of any bill of exchange drawn out of the United Kingdom, and not having a proper adhesive stamp affixed thereon as herein directed, shall, before he shall present the same for payment, or indorse, transfer, or in any manner negotiate such bill, affix thereon a proper adhesive stamp for denoting the duty by this act charged on such bill; and the person who shall indorse, transfer, or negotiate such bill shall, before he shall deliver the same out of his hands, custody, or power, cancel the stamp so affixed, by writing thereon his name or the name of his firm, and the date of the day and year on which he shall so write the same, to the end that such stamp may not be again used for any other purpose; and if any person shall present for payment, or shall pay or indorse, transfer, or negotiate any such bill as aforesaid whereon there shall not be such adhesive stamp as aforesaid duly affixed, or if any person who ought, as directed by this act, to cancel such stamp in manner aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect so to do, such person so offending in any such case shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*; and no person who shall take or receive from any other person any such bill as aforesaid, either in payment or as a security, or by purchase or otherwise, shall be entitled to recover thereon, or to make the same available for any purpose whatever, unless at the time when he shall so take or receive such bill there shall be such stamp as aforesaid affixed thereon, and cancelled in the manner hereby directed.

6. If any person shall within the United Kingdom draw and issue any bill of exchange payable out of the United Kingdom purporting to be drawn in a set, and shall not draw and issue on paper duly stamped as required by law the whole number of bills which such bill purports the set to consist of, or if any person shall within the United Kingdom transfer or negotiate any such bill of exchange as aforesaid purporting to be drawn in a set, and shall not at the same time transfer or deliver on paper duly stamped as aforesaid the whole number of bills which such bill purports the set to consist of, every such person so offending in any of such cases shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*; and if any person shall take or receive in the United Kingdom any such bill as aforesaid, either in payment or as a security, or by purchase or otherwise, without having transferred or delivered to him, duly stamped as aforesaid, the whole number of bills which such bill purports the set to consist of, he shall not be entitled to recover on any such bill, or to make the same available for any purpose whatever.

7. And whereas, under and by virtue of certain acts relating to stamp duties, certain drafts or orders for the payment of any sum of money to the bearer on demand, drawn upon any banker or person acting as a banker residing or transacting the business of a banker within fifteen miles of the place where such drafts or orders are issued, are exempted from all stamp duty, and it is expedient to prevent the negotiating or circulating of such drafts or orders unstamped at any place beyond the distance of fifteen miles from the place where the same are made payable: be it enacted, that no such draft or order as aforesaid shall, unless the same be duly stamped as a draft or order, be remitted or sent to any place beyond the distance of fifteen miles in a direct line from the bank or place at which the same is made payable or be received in payment, or as a security, or be otherwise negotiated or circulated at any place beyond the said distance; and if any person shall remit or send any draft or order not duly stamped as aforesaid to any place beyond the distance aforesaid, or shall receive the same in payment or as a security, or in any manner negotiate or circulate the same at any such last-mentioned place, he shall forfeit the sum of 50*l.*

8. Provided always, that it shall be lawful for any person who shall receive any such draft or order as aforesaid at any place within the said distance of fifteen miles from the bank or place at which the same is made payable, which draft or order shall have been lawfully issued unstamped, to affix thereto a proper adhesive stamp, and to cancel such stamp by writing thereon his name or the initial letters of his name, and thereupon such draft or order may lawfully be received and negotiated at any place beyond the distance aforesaid, anything herein contained notwithstanding.

9. And whereas an act was passed in the 17 Geo. 3, c. 30, for restraining the negotiation of promissory notes and inland bills of exchange under a limited sum: be it enacted, that the said act, and any act or acts continuing or perpetuating the same, shall, so far as they respectively extend, or may be deemed or construed to extend, to any draft on a banker for payment of money held for the use of the drawer, be and the same are hereby repealed.

10. The adhesive stamps provided by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for denoting the duty of 1*d.* payable on receipts and on drafts or orders for the payment of money to the bearer or to order on demand respectively may lawfully be used for the purpose of denoting the like amount of duty either on a receipt or on such draft or order as aforesaid, without regard to the special appropriation thereof for the other of such instruments by having its name on the face thereof, anything in any act or acts contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

11. And whereas an act was passed in the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 32, to regulate the issue of bank notes; and an act was passed in the 8 & 9 Vict. c. 38, to regulate the issue of bank notes in Scotland; and another act was passed in the last-mentioned years, c. 37, to regulate the issue of bank notes in Ireland; and in order to prevent evasions of the regulations and provisions of the said respective acts, it is expedient to define what shall be deemed to be bank notes within the meaning thereof respectively: be it enacted, that all bills, drafts, or notes (other than notes of the Bank of England) which shall be issued by any banker or the agent of any banker for the payment of money to the bearer on demand, and all bills, drafts, or notes so issued which shall entitle or be intended to entitle the bearer or holder thereof, without indorsement, or without any further or other indorsement than may be thereon at the time of the issuing thereof, to the payment of any sum of money on demand, whether the same shall be so expressed or not, in whatever form and by whomsoever such bills, drafts, or notes shall be drawn or made, shall be deemed to be bank notes of the banker by whom or by whose agent the same shall be issued within the meaning of the said three several acts last mentioned, and within all the clauses, provisions, and regulations thereof respectively.

12. All bills, drafts, and notes which by or under this act, or the said three several acts last mentioned, or any of them respectively, are declared or deemed to be bank notes, shall be subject and liable to the stamp duties, and composition for stamp duties, imposed by or payable under any act or acts in force upon or in respect of promissory notes for the payment of money to the bearer on demand; and all clauses, provisions, regulations, penalties, and forfeitures contained in any act or acts relating to the issuing of such promissory notes, or for securing the said stamp duties and composition respectively, or for preventing or punishing frauds or evasions in relation thereto, shall respectively be deemed to apply to all such bills, drafts, and notes as aforesaid, and to the stamp duties and composition payable upon or in respect thereof, anything in this act, or any other act or acts, to the contrary notwithstanding.

13. And whereas, under and by virtue of certain acts relating to stamp duties, letters by the general post, acknowledging the safe arrival of any bills of exchange, promissory notes, or other securities for money, are exempted from the stamp duty granted and imposed on receipts or discharges given for or upon the payment of money: be it enacted, that the said exemption shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

14. And whereas, under and by virtue of the laws in force, the stamp duty on receipts given for or upon the payment of money to or for the use of her Majesty, her heirs or successors, is made payable by the person requiring any such receipt: be it enacted, that all such receipts as last mentioned shall be and the same are hereby exempted from stamp duty.

15. And whereas, by an act passed in the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 97, certain reduced rates of stamp duty were granted and made payable under the head or title of "Duplicate or Counterpart" in the schedule thereto annexed: and whereas, by an act passed in the last session of Parliament, c. 63, certain stamp duties were granted and made payable upon conveyances, charters, dispositions, and contracts described under the head or title of "Conveyance" in the schedule to the said last-mentioned act, but no provision is made for charging the duplicates or counterparts of the said conveyances, charters, dispositions, and contracts with the said reduced duties, and it is expedient to give such relief in that respect as hereinafter mentioned: be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, and they are hereby required, upon production to them of any such conveyance, charter, disposition, or contract duly stamped, and of the duplicate or counterpart thereof stamped for denoting the amount of duty chargeable upon a duplicate or counterpart under the said act of the 13 & 14 Vict., to stamp the said duplicate or counterpart with the particular stamp directed by the said last-mentioned act to be impressed upon a duplicate or counterpart for denoting or testifying the payment of the full and proper stamp duty on the original deed or instrument; and if the said duplicate or counterpart shall be stamped with any ad valorem stamp duty of greater amount than the amount of stamp duty so chargeable as aforesaid on a duplicate or counterpart, the said commissioners shall allow and repay such excess of stamp duty, and rectify the stamps accordingly, and thereupon such duplicate or counterpart shall be deemed to be duly stamped.

16. And where any conveyance, charter, disposition, or contract described in the schedule to this act, shall be made partly in consideration of such annual sum as in the said schedule is mentioned, and partly in consideration of a sum of money or stock as mentioned under the head or title of "Conveyance" in the schedule to the said act of the 13 & 14 Vict. [c. 97], such conveyance, charter, disposition, or contract shall be chargeable with the ad valorem stamp duties granted by the said acts respectively in respect of each of the said considerations; and in any case where any deed or instrument which shall be chargeable with any ad valorem stamp duty in respect of any sum of money, yearly or in gross, or any stock or security therein mentioned, shall be made also for any further or other valuable consideration, such deed or instrument shall be chargeable (except where express provision to the contrary is or shall be made in any act of Parliament) with such further stamp duty as any separate deed or instrument made for such last-mentioned consideration alone would be chargeable with, except progressive duty.

17. And to prevent fraud and evasion of stamp duty in any case where application is made to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue to assess and charge the stamp duty to which any deed or instrument is liable, or to impress on any deed or instrument the particular stamp provided to denote the payment of the full and proper duty on the same, or on any other deed or instrument, or that any deed or instrument is not liable to any stamp duty, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners to require such evidence by affidavit as they may deem necessary, in order to shew to their satisfaction the quantity of words contained in any such deed or instrument, and whether or not the consideration, or any definite or certain sum or sums of money, stock, or other valuable matter or thing capable of being ascertained and set forth, or any other facts, upon the full or proper statement of any of which matters and things in such deed or instrument the stamp duty which shall be or which ought to be payable thereon shall in any measure depend, is or are truly and fully set forth therein; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners and their officers in any case to refuse to impress on any such deed or instrument, or any duplicate or counterpart respectively, the particular stamp to denote the payment of the full and proper duty as aforesaid, except on payment of the full stamp duty which would be chargeable on such deed or instrument, if all or any of such matters and things aforesaid had been truly set forth therein.

18. Provided, that no such affidavit shall be used against any person making the same in any proceeding whatever, except only in any inquiry as to the stamp duty with which such deed or instrument is chargeable, and every such person shall, upon payment of such full stamp duty as aforesaid, be relieved from any penalty, forfeiture, or disability he may have incurred by reason of the omission to state truly in such deed or instrument any of the facts, matters, and things aforesaid.

19. Whereas, by an act passed in the 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, certain penalties and disabilities were imposed upon the parties to any deed or instrument of conveyance of property upon sale, wherein the full purchase or consideration money directly or indirectly paid or secured or agreed to be paid should not be truly expressed and set forth, and also upon the attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, or other person employed in or about the preparing of any such deed or instrument: and whereas the sale of a trade or business, or the goodwill thereof, has been erroneously considered by some persons not to be a sale of property within the meaning of the acts imposing ad valorem stamp duties on the conveyance thereof, and the instruments whereby property of that description, or whereby certain messages, lands, or other property wherein or whereupon such trade or business has been carried on, has or have been in such cases assigned, transferred, or otherwise conveyed to or become vested in a purchaser, may not have been stamped with the full and proper duties with which the same were by law chargeable, and in some instances the purchase or consideration money has been omitted to be fully and truly expressed and set forth as required by law in such instruments, by reason whereof the parties to such instruments, and the attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, or other person employed in or about the preparing of the same, may have incurred the penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities in that behalf mentioned in and imposed by the said act of the 48 Geo. 3, [c. 149], and it is expedient that they should be relieved therefrom, and that such instruments should be rendered available in evidence: be it enacted, that in any such case as aforesaid the parties to any such instrument made and bearing date on or before the 15th June, 1854, and every person employed in or about the preparing of the same, shall be and they are hereby declared to be respectively freed, discharged, and indemnified from and against any penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities contained in or imposed by the said last-mentioned act which may have been incurred by reason of any omission to express or set forth in any such instrument the full and true purchase or consideration money upon the sale of the property thereby conveyed, transferred, assigned, or assured, or vested in the purchaser; and all such instruments shall be available in evidence notwithstanding the full and proper ad valorem duties which ought to have been paid in respect of the purchase or consideration money therein expressed for the conveyance, transfer, or assignment of any such trade, business, or goodwill, shall not have been paid and denoted thereon.

20. And whereas it is expedient to reduce the stamp duty now payable on licenses to pawnbrokers in Dublin: be it enacted, that the stamp duty of 15*l.* now payable on a license to be taken out yearly for exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker within the city of Dublin, or the Circular Road surrounding the same, shall be reduced to the sum of 7*l.* 10*s.*

21. All indentures of apprenticeship, bonds, contracts, and agreements entered into in the United Kingdom for or relating to the service in any of her Majesty's colonies or possessions abroad of any person as an artificer, clerk, domestic servant, handicraftsman, mechanic, gardener, servant in husbandry, or labourer, shall be and the same are hereby exempted from all stamp duty.

22. And whereas, by an act passed in the 55 Geo. 3, c. 184, and by the said act of the 13 & 14 Vict., respectively, certain stamp duties were imposed upon any schedule, inventory, or catalogue containing the matters and things in the said acts respectively mentioned, which should be referred to in or by, and be intended to be used or given in evidence as part of or as material to any instrument charged with stamp duty, but which should be separate and distinct therefrom, and not indorsed on or annexed thereto, and doubts are entertained whether the said duties extend to certain documents and writings of a public character hereinafter mentioned: for the removal of such doubts, be it declared and enacted, that the said last-mentioned stamp duties shall not extend or be deemed to have extended to any public map, plan, survey, apportionment, allotment, award, or other parochial or public document or writing whatsoever made under or in pursuance of any act of Parliament, and deposited or kept for reference in any registry, or in any public office, or with the public books, papers, or writings of any parish, by reason of any such document or writing as aforesaid being referred to in or by any deed or instrument whatever, provided that such document or writing be not indorsed on or annexed to such deed or instrument.

23. And whereas by the said act of the 13 & 14 Vict. [c. 97] and this act respectively certain ad valorem stamp duties are granted and imposed upon leases or tacks of any lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritable subjects at a yearly rent, and doubts are entertained whether the said duties extend to any lease or tack for any term or period less than a year: for the removal of such doubts, be it enacted, that where any lease or tack of any lands, tenements, hereditaments, or heritable subjects shall be made for any term or period less than a year, at a rent reserved or payable for the same, such lease or tack shall be chargeable with the same ad valorem duty as a lease or tack at a yearly rent of the same amount as the sum so reserved or payable.

24. And in order to encourage the purchase of stamps for drafts, bills, and notes of the several rates and denominations hereinafter mentioned, and to facilitate the distribution and supply thereof, there shall be granted and allowed to every person who at one and the same time shall produce at the office of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue in London or Dublin, paper, to be stamped with such stamps or any of them to the amount of 5*l.* in the whole, or shall purchase such stamps or any of them to the like amount at the office of the said commissioners in London, Edinburgh, or Dublin, or of any distributor or sub-distributor of stamps at any place not within the distance of ten miles from the said offices respectively, the allowance following; that is to say, on stamps for denoting any rate of duty not exceeding 1*s.* on bills of exchange, drafts or orders, or promissory notes, an allowance after the rate of 3*l.* 10*s.* per centum on the amount of such stamp duties respectively; provided that no allowance shall be made on any fraction of a pound; which said allowances are in lieu of any allowance payable on stamps of the like rates and denominations under any other act or acts in force.

25. And in consideration that such allowance as aforesaid is by this act granted on the purchase of stamps of the several rates and denominations aforesaid, it shall not be lawful for any person on the sale of any such stamp to make any charge for the paper whereon the same is impressed; and if any person upon the sale of any stamp denoting any rate of duty not exceeding 1s. for any bill of exchange, draft or order, or promissory note, shall make any charge for the paper whereon the same is impressed, or under any colour or pretence whatever demand or receive a greater price or sum than the amount of the stamp duty, he shall forfeit the sum of 10*l*.

26. Where any person shall be possessed of any stamps rendered useless by this act, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, on application to them or to their proper officer in that behalf, at any time on or before the 5th day of April, 1855, to cancel and make allowance for the same as in the case of spoiled stamps, after deducting the discount granted and allowed by law on the purchase of stamps of the like description.

27. Every instrument liable to stamp duty shall be admitted in evidence in any criminal proceeding, although it may not have the stamp required by law impressed thereon or affixed thereto.

OF INJUNCTIONS.

In regard to staying proceedings at law under unlawful instruments, the Court does not require certainty of the unlawful foundation of a security to justify its interference; but if, upon the answer, (or now it is presumed on the affidavits), it sees sufficient to raise a great degree of doubt whether the consideration of the instrument is lawful, although there is no actual evidence that it was not so, the Court will restrain proceedings at law until it is in a position to come to a conclusion as to the rights of the parties. (The Earl of Milltown v. Stewart, 3 My. & C. 18).

Under the head of fraud may be considered the cases where parties have been restrained from enforcing at law instruments founded on or having relation to expectations from third parties, where the Court has considered it probable that, had the transaction been known to those from whom the benefits were expected, the abandonment of the arrangement would have been made by such parties a condition of the realisation of the expectations. (Woodhouse v. Shepley, 2 Atk. 535; Cock v. Richards, 10 Ves. 429).

An exception to this rule has been made in a case where a person, being on bad terms with his father, and not admitted to his presence, on a treaty for the marriage of his daughter with an infant, gave a bond, conditioned to settle on his daughter and the issue of the marriage, if the marriage took place, a third of the estate that should come to him from his father, within one month after his death. (Hobson v. Trevor, 2 P. Wms. 191).

There is, however, nothing inequitable or against public policy in an agreement between parties, who have expectations from a third party, to divide whatever such party may leave them. (Beckley v. Newland, 2 P. Wms. 182; and see Hobson v. Trevor, Id. 191).

In regard to bonds or other securities founded on expectations, or given by persons having no present property, and only expectations from persons living, it is a settled principle that the Court will restrain proceedings at law upon such instruments, unless the actual value has been given. (Marsack v. Reeves, 6 Mad. 108). A purchaser, however, at a sale by auction of a reversion, is not of necessity bound to establish that he purchased at a full price. (Shelly v. Nash, 3 Mad. 232). But if the sale is so conducted as to shew on the face of it that the vendor is in the power of those who deal with him, the Court will not consider the sale by auction as affording fair evidence of the market price.

and will grant an injunction till the hearing, the plaintiff paying into court the auction price, with interest. (Fox v. Wright, 6 Mad. 111).

It is, indeed, well settled as a general doctrine of equity, that to persons in the position of an expectant heir, a degree of protection is extended, approaching nearly to an incapacity to bind themselves by any contract; and that it is incumbent upon those who have dealings with expectant heirs relative to their reversionary interests to make good the bargain—that is, to be able to shew that a full and adequate consideration was paid. (1 Bro. C. C. 9; 9 Ves. 246; Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512; Gowland v. Defaria, 17 Ves. 20). And while the pressure of the distress, which induced originally the expectant heir to enter into the contract, continues, no length of acquiescence, nor even confirmation, will prevent such heir from coming to equity to set aside the contract. (Gowland v. Defaria, 17 Ves. 20; Crosse v. Ballard, 3 Bro. C. C. 117).

But the extraordinary protection of equity must be withdrawn if it shall appear that the transaction was known to the father or other person standing in loco parentis, even although such parent or other person took no active part in the negotiation, provided the transaction was not opposed by him, and so carried through in spite of him: and further, if the heir flies off from the transaction, and becomes opposed to him with whom he has been dealing, and repudiates the whole bargain, he must not in any respect act upon it, so as to alter the situation of the other party or his property; at least, if he does so, the proof lies upon him of shewing that he did so under the continuing pressure of the same distress which gave rise to the original dealing. (King v. Hamlet, 2 My. & K. 456).

Under this division of the subject also falls the class of cases where instruments are obtained under undue influence. In those cases equity will restrain the parties, claiming under the instruments so obtained, from proceeding at law. (Goddard v. Carlisle and Others, 9 Price, 169; Lady Strathmore v. Bowes, 2 Bro. C. C. 345; Peel v. —, 16 Ves. 157).

Equity will interfere against a deed or an agreement entered into by a party while in a state of intoxication, if any unfair advantage has been made of his situation; (Cory v. Cory, 1 Ves. sen. 19, and see the cases there cited; Butler v. Mulvihill, 1 Bligh, 137); or if there has been any contrivance or management to draw him into drinking; (Johnson v. Medlicott, 3 P. Wms. 130, note (a)); or even over-readiness to acquiesce in and countenance his disposition to drink; (Say v. Barwick, 1 V. & B. 195); or, perhaps, if upon the face of the agreement it appears that the offer was such as necessarily discovers absence of judgment in the person making, or a degree of unfairness in those accepting, it. (See the observations of Sir W. Grant in Cooke v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. 17; and see Dunnage v. White, 1 Swanst. 137, and Butler v. Mulvihill, 1 Bligh, 137).

The principle of the decisions is not merely that the party must have been actually intoxicated, but that the fact of his being intoxicated, taken in conjunction with the fact of the rent actually reserved being grossly inadequate, and different from that previously agreed upon, affords an inference of fraudulent advantage taken of the intoxication of the plaintiff. For as to intoxication simpliciter, it is settled that equity does not interfere against an instrument merely on the ground of the party being intoxicated at the time of executing it. (Johnson v. Medlicott, 3 P. Wms. 130, note (a), and Cooke v. Clayworth, 18 Ves. 12).

In cases where persons, having entered into a general arrangement with creditors for a composition, have entered at the same time into a secret arrangement with certain creditors, the effect of which would be to give them a superiority over the general mass of creditors, and to defeat the presumed intention of the general body—viz. that they shall all receive equally, and that the debtor, after the payment of the composition, shall be free—equity will prevent such agreement, made in fraud of the intent of the general creditors, from taking effect. (Eastbrook v. Scott, 3 Ves. 457; Mason v. Stock, 6 Ves. 300).

Under the head of marriage brokerage bonds, and the like, are to be considered several cases of a mixed nature, in which the vice of the transaction consists partly in its being fraudulent as against individuals, and partly in its being inconsistent with public policy. Of this kind are what are called marriage brokerage bonds, (Drury v. Hooke, 1 Vern. 212; Arundel v. Trevillian, 1 Ch. Rep. 47; Williamson v. Gibson, 2 Sch. & L. 357; Smith v. Bunning, 2 Vern. 392); bonds or other securities given in consideration of obtaining places in the public service, (Hartwell v. Hartwell, 4 Ves. 811; Thrale v. Ross, 3 Bro. C. C. 57; Hannington v. Duchatel, 1 Bro. C. C. 124; Symonds v. Gibson, 2 Vern. 308; Whittingham v. Burgoyne, 3 Aust. 900; Morris v. McCulloch, Amb. 432); or for the exercise of influence over others in the disposition of their property, (Debenham v. Oz, 1 Ves. sen. 276; Keat v. Allen, 2 Vern. 588); or for other objects fraudulent in intention and mischievous in policy.

The general rule in this sort of case is, that the party claiming under a title thus tainted shall be restrained in equity; although in some cases (Law v. Law, 3 P. Wms. 390; see also Hannington v. Duchatel, 1 Bro. C. C. 124; Morris v. McCulloch, Amb. 432; Debenham v. Oz, 1 Ves. sen. 276; and see also, on this subject, Smith v. Aykwell or Haytwell, 3 Atk. 566; Amb. 66; Drury v. Hooke, 1 Vern. 212; Striblehill or Scrubblehill v. Brat, 2 Vern. 455; 4 Bro. P. C. 144; Hall v. Potter, Show. P. C. 76; Cole v. Gibson, 1 Ves. sen. 503; and Turton v. Benson, 1 P. Wms. 496) the Court has proceeded on the principle of not interfering, and leaving the parties to do the best they can respectively at law.

With respect to transactions falling under the head of marriage brokerage, although the general rule has been long well settled, there have been some differences in the decisions as to the precise ground of interference. (See Smith v. Aykwell or Haytwell, 3 Atk. 566; Amb. 66; and see, ante, Drury v. Hooke, and the cases there cited).

The cases in which equity has refused to interfere have been principally those arising on conveyances made in order to give to a party a colourable qualification to enable him to sit in Parliament, or to kill game. The doctrine in these cases is laid down in a case cited by Lord Eldon in Curtis v. Perry, (6 Ves. 747); in Platamone v. Staple, (Coop. 250; and see 9 Ann. c. 5); and in Brackenbury v. Brackenbury, (2 J. & W. 391).

There are other cases also in which equity has refused to interfere between parties to a contract of doubtful or of admitted illegality, on the ground of public policy. (See The Earl of Westmeath v. The Countess of Westmeath, Jac. 126).

It is not easy to extract from the cases on this subject any general principle governing the disposition of the Court to distinguish between those cases in which it will interfere, and those in which it will leave the parties to law.

In some of the cases the Court, treating the contract as clearly against public policy, has acted positively against it. (Law v. Law, 3 P. Wms. 390). In another, the Court, thinking the validity of the deed doubtful at law on grounds of public policy, refused to restrain the party claiming under it; (The Earl of Westmeath v. The Countess of Westmeath, Jac. 126); while in others, again, the Court, holding the agreement clearly against public policy, has also refused to act positively against its being enforced at law. (Evans v. Richardson, 3 Mer. 469).

The authorities seem, however, to justify the following as general propositions—first, that the Court will in no case give any active support to instruments founded on fraud, or on considerations against public policy; secondly, that in selecting between positive interference, and leaving the parties to law, it will take that course which will be most likely to defeat, not the effect of the instrument, but the success of the fraud originally intended by it.

On the same principle as that which is applicable to the cases we have been discussing, equity will interfere where parties set up a contract apparently fair, but in fact entered into fraudulently, merely for the purpose of covering an usurious transaction.

Where, for instance, a partnership transaction is merely colourable, for the purpose of obtaining, under the name of a partnership, usurious interest for a loan, equity will treat it as a fraudulent contract, and relieve against it. But the Court will not relieve against a transaction, as in fraud of the usury laws, merely on the ground that the lender, either by the very nature of the contract itself, or by some of its possible consequences, may in fact, as between him and the borrower, secure a rate of interest, which, taken simply as such, would be usurious. (Freday v. Hordern, Jac. 144; Clark v. Giraud, 1 Mad. 511. See Searle v. Lord Carpenter, Amb. 242).

But if fraud in the party obtaining a legal title will prevent him from being permitted to use it; on the other hand, fraud in the party from whom the title passes will have the effect of preventing the parties taking it from losing the benefit of it; where, if there had not been such fraud, they might not have been permitted to use it. (Taylor v. Sheppard, 1 Y. & C. 271).

Courts of equity do not assume in general any jurisdiction in questions of insurance, except for the purpose of facilitating the trial of the validity of the policy. Thus, where the facts on which the liability turns, have taken place abroad, equity will grant a commission to examine witnesses, and will restrain proceedings at law until the return of the commissioners; (Chitty v. Solomon, 2 Atk. 359); or, on suspicion of fraud, will compel the plaintiff at law to make discovery of the circumstances within his knowledge. (See Park Ins. c. 20). But, except in these cases, all issues upon policies of insurance must be tried at common law. (Ib.; and De Ghotoff v. The Governor and Company of London Assurance, 4 Bro. P. C. 436, where a demurrer to a bill for payment of the sum insured by a policy was allowed). However, in a case in Peere Williams, (De Costa v. Scandret, 2 P. Wms. 170), where a merchant, who having information of his ship being in danger, such as to induce him to believe that probably she was lost, insured without informing the insurers of those circumstances, on a bill for an injunction, and to have the policy delivered up, it was decreed, that, the premiums being returned, the policy should be delivered up.

Under the second division of this section fall the cases in which parties, having legal rights originally fair, are guilty of either positive acts or of acquiescence, actually or constructively fraudulent, whereby they vary, or permit to be varied, the rights and liabilities of other parties, to their own advantage, and to the detriment of such other parties. (Aston v. Aston, 1 Ves. sen. 396; Caudor v. Lewis, 1 Y. & C. 427).

Where a party having title has suffered another in possession with an apparent title to grant fair leases, and has stood by and allowed the tenants to expend their money in improvements, he will not be suffered afterwards, under a decree (in a cause to which the tenants were not parties) restoring the possession to him, to evict such tenants, and will be restrained from bringing ejectment by perpetual injunction. (Shine v. Gough, 1 Ball & B. 436; see also Hardcastle v. Shafto, 1 Anst. 184). But if, in such cases as Aston v. Aston, the waste had been permitted by express agreement, it seems doubtful whether equity would interfere, because that may be pleaded at law. (Per Lord Chancellor, 1 Ves. sen. 399; and see Ray v. Ray, Coop. 264, and Nicholson v. Hooper, 4 My. & C. 179). In strictness, perhaps, this latter case should have been mentioned under a different head; but in substance it illustrates the proposition discussed in this section. (See also Edgcombe v. Carpenter, 1 Beav. 171).

It must not be overlooked, that the general principle of these cases is not mere laches, but fraudulent dealing or acquiescence; and therefore, in such cases, it is put upon the plaintiff to prove, not merely to raise a probable conjecture, but to shew upon highly probable grounds a case of bad faith and bad conscience against the defendant. (Per Lord Eldon in Dann v. Spurrier, see 7 Ves. 235).

Another class of cases falling under this division of the subject is that where a creditor, having a title at law originally fair and equitable against a surety as well as against his principal debtor, by some transaction with the principal debtor, varies the position of the surety, and thereby taints his legal title with constructive fraud as against the surety. Thus, it is firmly settled in equity, that where a creditor gives time to his principal debtor without the consent of the surety, by so doing he discharges the surety; that is, if time is given by virtue of positive contract between the creditor and the principal. (Samuel v. Howarth, 3 Mer. 272; and see Nisbit v. Smith, 2 Bro. C. C. 579; Ross v. Ber- ington, 2 Ves. 540; Boulbee v. Stubbs, 18 Ves. 20; Blake v. White, 1 Y. & C. 420; Eyre v. Bartrop, 3 Mad. 221; The Bank of England v. Beresford, 6 Dow, 233; Solly v. Moore, 8 Price, 631; Attwood v. Banks, 2 Beav. 192; and Bowmaker v. Moore, 3 Price, 214).

The rule as between creditor and surety applies equally, though the surety should know the fact of time being given to the principal debtor; to take the case out of it, the surety must expressly consent. But if the time given is not by positive contract, but the case is only that the creditor is inactive, the surety will not be relieved in equity. (Samuel v. Howarth, 3 Mer. 272; see also 6 Ves. 734; Eyre v. Everett, 2 Russ. 381).

But although the creditor may, if he chooses, remain entirely passive, he cannot act, and then withdraw his act, without the consent of the surety. (6 Ves. 734; 2 Swanst. 191). Thus, if he takes the goods of his debtor in execution, and afterwards withdraws the execution, he discharges the surety, both at law and in equity. (Mayhew v. Crickett, 2 Swanst. 185; see p. 191). But if after such withdrawal the surety makes a fresh promise to pay, he renders himself liable, not as contracting a new, but as reviving the old debt. (Ib.)

But if a creditor cannot by his own act vary the extent of the liability of the surety; on the other hand, a surety in a bond cannot in general, by his mere intimation that he will no longer hold himself liable, discharge himself from his liability, without the acquiescence of the creditor. (Broune v. Carr, 2 Russ. 600; Gordon v. Calvert, 2 Sim. 253; 4 Russ. 581).

It must be observed also that an injunction will not be maintained to restrain the obligees of a bond from suing the surety, because the obligees have lent a further sum to the principal obligor, and taken his separate bond for it, nor because they have simply abstained from suing him, not expressly giving him time; for, as already noticed, the surety is not discharged by the mere passive conduct of the creditor in not suing, but he must himself use diligence, and take such effectual means as will enable him to call on the creditor either to sue, or to give him, the surety, the means of suing. (Eyre v. Everett, 2 Russ. 381).

Whereas the enlargement in manner hereinafter mentioned of the powers of the Masters in Ordinary of the High Court of Chancery during their continuance in office, and the appointment of additional temporary clerks in their offices, would enable them to wind up the more expeditiously the causes, matters, and things from time to time depending before them: and whereas better provision is required for the examining and settling of the accounts of receivers and others in the said court: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. Upon a suit in which any proceeding may from time to time be depending before a Master in Ordinary of the High Court of Chancery becoming abated by death, marriage, or otherwise, or becoming defective by reason of some change or transmission of interest or liability, it shall be lawful for the Master, notwithstanding that the suit has become abated or defective, to summon as he shall deem fit all or any of the parties to the suit or proceeding, or their or any of their solicitors, and to inquire and obtain from them or any of them such information as may to him seem necessary or proper respecting the abatement of the suit, or respecting the same having become defective, and the change or transmission of interest or liability, and respecting the person or persons by and against whom the suit and proceedings ought to be revived, or the decree or order carried on and prosecuted; for which purposes the Master shall be at liberty to proceed in the absence of any of the parties or solicitors neglecting or refusing to attend his summons.

2. In case the Master shall, by the means aforesaid or otherwise, obtain sufficient information for his guidance in this behalf, he shall be at liberty to certify the abatement of the suit, or that the same has become defective, and the change or transmission of interest or liability.

3. The Master's certificate shall be filed by such person as the Master may direct, and then such order to the effect of the usual order to revive, or of the usual supplemental decree, as is mentioned in the section numbered 52 of the act "to amend the Practice and Course of Proceeding in the High Court of Chancery," passed in the 15 & 16 Vict., shall be drawn up by the Registrar upon the Master's certificate, which shall be deemed equivalent to such allegation as is in the said section mentioned; and the course of proceeding upon and the effect of an order obtained under these present provisions shall be the same in all respects as if the order had been obtained upon such allegation as aforesaid.

4. In case the Master shall not be able to obtain sufficient information for his guidance in certifying as aforesaid, he shall be at liberty to certify the abatement of the suit, or that the same has become defective, and the change or transmission of interest or liability, and that by reason thereof he is unable to dispose of the proceeding depending before him in the suit; upon which certificate the Court shall make such order as it shall think proper on all or any of the parties for the further prosecution of the suit, or for the final disposal thereof, and for the payment of the costs thereof, including any of the costs which may have been incurred by reason of the conduct of the parties.

5. In the event of the parties or their solicitors refusing or neglecting, within a time to be fixed by the Master, to file or to bring before the Court any such certificate as aforesaid, or to serve any order when drawn up as aforesaid, then by direction of the Master the certificate may be filed or brought before the Court, or the order may be served by the solicitor for the time being to the Suitors Fund; and the Court is hereby empowered to order payment of the costs and expenses of the solicitor to the Suitors Fund out of such of the funds in the suit, or by such parties as to the Court shall seem just; and in case payment thereof cannot be obtained by any of the means aforesaid, the same, by the direction of the Court, may be paid out of the Suitors Fund.

6. In any cause, matter, or thing which may from time to time be depending before or have been referred to a Master, it shall be lawful for him, in such way as he may think fit, to obtain the assistance of an accountant, the better to enable him to make any report or certificate, and to act upon the certificate of such accountant; and the allowances in respect of fees to the accountant shall be regulated by the Taxing Master of the court.

7. In any cause, matter, or thing which may from time to time be depending before or have been referred to a Master, he shall be at liberty to certify specially any decision at which he may arrive, or any other matter relating thereto, in order to obtain a decision or direction by or from the Court for his guidance in the further proceedings, or to enable any party to obtain the opinion of the Court with reference thereto.

8. It shall be lawful for the Lord Chancellor to appoint a fit person to act in the office of any Master as an additional temporary clerk, and in assistance to the Master's ordinary clerks, in such manner as the Master may direct; and every such temporary clerk may be removed by the Lord Chancellor as he may think fit, and shall receive, so long as he shall be so employed, such salary as the Lord Chancellor shall, with the approbation of the Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury, order, but shall not be entitled to or receive any compensation upon or by reason of the Master being released from his duties, or removed by resignation, death, or otherwise.

9. The salaries given under this act shall grow due from day to day, but shall be payable, under an order of the Lord Chancellor, on the third day of each of the months of February, May, August, and November in every year, or on such other days as the Lord Chancellor shall from time to time direct, and shall be paid to the persons entitled thereto respectively, or their respective executors or administrators, out of the fund standing in the name of the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery, to the account intitled "The Suitors Fee Fund Account," subject to the payment of such salaries and sums of money as are now payable thereout.

10. In this act the expression "the Lord Chancellor" shall be construed to mean the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain for the time being, and to include or be applicable to the Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners for the custody of the Great Seal of the United Kingdom for the time being.

OF INJUNCTIONS.

There is a class of cases in which the doctrine of relief against fraud has been carried to an extent which seems almost to defeat the very object of that doctrine, and to repress fraud in one party by supporting it in another. I allude to the cases in which persons having concealed the truth, or made false representations respecting their legal and fair claims, for the purpose of enabling fraud to be committed upon others, or upon the policy of the law, have been restrained by equity from afterwards enforcing their claims, even as against themselves and the parties to the fraud. (Gale v. Lindo, 1 Vern. 475; Id. 348; Montefiori v. Montefiori, 1 W. Bl. 363; see also Lamlee v. Hanman, 2 Vern. 466, and Turton v. Benson, Id. 764; 1 P. Wms. 496).

But in cases of this kind, where equities are equal, the rule "Qui prior est in tempore potior est in jure" applies. (Roberts v. Roberts, 3 P. Wms. 66).

In some of the cases above mentioned it is to be observed that the instruments given were originally without valuable consideration, and the transaction altogether based on a fraudulent purpose; but the leading case on this subject is Neville v. Wilkinson, (1 Bro. C. C., App., 543), in which the legal title was originally fair, and based on a valuable consideration, and yet the plaintiff at law was deprived in equity of the benefit of such his legal title, because he had so dealt with it as to make it an instrument of fraud on a third party. In that case the defendant was the plaintiff's solicitor, and, having had various pecuniary transactions with him, had claims against him for a valuable consideration to a considerable amount. On the occasion of the plaintiff's negotiations for a marriage with the daughter of Robinson, the defendant was induced by the persuasions of the plaintiff to make to Robinson a false representation of the plaintiff's debts, and in particular to conceal the debt to himself. It did not appear that the extent of the plaintiff's debts was a condition of the father's consent. The Lord Chancellor said the defendant confessed a confederacy to cheat Robinson, and he would not lay it down as a rule, that fraud in cases of that nature must be upon an article expressly contracted for; and granted an injunction to restrain the defendant from proceeding to recover any debt due before the marriage of Neville, except certain claims agreed upon between the parties; and he delivered his opinion that the defendant could not ever recover that debt against the plaintiff. (See also, as to the effect of a private agreement in fraud of a marriage contract, Palmer v. Neave, 11 Ves. 165).

We take now, out of its order, the subject of injunctions to restrain infringement of patents, as a subject on which, perhaps, the earliest use of the common-law jurisdiction, by way of injunction, is likely to be exercised.

In order to prevent irreparable mischief, or to suppress multiplicity of suits and vexatious litigation, equity interferes by injunction to restrain the infringement of alleged patent rights for inventions. (Vide 2 Story's Eq. Jur. 209; Jer. Eq. Jur., b. 3, c. 2, s. 1, p. 327; 1 Fonb. Eq. 34, notis). The jurisdiction, in restraining the infringement of patents, is in aid of a legal right; the plaintiff coming to the Court on the assumption that he has a legal right, and the Court granting its assistance on that ground. (Per Lord Cottenham, C., in Bacon v. Jones, 4 My. & C. 436).

At the present day it is not generally necessary that the plaintiff should establish his right at law in order to come into equity, the right appearing prima facie on record by the letters-patent. (Mitf. Pl. 147; Hicks v. Raincock, Dick, 647; and see 2 Atk. 391; Anon., 1 Ves. sen. 476). See the case of The Universities of Oxford and Cambridge v. Richardson, (6 Ves. 689, 707), where the principle in regard to patents is stated to be, that if a party gets his patent and puts his invention execution, and has proceeded to a sale, that may be called possession under it. However doubtful it may be whether the patent can be sustained, equity will hold that possession under a colour of title is ground enough to enjoin, and to continue the injunction till it shall be proved at law that it is only colour, and not real title.

Every registered mortgagee shall have power absolutely to dispose of the ship or share in respect of which he is registered, and to give effectual receipts for the purchase money; but if there are more persons than one registered as mortgagees of the same ship or share, no subsequent mortgagee shall, except under the order of some court capable of taking cognisance of such matters, sell such ship or share without the concurrence of every prior mortgagee.

72. No registered mortgage of any ship or of any share therein shall be affected by any act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor after the date of the record of such mortgage, notwithstanding such mortgagor at the time of his becoming bankrupt may have in his possession and disposition and be reputed owner of such ship or share thereof; and such mortgage shall be preferred to any right, claim, or interest in such ship or any share thereof which may belong to the assignees of such bankrupt.

73. A registered mortgage of any ship or share in a ship may be transferred to any person, and the instrument creating such transfer shall be in the form marked K. in the schedule hereto, and on the production of such instrument the registrar shall enter in the register book the name of the transferee as mortgagee of the ship or shares therein mentioned, and shall by memorandum under his hand record on the instrument of transfer that the same has been recorded by him, stating the date and hour of such record.

74. If the interest of any mortgagee in any ship or in any share therein becomes transmitted in consequence of death, bankruptcy, or insolvency, or in consequence of the marriage of any female mortgagee, or by any lawful means other than by a transfer according to the provisions of this act, such transmission shall be authenticated by a declaration of the person to whom such interest has been transmitted, made in the form marked L. in the schedule hereto, and containing a statement describing the manner in which and the party to whom such property has been transmitted; and such declaration shall be made and subscribed, if the declarant resides at or within five miles of the custom-house of the port of registry, in the presence of the registrar; but if beyond that distance, in the presence of any registrar or of any justice of the peace, and shall be accompanied by such evidence as is hereinbefore required to authenticate a corresponding transmission of property from one registered owner to another.

75. The registrar, upon the receipt of such declaration and the production of such evidence as aforesaid, shall enter the name of the person or persons entitled under such transmission in the register book as mortgagee or mortgagees of the ship or share in respect of which such transmission has taken place.

Certificates of Mortgage and Sale.

76. Any registered owner, if desirous of disposing by way of mortgage or sale of the ship or share in respect of which he is registered at any place out of the country or possession in which the port of registry of such ship is situate, may apply to the registrar, who shall thereupon enable him to do so by granting such certificates as are hereinafter mentioned, to be called respectively certificates of mortgage or certificates of sale, according as the purport to give a power to mortgage or a power to sell.

77. Previously to any certificate of mortgage or sale being granted, the applicant shall state to the registrar, to be by him entered in the register book, the following particulars; that is to say,

- (1). The names of the persons by whom the power mentioned in such certificate is to be exercised, and in the case of a mortgage the maximum amount of charge to be created, if it is intended to fix any such maximum, and in the case of a sale the minimum price at which a sale is to be made, if it is intended to fix any such minimum:

- (2). The specific place or places where such power is to be exercised, or if no place be specified, then that it may be exercised anywhere, subject to the provisions hereinafter contained:

- (3). The limit of time within which such power may be exercised.

78. No certificate of mortgage or sale shall be granted so as to authorise any mortgage or sale to be made—

At any place within the United Kingdom, if the port of registry of the ship be situate in the United Kingdom; or at any place within the same British possession, if the port of registry is situate within a British possession; or

By any person not named in the certificate.

79. Certificates of mortgage and sale shall be in the forms marked respectively M. and N. in the schedule hereto, and shall contain a statement of the several particulars hereinbefore directed to be entered in the register book, and in addition thereto an enumeration of any registered mortgages or certificates of mortgage or sale affecting the ships or shares in respect of which such certificates are given.

80. The following rules shall be observed as to certificates of mortgage; that is to say,

- (1). The power shall be exercised in conformity with the directions contained in the certificate:

- (2). A record of every mortgage made thereunder shall be indorsed thereon by a registrar or British consular officer:

- (3). No mortgage bonâ fide made thereunder shall be impeached by reason of the person by whom the power was given dying before the making of such mortgage:

- (4). Whenever the certificate contains a specification of the place or places at which, and a limit of time not exceeding twelve months within which, the power is to be exercised, no mortgage bonâ fide made to a mortgagee without notice shall be impeached by reason of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the person by whom the power was given:

- (5). Every mortgage which is so registered as aforesaid on the certificate shall have priority over all mortgages of the same ship or share created subsequently to the date of the entry of the certificate in the register book; and if there be more mortgages than one so indorsed, the respective mortgagees claiming thereunder shall, notwithstanding any express, implied, or constructive notice, be entitled one before the other according to the date at which a record of each instrument is indorsed on the certificate, and not according to the date of the instrument creating the mortgage:

- (6). Subject to the foregoing rules, every mortgagee whose mortgage is registered on the certificate shall have the same rights and powers, and be subject to the same liabilities, as he would have had and been subject to if his mortgage had been registered in the register book instead of on the certificate:

- (7). The discharge of any mortgage so registered on the certificate may be indorsed thereon by any registrar or British consular officer, upon the production of such evidence as is hereby required to be produced to the registrar on the entry of the discharge of a mortgage in the register book; and upon such indorsement being made, the estate, if any, which passed to the mortgagee shall vest in the same person or persons in whom the same would, having regard to intervening acts and circumstances, if any, have vested if no such mortgage had been made:

- (8). Upon the delivery of any certificate of mortgage to the registrar by whom it was granted, he shall, after recording in the register book in such manner as to preserve its priority any unsatisfied mortgage registered thereon, cancel such certificate, and enter the fact of such cancellation in the register book; and every certificate so cancelled shall be void to all intents.

81. The following rules shall be observed as to certificates of sale; that is to say,

- (1). No such certificate shall be granted except for the sale of an entire ship:

- (2). The power shall be exercised in conformity with the directions contained in the certificate:

- (3). No sale bonâ fide made to a purchaser for valuable consideration shall be impeached by reason of the person by whom the power was given dying before the making of such sale:

- (4). Whenever the certificate contains a specification of the place or places at which, and a limit of time not exceeding twelve months within which, the power is to be exercised, no sale bonâ fide made to a purchaser for valuable consideration without notice shall be impeached by reason of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the person by whom the power was given :
- (5). Any transfer made to a person qualified to be the owner of British ships shall be by bill of sale in the form hereinbefore mentioned, or as near thereto as circumstances permit :
- (6). If the ship is sold to a party qualified to hold British ships, the ship shall be registered anew ; but notice of all mortgages enumerated on the certificate of sale shall be entered in the register book :
- (7). Previously to such registry anew there shall be produced to the registrar required to make the same bill of sale by which the ship is transferred, the certificate of sale and the certificate of registry of such ship :
- (8). Such last-mentioned registrar shall retain the certificates of sale and registry, and after having indorsed on both of such instruments an entry of the fact of a sale having taken place, shall forward the said certificates to the registrar of the port appearing on such certificates to be the former port of registry of the ship, and such last-mentioned registrar shall thereupon make a memorandum of the sale in his register book, and the registry of the ship in such book shall be considered as closed, except as far as relates to any unsatisfied mortgages or existing certificates of mortgage entered therein :
- (9). On such registry anew, the description of the ship contained in her original certificate of registry may be transferred to the new register book, without her being re-surveyed, and the declaration to be made by the purchaser shall be the same as would be required to be made by an ordinary transferee.
- (10). If the ship is sold to a party not qualified to be the owner of a British ship, the bill of sale by which the ship is transferred, the certificate of sale, and the certificate of registry shall be produced to some registrar or consular officer, who shall retain the certificates of sale and registry, and, having indorsed thereon the fact of such ship having been sold to persons not qualified to be owners of British ships, shall forward such certificates to the registrar of the port appearing on the certificate of registry to be the port of registry of such ship ; and such last-mentioned registrar shall thereupon make a memorandum of the sale in his register book, and the registry of the ship in such book shall be considered as closed, except so far as relates to any unsatisfied mortgages or existing certificates of mortgage entered therein :
- (11). If upon a sale being made to an unqualified person default is made in the production of such certificates as are mentioned in the last rule, such unqualified person shall be considered by British law as having acquired no title to or interest in the ship ; and further, the party upon whose application such certificate was granted, and the persons exercising the power, shall each incur a penalty not exceeding 100*l.* :
- (12). If no sale is made in conformity with the certificate of sale, such certificate shall be delivered to the registrar by whom the same was granted ; and such registrar shall thereupon cancel it, and enter the fact of such cancellation in the register book ; and every certificate so cancelled shall be void to all intents.

82. Upon proof at any time to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Customs that any certificate of mortgage or sale is lost, or so obliterated as to be useless, and that the powers thereby given have never been exercised, or if they have been exercised, then upon proof of the several matters and things that have been done thereunder, it shall be lawful for the registrar, with the sanction of the said commissioners, as circumstances may require, either to issue a new certificate, or to direct such entries to be made in the register book, or such other matter or thing to be done, as might have been made or done if no such loss or obliteration had taken place.

83. The registered owner for the time being of any ship or share therein in respect of which a certificate of mortgage or sale has been granted, specifying the place or places where the power thereby given is to be exercised, may, by an instrument under his hand made in the Form O. in the schedule hereto, or as near thereto as circumstances permit, authorise the registrar by whom such certificate was granted to give notice to the registrar or consular officer, registrars or consular officers, at such place or places, that such certificate is revoked ; and notice shall be given accordingly ; and all registrars or consular officers receiving such notice shall record the same, and shall exhibit the same to all persons who may apply to them for the purpose of effecting or obtaining a mortgage or transfer under the said certificate or mortgage of sale ; and after such notice has been so recorded, the said certificate shall, so far as concerns any mortgage or sale to be thereafter made at such place, be deemed to be revoked and of no effect ; and every registrar or consular officer recording any such notice shall thereupon state to the registrar by whom the certificate was granted, whether any previous exercise of the power to which such certificate refers has taken place.

Registry, Miscellaneous.

92. Every person may, upon payment of a fee to be fixed by the Commissioners of Customs not exceeding 1*s.*, have access to the register book for the purpose of inspection at any reasonable time during the hours of official attendance of the registrar.

99. If any person interested in any ship or any share therein is, by reason of infancy, lunacy, or other inability, incapable of making any declaration or doing anything required or permitted by this act to be made or done by such incapable person in respect of registry, then the guardian or committee, if any, of such incapable person, or, if there be none, any person appointed by any court or judge possessing jurisdiction in respect of the property of incapable persons, upon the petition of any person on behalf of such incapable person, or of any other person interested in the making such declaration or doing such thing, may make such declaration, or a declaration as nearly corresponding thereto as circumstances permit, and do such thing in the name and on behalf of such incapable person ; and all acts done by such substitute shall be as effectual as if done by the person for whom he is substituted.

100. Whenever any person is beneficially interested, otherwise than by way of mortgage, in any ship or share therein registered in the name of some other person as owner, the person so interested shall, as well as the registered owner, be subject to all pecuniary penalties imposed by this or by any other act on owners of ships or shares therein, so nevertheless that proceedings may be taken for the enforcement of any such pecuniary penalties against both or either of the aforesaid parties, with or without joining the other of them.

National Character.

105. If any colours usually worn by her Majesty's ships, or any colours resembling those of her Majesty, or any distinctive national colours, except the red ensign usually worn by merchant ships, or except the Union Jack with a white border, or if the pendant usually carried by her Majesty's ships or any pendant in anywise resembling such pendant, are or is hoisted on board any ship or boat belonging to any subject of her Majesty without warrant for so doing from her Majesty or from the Admiralty, the master of such ship or boat, or the owner thereof, if on board the same, and every other person hoisting or joining or assisting in hoisting the same, shall for every such offence incur a penalty not exceeding 500*l.* ; and it shall be lawful for any officer on full pay in the military or naval service of her Majesty, or any British officer of the customs, or any British consular officer, to board any such ship or boat, and to take away any such jack, colours, or pendant ; and such jack, colours, or pendant shall be forfeited to her Majesty.

106. Whenever it is declared by this act that a ship belonging to any person or body corporate qualified according to this act to be owners of British ships shall not be recognised as a British ship, such ship shall not be entitled to any benefits, privileges, advantages, or protection usually enjoyed by British ships, and shall not be entitled to use the British flag or assume the British national character ; but, so far as regards the payment of dues, the liability to pains and penalties, and the punishment of offences committed on board such ship, or by any person belonging to her, such ship shall be dealt with in the same manner in all respects as if she were a recognised British ship.

Evidence.

107. Every register of or declaration made in pursuance of the second part of this act in respect of any British ship may be proved in any court of justice, or before any person having by law or by consent of parties authority to receive evidence, either by the production of the original or by an examined copy thereof, or by a copy thereof purporting to be certified under the hand of the registrar or other person having the charge of the original; which certified copies he is hereby required to furnish to any person applying at a reasonable time for the same, upon payment of 1s. for each such certified copy; and every such register or copy of a register, and also every certificate of registry of any British ship, purporting to be signed by the registrar or other proper officer, shall be received in evidence in any court of justice, or before any person having by law or by consent of parties authority to receive evidence as prima facie proof of all the matters contained or recited in such register when the register or such copy is produced, and of all the matters contained in or indorsed on such certificate of registry, and purporting to be authenticated by the signature of a registrar, when such certificate is produced.

PART III.

MASTERS AND SEAMEN.

Protection of Seamen from Imposition.

233. No wages due or accruing to any seaman or apprentice shall be subject to attachment or arrestment from any court: and every payment of wages to a seaman or apprentice shall be valid in law, notwithstanding any previous sale or assignment of such wages, or of any attachment, incumbrance, or arrestment thereon; and no assignment or sale of such wages or of salvage made prior to the accruing thereof shall bind the party making the same; and no power of attorney or authority for the receipt of any such wages or salvage shall be irrevocable.

234. No debt exceeding in amount 5s., incurred by any seaman after he has engaged to serve, shall be recoverable until the service agreed for is concluded.

Discipline.

258. Any person who secretes himself and goes to sea in any ship without the consent of either the owner, consignee, or master, or of a mate, or of any person in charge of such ship, or of any other person entitled to give such consent, shall incur a penalty not exceeding 20l., or be liable to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding four weeks.

PART IX.

LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS.

502. The ninth part of this act shall apply to the whole of her Majesty's dominions.

Limitation of Liability.

503. No owner of any sea-going ship or share therein shall be liable to make good any loss or damage that may happen without his actual fault or privity of or to any of the following things; that is to say,

- (1). Of or to any goods, merchandise, or other things whatsoever taken in or put on board any such ship, by reason of any fire happening on board such ship;
- (2). Of or to any gold, silver, diamonds, watches, jewels, or precious stones taken in or put on board any such ship, by reason of any robbery, embezzlement, making away with or secreting thereof, unless the owner or shipper thereof has, at the time of shipping the same, inserted in his bills of lading, or otherwise declared in writing to the master or owner of such ship, the true nature and value of such articles; to any extent whatever.

504. No owner of any sea-going ship or share therein shall, in cases where all or any of the following events occur without his actual fault or privity; that is to say,

- (1). Where any loss of life or personal injury is caused to any person being carried in such ship;
- (2). Where any damage or loss is caused to any goods, merchandise, or other things whatsoever on board any such ship;
- (3). Where any loss of life or personal injury is, by reason of the improper navigation of such sea-going ship as aforesaid, caused to any person carried in any other ship or boat;
- (4). Where any loss or damage is, by reason of any such improper navigation of such sea-going ship as aforesaid, caused to any other ship or boat, or to any goods, merchandise, or other things whatsoever on board any other ship or boat;

be answerable in damages to an extent beyond the value of his ship and the freight due or to grow due in respect of such ship during the voyage which at the time of the happening of any such events as aforesaid is in prosecution or contracted for, subject to the following proviso; that is to say, that in no case, where any such liability as aforesaid is incurred in respect of loss of life or personal injury to any passenger, shall the value of any such ship and the freight thereof be taken to be less than 15l. per registered ton.

505. For the purposes of the ninth part of this act, the freight shall be deemed to include the value of the carriage of any goods or merchandise belonging to the owners of the ship, passage money, and also the hire due or to grow due under or by virtue of any contract, except only such hire, in the case of a ship hired for time, as may not begin to be earned until the expiration of six months after such loss or damage.

506. The owner of every sea-going ship or share therein shall be liable in respect of every such loss of life, personal injury, loss of or damage to goods as aforesaid, arising on distinct occasions, to the same extent as if no other loss, injury, or damage had arisen.

Mode of Procedure.

507. Whenever any such liability as aforesaid has been or is alleged to have been incurred in respect of loss of life or personal injury, the Board of Trade may, in its discretion, after giving not less than three days' notice, by post or otherwise, to the party to be made defendant or defender, by warrant sealed with the seal of such board or signed by one of its secretaries or assistant secretaries, require the sheriff having jurisdiction over any place in the United Kingdom to summon a jury, at a time and place to be specified in such warrant, for the purpose of determining the following question; that is to say,

The number, names, and descriptions of all persons killed or injured by reason of any wrongful act, neglect, or default; and upon the receipt of such warrant the sheriff shall summon a jury of twenty-four indifferent persons, duly qualified to act as common jurymen in the superior courts, to meet at such time and place as aforesaid.

508. If either party to the inquiry desire any such question as aforesaid to be tried before a special jury, such question shall be so tried, provided that notice of such desire, if coming from the other party, is given to the Board of Trade before it has issued its warrant to the sheriff; and for that purpose the Board of Trade shall, by its warrant to the sheriff, require him to nominate a special jury for such trial; and thereupon the sheriff shall, as soon as conveniently may be after the receipt by him of such warrant, summon both the parties to appear before him, by themselves or their attorneys or agents, at some convenient time and place appointed by him, for the purpose of nominating a special jury; and at the place and time so appointed the sheriff shall proceed to nominate and strike a special jury in the manner in which such juries are required by the laws for the time being in force to be nominated or struck by the proper officers of the superior courts; and the sheriff shall appoint a day, and shall on the day so appointed proceed to reduce the said special jury to the number of twenty, in the manner used and accustomed by the proper officers of the superior courts.

509. The following provisions shall be applicable to the conduct of proceedings by the Board of Trade; that is to say,

- (1). The sheriff shall preside at such inquiry, and the Board of Trade shall be deemed in England and Ireland to be the plaintiff, and in Scotland the pursuer, both of which terms are hereinafter included in the term "plaintiff," with power to appoint any agent to act on its behalf, and shall have all such rights and privileges as the plaintiff is entitled to in actions at law; and the owner or owners of the ship or ships by whom such liability as last aforesaid is alleged to have been incurred shall be deemed in England and Ireland to be the defendant, and in Scotland the defender, both of which terms are hereinafter included in the term "defendant:"
- (2). Not less than ten days' notice of the time and place of the inquiry shall be served by the Board of Trade on the defendant;
- (3). Service on the master of any ship shall be deemed good service on the owner thereof, and the master shall, in respect of the proceedings on such inquiry, be deemed the agent and representative of the owner, with power to appear for him on such inquiry, and to do all matters and things which he might himself have done;

- (4). If the defendant does not appear at the time of such inquiry, the same shall be proceeded with as if he had appeared, upon due proof of service of notice having been made on him in pursuance of this act :
- (5). The impannelling of the jury and the summoning and attendance of witnesses shall be conducted and enforced in England and Ireland in manner provided by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, in cases of disputed compensation as to land, and in Scotland in manner provided by the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845, in like cases, or as near thereto as circumstances permit; and all provisions in the said acts having reference to cases where any question of disputed compensation requires to be determined by the verdict of a jury shall, with the requisite alterations, be considered as incorporated with this act, and to have reference to cases where the question of the liability of any owner in respect of any such accident as aforesaid requires to be determined by the verdict of a jury :
- (6). In England and Ireland the sheriff shall, if the Board of Trade so requires, or if the defendant so requires, and the Board of Trade consents thereto, appoint as assessor a barrister-at-law of competent knowledge and standing :
- (7). The costs incurred by all parties in and incidental to any such inquiry as aforesaid shall in England and Ireland be taxed by the Master of one of her Majesty's superior courts of common law as between attorney and client, and in Scotland by the auditor of the Court of Session as between agent and client; and shall, if the verdict in any inquiry is in favour of the plaintiff, be paid by the defendant; but if such verdict is in favour of the defendant, be paid by the Board of Trade out of the Mercantile Marine Fund :
- (8). The payment of all damages and costs in any such inquiry as aforesaid shall, upon application made to such superior court as aforesaid by the party entitled thereto, be enforced by rule or order of such court or a judge thereof, or otherwise as such court or judge thinks fit :
- (9). The Board of Trade may make any compromise it thinks fit as to the damages payable in respect of personal injury, or of the death of any person; and any damages received in pursuance of such compromise shall, so far as the same extend, be applied in the same manner and be subject to the same rules as if the same were damages recovered on an inquiry instituted by the Board of Trade.

510. The following rules shall be observed as to the damages recovered in any such inquiry, and the application thereof; that is to say,

- (1). The damages payable in each case of death or injury shall be assessed at 30%.
- (2). The damages found due on any such inquiry as aforesaid shall be the first charge on the aggregate amount for which the owner is liable, and shall be paid thereout in priority to all other claims :
- (3). All such damages as aforesaid shall be paid to her Majesty's Paymaster-General, and shall be distributed and dealt with by him in such manner as the Board of Trade directs; and in directing such distribution the Board of Trade shall have power in the first place to deduct and retain any costs incidental thereto; and in the next place, as regards the sums paid in respect of injuries, shall direct payment to each person injured of such compensation, not exceeding in any case the statutory amount, as the said board thinks fit; and, as regards the sums paid in respect of deaths, shall direct payment thereof for the benefit of the husband, wife, parent, and child of the deceased, or any of them, in such shares, upon such evidence, and in such manner as the said board thinks fit :
- (4). The Board of Trade shall refund to the owner any surplus remaining under its control after making such distribution as aforesaid, and the sum so refunded shall form part of the residue hereinafter mentioned :
- (5). The Board of Trade shall not, nor shall any person acting under it, be liable to any action, suit, account, claim, or demand whatsoever for or in respect of any act or matter done, or omitted to be done, in the distribution of such damages as aforesaid :
- (6). If the amount paid to her Majesty's Paymaster-General in manner aforesaid is insufficient to meet the demands upon it, the several claims thereon shall abate proportionally.

511. After the completion of such inquiry as aforesaid, if any person injured estimates the damages payable in respect of such injury, or if the executor or administrator of any deceased person estimates the damages payable in respect of his death, at a greater sum than such statutory amount, or, in case of a compromise having been made by the Board of Trade, than the amount accepted by such board by way of compensation for such injury or death as aforesaid, the person so estimating the same shall, upon repaying or obtaining the repayment by the Board of Trade to the owner of the amount paid by him to the Board of Trade in respect of such injury or death, be at liberty to bring an action for the recovery of damages in the same manner as if no power of instituting an inquiry had hereinbefore been given to the Board of Trade, subject to the following proviso; that is to say, that any damages recoverable by such person shall be payable only out of the residue, if any, of the aggregate amount for which the owner is liable, after deducting all sums paid to her Majesty's Paymaster-General in manner aforesaid; and if the damages recovered in such action do not exceed double the statutory amount, such person shall pay to the defendant in such action all the costs thereof, such costs to be taxed in England and Ireland as between attorney and client, and in Scotland as between agent and client.

512. In cases where loss of life or personal injury has occurred by any accident in respect of which the owner of any such ship as aforesaid is or is alleged to be liable in damages, no person shall be entitled to bring any action, or institute any suit or other legal proceeding in the United Kingdom, until the completion of the inquiry (if any) instituted by the Board of Trade, or until the Board of Trade has refused to institute the same; and the Board of Trade shall, for the purpose of entitling any person to bring an action or institute a suit or other legal proceeding, be deemed to have refused to institute such inquiry whenever notice has been served on it by any person of his desire to bring such action or institute such suit or other legal proceeding, and no inquiry is instituted by the Board of Trade in respect of the subject-matter of such intended action, suit, or proceeding for the space of one month after the service of such notice.

513. Whenever the Board of Trade, having refused in manner aforesaid to institute any inquiry, afterwards determines to institute the same, the damages and costs (if any) recovered on such inquiry shall be payable rateably with, and not in priority to, the costs and damages recovered in any other action, suit, or legal proceeding.

514. In cases where any liability has been or is alleged to have been incurred by any owner in respect of loss of life, personal injury, or loss of or damage to ships, boats, or goods, and several claims are made or apprehended in respect of such liability, then, subject to the right hereinbefore given to the Board of Trade of recovering damages in the United Kingdom in respect of loss of life or personal injury, it shall be lawful in England or Ireland for the High Court of Chancery, and in Scotland for the Court of Session, and in any British possession for any competent Court to entertain proceedings at the suit of any owner for the purpose of determining the amount of such liability subject as aforesaid, and for the distribution of such amount rateably amongst the several claimants, with power for any such Court to stop all actions and suits pending in any other court in relation to the same subject-matter; and any proceeding entertained by such Court of Chancery or Court of Session, or other competent Court, may be conducted in such manner, and subject to such regulations as to making any persons interested parties to the same, and as to the exclusion of any claimants who do not come in within a certain time, and as to requiring security from the owner, and as to payment of costs, as the Court thinks just.

515. All sums of money paid for or on account of any loss or damage in respect whereof the liability of the owner of any ship is limited by the ninth part of this act, and all costs incurred in relation thereto, may be brought into account among part owners of the same ship in the same manner as money disbursed for the use thereof.

Saving Clause.

516. Nothing in the ninth part of this act contained shall be construed—

To lessen or take away any liability to which any master or seaman, being also owner or part owner of the ship to which he belongs, is subject in his capacity of master or seaman; or

To extend to any British ship not being a recognised British ship within the meaning of this act.

LONDON, OCTOBER 28, 1854.

THE important provisions of the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, which confer upon the common-law courts the power of obtaining discovery, or that which is in the nature of discovery, hitherto vested in courts of equity alone, are in substance the following:—

In all causes in the superior courts, by order of the court or a judge, the plaintiff may with his declaration, and the defendant with his plea, or either of them by leave may at any other time, deliver to the opposite party or his attorney (provided that such party, if not a body corporate, would be liable to be called and examined as a witness upon such matter) interrogatories in writing upon any matter as to which discovery may be sought, requiring an answer thereto within ten days, in writing, by affidavit, to be sworn and filed in the ordinary way. The application for the order is to be made on affidavit of the party proposing to interrogate, unless unavoidably prevented, and his attorney or agent, (or in case of a body corporate, of their attorney or agent), stating that the deponents believe that the party will derive material benefit in the cause from the discovery which he seeks, that there is a good cause of action or defence on the merits, and, if the application be by the defendant, that the discovery is not sought for the purpose of delay. Omission to answer sufficiently, without just cause, is a contempt of court, and may be punished accordingly; or in such case the court or judge may direct an oral examination of the interrogated party, as to such points as he may direct, before a judge or master; and by such rule or order (or any subsequent one) the attendance of the party and the production of documents may be ordered. Such rule or order is to have the same effect, and be proceeded upon in like manner, as an order under the 1 Will. 4, c. 22. (Sects. 51—54). The statute of Will. 4, thus in part incorporated with the new act, is intitled "An Act to enable Courts of Law to order the Examination of Witnesses upon Interrogatories or otherwise," and, so far as is material to the present subject, provides for the examination of witnesses both within and without the jurisdiction of the court, (sect. 4); the compelling the attendance of witnesses who are within the jurisdiction of the court; the production of documents by them, (sect. 5); and the examination of persons in prison, (sect. 6). It also enacts that no deposition taken under the act shall be read in evidence at any trial without the consent of the party against whom the same may be offered, unless it shall appear to the satisfaction of the judge that the deponent is beyond the jurisdiction of the court, or dead, or unable from permanent sickness or infirmity to attend. (Sect. 10). Now, although by sect. 55 of the Procedure Act, 1854, the depositions may be used in the same manner as in the case of depositions taken under the 1 Will. 4, c. 22, yet we apprehend that the above clause is not applicable to the answer of the party to a cause, but that such answer may be used against him as an admission, whether he can be called or not; and, indeed, in the same manner as an answer in Chancery could hitherto be given in evidence against him. No difference in this respect seems to arise from the party to the cause now being a competent witness. (See Whyman v. Garth, 8 Exch. 803; 17 Jur., part 1, p. 559; 22 L. J., Ex., 316; in which it was held that the attesting witness must still be called, although the party to the cause may himself be examined*). The answer will be evidence only against the defendant answering, and not against a co-defendant, unless he himself refer to it as correct, or stand in a relation to the other defendant to make it evidence against himself.

It is to be observed that the discovery is to be sought only from the party himself, although provision is made by other sections for obtaining in some cases affidavits and the production of documents from third persons. In the case of a corporation, the interrogatories are to be administered to one or more of their officers; but unless this word can be construed to mean "members," the parties who have the peculiar knowledge of the circumstances, and are able to depose to them upon oath, are not examinable under the act. In equity the bill for discovery may be filed against the "members" of the corporation. (Adams's Doctrine of Equity, 20).

* Quere, as to the ground there suggested being the true one, viz. that there is a tacit agreement between the parties that he shall be called?

Before the rules which will be made under the new act are published, it may be useful to offer a few practical suggestions upon this subject. The party sought to be interrogated must be one who is liable to be called and examined as a witness upon the matter. This now comprehends a wide class, excluding only those who are incompetent from defect of religion or understanding, husband and wife in actions for criminal conversation, (16 & 17 Vict. c. 83, s. 2), and parties to an action for breach of promise of marriage. (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 4). In equity, discovery cannot be enforced against an incompetent defendant, viz. an infant, or lunatic without committee, or the Attorney-General when made a defendant on behalf of the Crown. (Micklethwaite v. Atkinson, 1 Coll. 173).

The order for the delivery of the interrogatories should be obtained, it seems, upon summons, and not ex parte; and the affidavit upon which it is to be obtained should be made by the party and his attorney; it should be intitled in the court and cause, and should state that an action has been brought, the cause of action, that there is a good cause of action [or defence] upon the merits, and that the deponents believe that the party will derive material benefit in the cause from being allowed to examine the opposite party on certain matters, which should, it seems, be shortly stated. If the application be made on behalf of the defendant, it must be alleged that it is not made for the purpose of delay. It may, perhaps, be required that the interrogatories proposed to be exhibited should be brought before the court or judge at the time of the application, in which case they may be annexed to the affidavit, or made an exhibit; but it was not necessary to do this in applications under the 1 Will. 4, c. 22. It may be safer to state, that the party whom it is sought to examine is liable to be called and examined as a witness upon the matters to which the interrogatories are to be directed.

The preparation of the interrogatories will require great care, so that the real questions which the party is desirous of proposing may be fully and sufficiently answered without evasion or ambiguity. The questions should not be leading ones, or in any way objectionable; otherwise they and their answers, or any part of them, may be struck out at the trial in favour of the party to whom they were proposed, but not of the party proposing them*. It must not be forgotten that both at law and in equity parties are not bound to answer questions which tend to criminate themselves, or in any way expose them to punishment, penalty, or forfeiture; or questions relating to privileged communications between counsel or attorney and client, or between husband and wife, (16 & 17 Vict. c. 83, s. 3); or questions which it is against public policy to answer. A defendant is not bound to answer questions of law or immaterial questions. In these cases, on the affidavit stating the grounds of exemption from answering, "just cause" will be shewn within the meaning of the act. The rule as to self-criminatory evidence is materially modified with respect to fraud. The objection to answer in such case is not, it seems, tenable, unless an indictment for conspiracy to defraud is pending, or about to be preferred. (Dummer v. The Corporation of Chippenham, 14 Ves. 245). It has also been held that a defendant may have so contracted with the plaintiff as to bind himself to make discovery of the facts relating to that contract, notwithstanding that it may subject him to pecuniary penalties, e. g. a London broker in relation to his employer. (Mitf. 195). With respect also to some transactions made illegal by statute, such as gaming and stock-jobbing, it has been expressly enacted that the parties shall be compellable to give discovery in equity, notwithstanding that by so doing they may expose themselves to penalties. (Mitf. 288; 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 3; 7 Geo. 2, c. 8, s. 2).

The general heading and conclusion of the interrogatories may be as follows:—

"In the Queen's Bench, [or 'Exchequer of Pleas,' or 'Common Pleas.'] Between { A. B., plaintiff,

C. D., defendant.

"Interrogatories delivered on behalf of A. B., plaintiff in the said action, to be answered by C. D., defendant in the said action, pursuant to a rule of the said Court, [or if under an order, 'pursuant to an order of —, one of her Majesty's justices of the same court,' or 'one of the barons of her Majesty's Exchequer'], made the — day of —, 1854." Conclude—"Take notice, if you omit, without just cause, sufficiently to answer, in writing, by affidavit, the above interrogatories within ten days from the delivery of the same to your attorney in the said action, you will be deemed to have committed a contempt of the said Court, and be liable to be proceeded against accordingly.

"E. F., plaintiff's attorney.

"To C. D., the said defendant."

A general form of interrogatories and of answers thereto is given in the Schedule (C.) to the new Chancery Orders of the 7th August, 1852*.

The answer should be to all material facts as to which the party is interrogated, and it should be distinct, complete, without needless prolixity, and to the best of the party's information and belief. A party cannot deny a portion of the questions, and then allege that by reason of such denial the rest has become immaterial. The answer should be positive, and not by way of implication or argument; but this rule is not to be enforced so as to be oppressive†.

In equity, in such and similar cases, the depositions should be suppressed on motion. (Shaw v. Lindsey, 15 Ves. 381).

Review.

The Parish: its Obligations and Powers; its Officers and their Duties; with Illustrations of the Practical Working of this Institution in all Secular Affairs. By TOULMIN SMITH, Esq., of Lincoln's-inn, Barrister-at-Law. 12mo., pp. 624. [Sweet.]

MR. TOULMIN SMITH'S great practical experience of the subject treated necessarily gives a peculiar value to this book; and besides the author's practical knowledge, his learning on the subject is of the soundest and most profound nature. His acquaintance with Doomsday Book, the Rolls of Parliament, and the Year Books is not, as is usually the case with modern writers who refer to those authorities, confined to a slight and superficial survey of a few points and cases, but amounts to an extensive and accurate knowledge, evidently derived from a long and careful study of these great title deeds of our English Constitution. Of the author's knowledge of the Rolls of Parliament we shall here mention one remarkable instance. It is commonly stated by writers of authority, that he who held a whole knight's fee was bound to serve in the wars for forty days in every year if called upon. Mr. Toulmin Smith appears to have thrown further light upon this subject from the Rolls of Parliament. Blackstone, who has usually been blindly followed on this point, says, (2 Bl. Com. 62), "He who held a whole fee by knight service was bound to attend his lord to the wars for forty days in every year if called upon;" and as his authority for this statement he cites, "Writ for this purpose in Memorand. Scacch. 36, prefixed to Maynard's Year Book, Edw. 2." On turning to this writ we do not find any mention whatever of the time being forty days. Blackstone further says, "If he held only half a knight's fee, he was only bound to attend twenty days, and so in proportion," (Ib.); and for this he cites Litt. §. 95. Littleton's evidence on the subject is far from conclusive; indeed, no more than conjectural. His words are, "And also it is commonly said, that some held by the service of one knight's fee, and some by the half of a knight's fee. And it is said, that when the King makes a voyage royal into Scotland to subdue the Scots, then he which holdeth by the service of one knight's fee ought to be with the King forty days, well and conveniently arrayed for the war; and he which holdeth his land by the moiety of a knight's fee ought to be with the King twenty days; and he which holdeth his land by the fourth part of a knight's fee ought to be with the King ten days; and so he that hath more, more, and he that hath less, less." For this statement all the authority is "it is said." Livy's authority, "ferunt" for "bos locutus," and the like.

Now, it is curious that the writs, on the authority of which Mr. Toulmin Smith shews (p. 14) that "every parish was required to furnish one foot soldier equipped and armed for sixty days," apply to the same point of time, and manifestly the same occasion, as the writ for men-at-arms referred to by Blackstone. The authorities cited by Mr. Smith are, "Rolls of Parliament, temp. Edw. 2, Appendix No. 1, and Id., Appendix No. 25;" and the occasion was the preparation for that memorable "voyage royal into Scotland to subdue the Scots" which had its result in the battle of Bannockburn. Since the writ regarding the foot soldier from the parish was for sixty days, we may conclude that the writ regarding the man-at-arms or knight would be for the same length of time.

The work is divided into nine chapters, treating successively of—I. The parish; its origin, characteristics, functions, divisions. II. Mode of discharging the functions of the parish, bye-laws, the vestry, delegated authority. III. Of parish officers, namely, sect. 1, churchwardens; sect. 2, surveyors of highways; sect. 3, constables; sect. 4, inspectors of lighting and watching; sect. 5, overseers of the poor; sect. 6, assistant overseers; sect. 7, guardians of the poor; sect. 8, collectors; sect. 9, auditors; sect. 10, registrars of births, deaths, and marriages; sect. 11, beadle; sect. 12, sexton; sect. 13, parish clerk; sect. 14, vestry clerk; sect. 15, the choice of officers in general, the duty of every man therein, and the responsibility of those chosen. IV. Parish committees. V. Trustees of parish property. VI. The position of the parson or minister in respect to the affairs of the parish. VII. Subject-matters of parish action, namely, sect. 1, roads, ways, and drainage; sect. 2, watch and ward; sect. 3, public health, recent legislation thereon; sect. 4, public lighting; sect. 5, fire engines; sect. 6, the poor; sect. 7, the church fabric, goods, services, and pews; sect. 8, burial; sect. 9, registration; sect. 10, inclosure of commons; sect. 11, inrolments; sect. 12, parish records; sect. 13, perambulation; sect. 14, general arrangements necessary for efficient action. VIII. Rates and taxes, namely, highway rate, lighting or lighting and watching rate, county rate and police rate, poor rate, church rate, burial rate, and penalties under bye-laws. IX. The causes of any existing inefficiency in parish action, and the means of securing constant full efficiency. There are two very valuable appendices, the first consisting of an extract from the vestry minutes of Steeple Ashton, Wilts, illustrating the administration of the Poor Law during the first twenty-five years after the 43 Eliz., and the system of a parochial "friendly society" for loans on security; the second, of excellent practical forms for the more effectual carrying out of the functions of committees and boards, (parish, not central), and for securing the fulfilment of the duties of their officers.

In the multitude of constitutional, legal, and practical matters of the very highest value, and of vital importance to the existence of England as a free and well-governed country, it is not easy to select any particular chapters or sections as specimens of the whole. There is, however, one head of vast importance, the management of which has been, we may say, entirely taken out of the hands of the parish, and committed to a central board, which we shall select for consideration, partly because we believe we may be able to add some further weight to Mr. Toulmin Smith's just remarks on it.

After quoting the 11th section of stat. 3 Will. & M. c. 11, which contains these fatal words, "and that no other person be allowed to have or receive collection at the charge of the said parish, but by authority under the hand of one justice of the peace residing within such parish," &c., Mr. Toulmin Smith says, "The fatal exceptional admission of the power of a justice of the peace disturbed the action of the system, and became the source of innumerable and continually increasing ills. So soon as 1722 these evils were recorded in the statute-book; but yet the irresponsible power was allowed to remain; as if irresponsible power was the more likely to be satisfactorily exercised because a man was called a 'justice' instead of being called an 'overseer.' That fine old constitutional and soundly logical principle was forgotten, which stands recorded on the Rolls of Parliament of four centuries earlier, that 'more trust is to be placed in the opinion of the men of the neighbourhood than in the bare word of any one man.' (Rolls of Parliament, 21 Edw. 1, A. D. 1293, No. 7). When, however, the evil had come to an intolerable head, instead of its being dealt with in a statesmanlike spirit, it was dealt with, in our own day, in the same narrow spirit as before; it may properly be said in a more narrow spirit than ever. Self-opinionated doctrinarism must needs apply its theories. Instead of full scope being given to free and responsible action, and irresponsible action 'and interference being removed, while the intelligent impulse and opportunity were given to all sound suggestions, a new authority, absolutely irresponsible, and incapable of even those means of getting at the needful knowledge which a single justice may have, was set up; and those who are most interested in bringing about the best results, who are alone able to know all the facts, and whose unfettered action it was that had before been mischievously interfered with, were absolutely deprived of all action, responsibility, and control whatever.

"By the unconstitutional measure which was passed in 1834, known as the Poor-law Amendment Act, Parliament abdicated both its fundamental duties and its functions. Power, which Parliament has no constitutional authority to delegate at all, was pretended to be given to an entirely irresponsible and secret body to make rules and orders at its arbitrary pleasure, which overseers of the poor and all such officers should be obliged to obey. Instead of the parishes obtaining what was needed—a more thorough and independently responsible control over their own officers—all control whatever was taken away. The parish has to pay the poor rates, and that is, practically, nearly all that is left to it. It has no sort of control, direct or indirect, over the expenditure or application of the rates, nor over the officers who administer them. Thus indifference is engendered, and a moral degradation, of the most injurious and debasing character and tendency, is enforced; while, on the other hand, social treachery, and secret sycophancy, and moral and intellectual suberviency are cherished and rewarded.

"The overseer is no longer, therefore, the officer of that name found in the acts of Elizabeth. He has now only to do the bidding of others, either as dictated by statute or by irresponsible functionaries. He cannot exercise his own intelligence and zeal in the endeavour to do what he can discover to be best for the common good of all his neighbours, after conferring, as the statutes of Elizabeth required him to do continually, with the churchwardens and other overseers." (Pp. 128—130).

There was unquestionably a vast body of most valuable evidence regarding the condition of the agricultural labourers in particular, and the administration of the Poor Laws, collected by the Poor-law Commission of Inquiry which was appointed in 1832, and made their report in 1834. This evidence is particularly full on the subject of the pernicious effects of the interference of the magistrates with the free and healthy action of the ancient constitutional and common-law authorities of the parish. As the majority of the commissioners were unquestionably men of average veracity and honour, there is no attempt to suppress this evidence. On the contrary, it is brought out with the most complete fullness and effect. In the volume of "Extracts from the Information received by His Majesty's Commissioners as to the Administration and Operation of the Poor Laws," published "by authority," in 1833, this important point is particularly and repeatedly insisted upon. This volume contains a very carefully prepared table of "contents," also published "by authority," from which it will be sufficient to quote two or three of the heads under the title "Magistrates," with the references in support of them.

"Magistrates.

"Support persons of vicious habits, in opposition to the parochial authorities, 4, 29, 98, 108, 118, 119, 120, 121, 123, 125, 128, 160, 160, 162, 262, 263, 374, 375, 376, 203.

"Injurious effects of interference with parish authorities, 101, 166, 204, 373.

"Overseers act mischievously, contrary to their conviction, knowing that the magistrates will otherwise compel them, 101.

"Advantages of non-interference by, with parish authorities, 99, 100, 200.

"Some of the most enlightened admit the evils of their interference, 126, 127, 128."

And at p. 373 of the same volume we find the following passage:—"Mr. Doewra attributed the bad character and conduct of the native population to the countenance and support which the magistrates afford to the complaints of paupers, against which he declared all resistance on the part of the overseers to be vain; and he accounted for the good conduct of the expatriation by the fact of their having no power to apply to the magistrates, and being in consequence solely dependent on character for employment."

Again: in the Commissioners' Report (1834) we meet with the following evidence, which appears to be quite conclusive:—

"The opinion of many of the most experienced magistrates themselves coincides with that expressed by occupiers and overseers, that the over liberality of magistrates in granting relief has been a principal cause of the high rates, and of the dependence of labourers on the parish. In many instances they have adopted a dictatorial tone to the parish overseers, which has induced men of respectability to avoid the office." (P. 138, 8vo. ed.)

Another assistant commissioner says, "The effect upon the vestries, I was led to believe, was to cause many respectable persons to refrain from attending." (P. 141, Id.) In other words, to destroy altogether the constitutional and common-law powers of the most ancient of our institutions, upon the healthy and efficient working of which, more than any other institution whatever, depends the cultivation of the qualities that distinguish Englishmen from beasts and slaves.

Why, then, it may be asked, instead of at least first trying the experiment of taking from these magistrates their unconstitutional and most pernicious powers, was the expedient at once resorted to of appointing a central board, with a monstrously cumbersome and costly, as well as unconstitutional and inefficient, machinery? It would lead us too far out of our way at present to give a full answer to this question; but we have said enough to shew that the clear and simple course now is to sweep away this central board, with all its appendage rubbish, and to take from the magistrates all power of dictating to or interfering with parishes in this unconstitutional manner.

The following passage on the subject of public footpaths will give some idea of the thoroughly practical character of the work before us:—

"It is of great importance that it be always borne in mind that footpaths are included within all the liabilities and responsibilities as to highways. It is not the mode of passage that makes a road a highway; it is the fact of the right of the public to pass over it—whether by foot, horse, or carriage is all one as regards the law and the principle. A field footpath is just as much a highway as the broadest carriage road in the land. The highway surveyors are just as much bound to keep the former open, in good repair, and freed from any obstruction, as the latter. This is too often forgotten. It is well remarked by a writer already quoted, that under the common law 'no distinction can be found between footpaths and carriage roads; the right of the public is of exactly the same quality over the one as over the other, and it ought to receive the same support in both instances. It is frequently asserted that footpaths are very injurious to the property over which they pass. This I deny, if it be meant that they are injurious to the quantum of property vested in the owner. The soil is not so valuable as it otherwise would be, but it is as productive

'as it ever has been to the proprietor; and it was with reference to its present capability that he purchased the estate. Every right of way is a public easement, which must have been acquired with the consent of the owner of the soil; [more correctly, which was reserved and retained to the public use when the rest of the land, at first altogether common, was allowed to be appropriated to separate proprietorship.] In almost every instance the closing a public way for the benefit of the proprietor is an absolute gift, without consideration, to an individual, out of the possessions of the public.* There has of late years been a systematic course of attempts by owners of land or their agents to close public footpaths. Formerly this could not be done. The periodical inquiries that took place kept every man's attention alive to such attempts, and gave a ready and certain remedy against them. The attempts that now take place are made because no such wholesome check exists, but they are not less made in defiance of law and right. They are made because it is thought that no individual man will run the risks of a contest on the question. It is the duty of the highway surveyors, on behalf of the community they act for, to watch these things, and to resist every attempt to close or divert any footpath. The public fieldpaths of England are the most valuable possession of the poor of England. They constitute no less one of the great charms of the country to every man of taste and feeling. But to the poor man they are the chief means of health, and the great helps in what is to him income, namely, time and distance. They are as much his birthright and inheritance and property as the acres they lie over are those of the proprietors whose agents seek to 'improve' that property by depriving others of their rights and property. It is as much a fraud and a robbery and a crime against society and the state to stop up a public footpath, over which the poor man is accustomed to pass, as it is to stop the rich man on the highway and demand his money or his life." (Pp. 315—317).

Established 1797.

PRESIDENT—ANTHONY HUDSON, Esq., Banker.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Lieut.-General Sir ROBT. JOHN HARVEY, C. B.

It is provided by the constitution of the Society that the insured shall be free from all responsibility; and to guarantee the engagements of the office, a fund of 350,000*l.* has been subscribed by a numerous and opulent proprietary, which fund has been further increased by the accumulation of an additional reserve, now amounting to 98,800*l.* Returns of three-fifths of the profits of the Company are periodically made to parties insuring, who have thus from time to time received from the Society sums amounting in the aggregate to nearly 380,000*l.*

The rates of premium are in no case higher than those charged by the other principal offices making no returns to their insurers.

The business of the Company exceeds 62,000,000*l.*, and, owing to the liberality with which its engagements have been performed, is rapidly increasing. The duty paid to Government for the year 1852 was 74,037*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*; and the amount insured on farming stock was upwards of 9,066,000*l.*

LONDON, NOVEMBER 4, 1854.

THE writ of mandamus, which has been of so high a character as seldom to fall within the reach of her Majesty's subjects, promises all at once to become a very popular weapon in the hands of litigant parties. Proceedings with regard to the old prerogative writ are simplified by the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854: the rule for the issuing of the writ may be absolute in the first instance, the writ bear teste on the day of its issuing, and be returnable forthwith, in term or in vacation; and the provisions of the Procedure Acts, 1852 and 1854, are to apply, so far as they are applicable, to the pleadings and proceedings upon the writ. (Sects. 76, 77).

It is by means of a writ of mandamus also that the new jurisdiction conferred on common-law courts, for enforcing the specific performance of contracts, is to be exercised; and it is to this procedure that we are now about to call attention.

The language of the chief section on this subject is curious, but we believe was rendered so by late alterations made in the bill during its progress, and not by its original framers. Indeed, we may remark, with respect to the composition of the act of 1854, that it is deserving of much praise on account of its brevity and condensation. We doubt whether any statute working such great changes was ever expressed in such few words. The common effect of extreme brevity, namely, obscurity, will probably be found in some few of its sections; but taken as a whole, and without reference to some of the clumsy additions and omissions for which certain members of the Legislature are answerable, we consider it almost a model act.

To return to specific performance: it is enacted, that the plaintiff in any action in any of the superior courts, except replevin and ejectment, may indorse upon the writ and copy to be served a notice that he intends to claim a writ of mandamus, and may thereupon claim in the declaration, either together with any other demand which may now be enforced in such action, or separately, a writ of mandamus, commanding the defendant to fulfil any duty in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested. The declaration is to set forth sufficient grounds on which the claim is founded, and that the plaintiff is personally interested therein, and that he sustains or may sustain damage by the non-performance of such duty, and that performance has been *demand*ed by him, and refused or neglected. The pleadings and proceedings to be the same, and costs recoverable, as in an ordinary action for the recovery of damages. If judgment is given for the writ to issue, the Court may, besides issuing execution for costs and damages, also issue a peremptory writ of mandamus, to which no return but that of compliance shall be allowed. It may be enforced by attachment, and have the same effect as a peremptory writ of mandamus issued out of the Court of Queen's Bench. The Court may also order the act to be done by the plaintiff or some other person at the expense of the defendant. (Sects. 68—74).

It is to be observed, that the writ may be claimed in the Exchequer or Common Pleas as well as the Queen's Bench. The duty to be fulfilled means, we presume, a duty or obligation recognised at law, whether arising from a contract or from the relation of parties*, and not a merely equitable duty. Suppose, for instance, an agreement to execute a lease; the claim may be for damages for breach of the agreement, and for a mandamus to compel the defendant to execute the lease. By some, we believe, it is considered that the words will not only include equitable duties, but even confer a larger jurisdiction than that which has been exercised in equity—e. g. the compelling an actor to perform†, or the enforcing a contract for the sale of good-will of a business. The plaintiff must be "personally" interested in the fulfilment of the duty—the word originally used was "individually." May parties suing en autre droit, or for injuries to relative rights, have a mandamus? How is the defendant to object that it is not a proper case for specific performance? Can he do so before judgment has been obtained in the action? What effect will the claim for a mandamus have upon costs, where the other claim falls within the county court jurisdiction?

* This was, it seems, the intention of the Common-law Commissioners. (See Second Report, p. 39).

† See Kemble v. Kean, (6 Sim. 333). It is probably seen that Mademoiselle Rachel was by the French Court to perform a character without own request, or to pay heavy penalties.

As to the awarding the peremptory writ, the Courts will doubtless exercise a discretion in the matter analogous to that exercised in equity, and will not therefore award it where the injury may be fully compensated for in damages, or where specific performance would be unduly oppressive.

In the absence of rules and forms on this subject, we may suggest the following indorsement on the writ and copy:—

"Take notice, that the said A. B. intends [also] to claim a writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to [accept from the plaintiff a lease of a house for twenty-one years, at the rent of 50*l.* per annum, pursuant to the defendant's agreement with the plaintiff, dated the — day of —, A.D. 1854.]"

The declaration may, it is submitted, be as follows:—

"[Venue], to wit.—A. B., by C. D. his attorney, sues E. F. For that by a certain agreement, made between the plaintiff and the defendant, it was agreed that the plaintiff should grant to the defendant, and that the defendant should accept, a lease of a house for twenty-one years, from the — day of —, A.D. 1854, at the yearly rent of 50*l.*; and it thereupon became the duty of the defendant to accept the said lease; and the plaintiff says that he has performed all things on his part to be performed, and that at the time of the commencement of this suit he was, and still is, personally interested in the fulfilment of the said duty by the defendant, and that the defendant has refused to fulfil the same, although the plaintiff demanded such fulfilment a reasonable time before the commencement of this suit, and that the plaintiff has sustained damage by reason of the defendant's non-fulfilment of such duty; and the plaintiff claims a writ of mandamus commanding the defendant to fulfil the said duty by accepting the said lease from the plaintiff."

Rebibeis.

There is probably no part of this book which displays more learning and ability than the chapter (chap. vi) on "the position of the parson or minister in respect to the affairs of the parish." Mr. Toulmin Smith shews, by a minute and searching examination of the authorities, the illegality of the attempt to assume the parson or minister to be head of the parish and president of all parish meetings. He shews that parishes are a secular, not an ecclesiastical, division, and "were instituted for the ease and benefit of the people, and not of the parson." (Per Holt, C. J., 3 Salk. 85). He exposes the illegal attempts of Laud and others to render the body of the clergy a mere sort of state police, and the flagrant ignorance or contempt of the laws of England exhibited on various occasions by the Ecclesiastical Courts. He shews, that notwithstanding the attacks of Laud on the English Constitution have been renewed even in the present day, and with a greater impunity than attended Laud's exertions, by such measures as the Churchwardens Election Bill, the device of the present Bishop of London, some of the greatest of English judges—Chief Justices Hale and Holt, and Lord Hardwicke—held, that of common right the choosing churchwardens belonged to the parishioners, though (in some parishes) the incumbent had got the power of electing one churchwarden by custom; that the claim of the minister to occupy the chair at vestry meetings, as well as to be head of the parish, is illegal, Lord Hardwicke saying, "I do not find any resolution, or even opinion, to give the vicar a right of presiding. There is, indeed, a notion that he has a right to preside, but that has taken its rise from special vestries. . . . We must resort to the common right, which is in the whole assembly, where all are [that is, before the people were robbed of their common-law right by Sturges Bourne's Act] upon an equal foot." (Stoughton v. Reynolds, Lee, t. Hardw. 276; Str. 1046). And Lee, J., saying, "The parson, perhaps, has a right of sitting [as a member of vestry] from his freehold in the church; but I do not think that can any way give him a greater right or authority than any of the other members of the assembly." (Per Lee, J., Fort. 172).

Beginning with the Year Books, in which there are several cases of the highest interest and value relating to parish government, but not one which affirms the right of the priest or minister to assume the headship of the parish, or to preside at parish meetings, or even to be considered an integral part of the parish, but where, on the contrary, all these modern assumptions are distinctly negatived, Mr. Toulmin Smith proceeds to shew that neither the canons nor the statutes, nor even the ecclesiastical writers themselves, give any countenance to these pretensions. Finally, he examines with great minuteness the case of Wilson v. M'Math, (1819), and shews that that case is not law, but that the judgment given by the Ecclesiastical Court in that case cannot fail to recall a passage in Ayliffe's Parergon, (p. 186), where he speaks of some who "sit as judges in our ecclesiastical courts, and determine law-suits, without any knowledge of the law."

One characteristic feature of this work is the consistency with which the relative importance of the common and statute law is throughout developed and insisted on, as well as the ignorance of the common law now often exhibited by the Legislature.

We are by no means unqualified admirers of the wisdom of Coke; yet he was not quite so great a fool as Bentham and some of his echos represent him as being. In the preface to the fourth part of his report, Coke says that the artist in law-making should set himself "to know the several kinds of the municipal laws of his own proper nation, for the innovation or change of some laws is most dangerous, and there is less peril in the alteration of others—to understand what the true sense and sentence of the laws now standing is, and how far forth former laws have made provision in the case that falleth into question."

The truth of the proposition which we have marked in italics we hardly think that any man, lawyer or non-lawyer, parliament man or non-parliament man, minister or minister's man, will be hardly enough to dispute. Another proposition, which may be open to more controversy, at least as to its exact limits, is, that a large proportion of the modern statute law is made without a competent knowledge, on the part of the framers of such law, "how far forth former laws have made provision in the case that falleth into question."

* The Select Vestries Act, however, (59 Geo. 3, c. 12), expressly directs the majority to choose a chairman, though the minister is one of the select vestry.

There are statutes passed every session of Parliament, adding a yearly increase to that huge, confused, contradictory mass, of which no candid man even pretends to know the contents, some of them creating a vast machinery of functionaries, under the pretext of providing remedies for cases which the laws already in existence, and which had been in existence for hundreds of years, had made ample provision for.

Under such a system, is it surprising that the law should be uncertain, that it should be absolutely unknown even to lawyers, or that more doubts should arise upon the statute than upon the common law? We have on a former occasion cited Bacon's opinion to this effect. Coke's opinion agrees with it. He says, (Preface to 2 Rep.), "The greatest questions arise, not upon any of the rules of the common law, but oftentimes upon acts of Parliament overlaid with provisions and additions, and many times on a sudden penned or concocted by men of none or very little judgment in law." And also, "If acts of Parliament were after the old fashion penned, and by such only as perfectly knew what the common law was before the making of any act of Parliament concerning that matter, as also how far forth former statutes had provided remedy for former mischiefs and defects discovered by experience, then should very few questions in law arise, and the learned should not so often and so much perplex their heads to make atonement and peace, by construction of law, between insensible and disagreeing words, sentences, and provisions, as they now do."

Moreover, in our own time we find, even in official lawyers, ignorance of the real nature and extent of the common law of England as great as that of those who are content to accept Bentham's witticism* as a variegated picture of the customs, the free and natural growth of the experience during many ages—more than a thousand years—of the most free and most practically sagacious race of men recorded in history. What has Prussia, what has France, what has Belgium got from her code, that they who live under the common law of England should exchange their common law, with all its defects, for a code manufactured even by the hands of such a philosopher as Bentham, after such models, or after others floating in the philosophic mind? Let it be a lesson of humility to the philosophic mind to reflect, that the principle of representative government, for want of which all the ancient experiments in government were failures, after escaping the inventive faculty of the greatest philosophers of antiquity, was discovered by a rude but practically sagacious baron of the dark ages. And there are many other parts of the common law of England which, though a man of wit, like Bentham, might see some ridiculous points in them, contain pieces of intellectual machinery surpassing in practical ingenuity the mightiest achievements of a Plato's or a Newton's thought. Land and Strafford entertained an intense hatred for the common law. They were never tired of abusing it, and they had cause. While it existed, neither ecclesiastical nor civil tyranny could have uncontrolled dominion in England. There are men in the present day with intentions as hostile to the common law, and for somewhat similar reasons, as Laud and Strafford, and whose pernicious designs demand as vigilant an attention from those who are opposed to all such designs.

For all these reasons, it appears to be of the first importance, that, by such means as have been indicated in former articles, the common law should, without further loss of time, be put into such a shape, that * "When a man has a dog to teach, he falls upon him and beats him; the animal takes note in his own mind of the circumstances in which he has been beaten, and the intimation thus received becomes, in the mind of the dog, a rule of the common law." (Bentham's Rationale of Judicial Evidence, vol. 2, p. 475).

lawyers at least may no longer have any excuse for being ignorant of its provisions.

In speaking of a bill introduced into Parliament in the session of 1854 by Mr. Evelyn, the member for West Surrey, declaratory of the power that has always been inherent in parish vestries to take measures for all things that are for the common good, Mr. Toulmin Smith has thus characterised the spirit and tone of its official opponent:—

"The official opponent of this bill shewed himself 'not only ignorant of, or resolved to treat with contempt, common-law and constitutional principle, but even ignorant who those are that attend and have votes at vestries. He insulted the common sense of his hearers and the public by talking of this bill 'giving powers to 'paupers,' and by ridiculing the idea 'of vestry-appointed bodies having a corporate capacity. Though Under-Secretary of State, he must be presumed to have been altogether unaware of the existence, or ignorant of the provisions, as already stated, 'of the Highway Act, the Lighting and Watching Act, Gilbert's Poor-law Act, the Burial Act of 1852, and many others, as well as even of the simplest rules 'of law as to the choice of churchwardens. He attempted, moreover, to represent that a committee appointed to do a specific work only, subject to rules to be laid down by vestry, and which committee cannot raise or spend a penny without the express consent of the vestry, has arbitrary powers. At the prospect of such powers he professed to look with horror. Let the Board of Health, or any other body of irresponsible functionaries, arbitrarily order and tax—he does but burn with zeal to enlarge their powers in that way. But for any parish to think of doing anything for itself, and of itself paying for it as it thinks right—this, indeed, is not to be endured.'" (P. 222).

Sales by Commissioners, and Distribution of Purchase Monies.

26. Subject to the restrictions hereinafter mentioned, where any land situate in a colony within the jurisdiction of the commissioners is subject to any incumbrance, the commissioners shall have power to sell the same, or such part thereof as they think fit, upon application made to them in manner hereinafter mentioned by the owner of such land or any incumbrancer thereon.

27. Where an application for a sale of any such land as aforesaid has been made to any competent tribunal in the colony, and dismissed with costs, no application by the same party for a sale of the same land, or any part thereof, shall be entertained by the commissioners unless it is shewn that such costs have been paid.

28. Where any such land as aforesaid is vested in any person or persons in trust for any owner, an application for the sale thereof may be made by such owner, either with or without the concurrence of such trustee or trustees, or by such trustee or trustees with the concurrence of such owner.

29. Where any incumbrance is vested in a trustee or trustees, or settled on divers persons in succession, the commissioners may act on an application made by such trustee or trustees, or by the first person entitled to the income of such incumbrance, or by any other person having, in the opinion of the commissioners, an amount of interest in the incumbrance sufficient to justify his making an application for a sale.

30. Every application for a sale of land under this act shall be in such form as the commissioners direct, and may, subject to any rules to be framed by the commissioners, be made, at the discretion of the applicant, either to the commissioners acting in England, or in the colony in which such land is situate.

31. The commissioners shall, upon the receipt of such application as aforesaid, make such inquiries as to the circumstances of the land in respect of which the same is made, and of the parties interested therein, either as incumbrancers, owners, or otherwise, and direct such notices to be given, as they think necessary to enable them to form a judgment as to the expediency of a sale, and shall hear, by themselves, their counsel or agents, any persons interested in such land who may apply to them to be heard, and shall, upon the conclusion of such inquiries, and after hearing such parties, if any, as aforesaid, make such order in the premises as to the allowance or disallowance of a sale of such land as they think just.

32. No sale shall be made by the commissioners of any land in the cases following:—

Where the amount of yearly interest on the incumbrances attaching to the land in respect of which any application is made, and to any other land subject to the same incumbrances, does not exceed one-half of the net yearly value of such land and other land, if any, such yearly value to be calculated on the average profits or income derived therefrom after deducting all necessary outgoings during the preceding seven years, or during such other period as the commissioners may, having regard to any special circumstances, think fit:

Where, for any reason whatever, it appears to the commissioners unjust or inexpedient that a sale should be made.

33. In making any sale of land under this act, the commissioners shall have regard to the interests of any yearly tenants or other persons, not being incumbrancers, who may be entitled for the time being, by themselves or their agents, to receive or retain the produce of such land, or of any part thereof, and they may, in their discretion, deal with such interests in such one of the two following ways as they think just; that is to say, they may either make the sale subject to such interests, or may cause such interests to be valued at a gross amount, and treat the amount so valued as an incumbrance, assigning thereto such priority as they think fit.

34. In cases where any land to be sold is subject—

To dower or any interests in the nature of dower,

To any annual or contingent incumbrance,

To any incumbrance under the terms of which the incumbrancer cannot be required to accept payment of the principal money for a term of years yet to come, the commissioners shall deal with such interests in one of the two following ways; that is to say, they shall either make the sale subject to such dower, interests, or incumbrances, or they may, with the consent of the parties entitled to such dower, interests, or incumbrances, cause the same to be valued at a gross amount, assigning thereto such priority as they think just.

35. Every sale of land in pursuance of this act shall be made, under the control and direction of the commissioners, by public sale or private contract, together or in parcels, at such time and place, and generally in such manner, as the commissioners think fit; and every conveyance of land so sold shall be made by the commissioners under their seal, and shall be signed by the chief commissioner, or such other commissioner or commissioners as the chief commissioner may direct, and the execution by any other party of such conveyance shall be unnecessary; and such conveyance shall express the interests and incumbrances (if any) subject to which the sale is made, and may be in such form as the commissioners may, by order, from time to time direct, or as near thereto as circumstances permit.

36. No sale made by the commissioners shall affect any of the following rights or payments:

Any right of common, right of way, or other easement;

Any tithes or like ecclesiastical dues;

Any Crown rents or other like sums payable at fixed periods to her Majesty or to the government of the colony; except in cases where the commissioners undertake to commute such Crown rents or other like sums as aforesaid, which they shall be at liberty to do, with the sanction of the Legislature of such colony, in cases where they think it will be for the benefit of the parties interested in the produce of such sale; and if they do so, they shall express in the conveyance that the land sold is discharged from such Crown rents or other sums, as the case may be.

37. The purchase money on every sale shall be paid, as the commissioners may direct, either into the Bank of England, or into the commissariat chest of some colony named by them, and be carried to an account to be opened in the name of the commissioners to the credit in each case of the land, (describing the same by the name of the plantation or estate to which it belongs, or by any other name the commissioners think fit); and upon proof being made to the satisfaction of the commissioners, and in such manner as they may direct, of any monies so having been paid in, the chief commissioner, or such other commissioner or commissioners as the chief commissioner directs, shall indorse a certificate on the conveyance of such payment; and any purchaser who has paid any money into the Bank or into such commissariat chest as aforesaid shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the application thereof, and such indorsement shall be evidence of such payment; and in all cases her Majesty's Government shall guarantee the safety of all monies paid in pursuance of this act into the commissariat chest of any colony.

38. Every conveyance made by the commissioners in pursuance of this act shall vest in the purchaser the land so sold, subject to such rights and uncommuted payments, if any, as are hereinbefore declared not to be affected by any sale by the commissioners, but discharged from all other interests, rights, claims, and incumbrances, except such as may, in pursuance of the power hereinbefore given, be expressed in the conveyance to be subsisting on such land, and no conveyance made by the commissioners shall be set aside on the ground of their not having had jurisdiction over the subject-matter thereof.

39. The commissioners shall have power to order the delivery to the purchaser, or as he directs, of all deeds and documents of title belonging or exclusively relating to the land sold, which are in the possession or power of any of the parties to their order, and, on the application of any purchaser, to issue an order for the delivery to him of the possession of the land sold, or of such part thereof as may not be in the occupation of any person subject to whose interest the sale was made.

40. Upon a sale of land under this act an incumbrancer or other interested person, (with the exception of the person upon whose application the sale was made), and with the leave of the commissioners such last-mentioned person, may purchase such land or any part thereof; and if an incumbrancer becomes a purchaser, he may, if the commissioners think fit, retain out of the purchase money such amount as would, in the judgment of the commissioners, be eventually payable thereout to him in respect of his incumbrance, or any less sum on account of such amount, and pay the residue only into the Bank or commissariat chest; and such retainer shall be without prejudice to the power of the commissioners to require such purchaser to pay back into the Bank or commissariat chest the whole or any part of the amount so retained by him, in the event of their afterwards determining that he is not entitled to retain the same.

41. The commissioners shall apply the money arising from any sale made by them in satisfaction of the payments herein-after mentioned according to the order following; that is to say,

Firstly, in paying to her Majesty or the government of the colony the consideration for the purchase of such Crown rents or other like sums, if any, as the commissioners may have thought fit to commute in manner aforesaid:

Secondly, in paying all costs, charges, and expenses of and incidental to the sale, including the application for the same, or such of them as they think fit to allow:

Thirdly, in satisfying the incumbrances affecting such land according to their priorities:

And, lastly, in paying the surplus to the parties who were previously to the sale entitled to such land as owners, if such parties had an absolute interest therein, but if they had not an absolute interest, then the commissioners shall lay out the same in manner hereinafter mentioned:

and for the purposes of this act the commissioners shall have power, having due regard to the laws and customs of each colony, to declare the rights and priorities of all parties interested in such land, whether as owners, incumbrancers, or otherwise howsoever.

42. In cases where the parties, who were previously to the sale entitled to such land as owners, had not an absolute interest, such surplus as aforesaid of the purchase money shall be settled to the same uses, upon the same trusts, and in the same manner to and in which the land sold stood settled, or such of them as may be capable of taking effect; and until such money is so laid out, it may be paid to trustees to be appointed or approved by the commissioners, for the purpose of being so laid out as aforesaid, with such power for the investment thereof in government or colonial stocks, funds, or securities in the meantime, and such directions for the payment of the income of such investment in the manner in which the rents of the land to be purchased would be applicable, as the commissioners think fit.

43. In cases where the commissioners appoint or direct the appointment of trustees for any of the purposes of this act, it shall be lawful for the commissioners to make or to direct to be made such provision as they think fit for the appointment of new trustees, on any event to be determined by the commissioners.

44. In cases where a part only of land subject to any incumbrance is sold, the commissioners may charge the part not sold with such incumbrance, or an apportioned part thereof, in exoneration of the money arising from the sale, and enable persons to release the money arising from the part so sold from any incumbrance, or to relinquish their claim on such money in respect thereof, without impairing such incumbrance as to the remaining part of the land originally charged.

45. In cases where it appears to the commissioners unjust or inexpedient that a valuation should be made of such interests and incumbrances as they are hereinbefore authorised to cause to be valued at a gross sum, it shall be lawful for them to set aside and invest any portion of the money arising from any sale in such manner as they think fit, to meet the claims of any such interested persons or incumbrancers, and generally the commissioners shall have power to make all such orders and give such directions, with respect to the application of the money arising from any sale, as they think best adapted to secure the just and convenient distribution thereof amongst all interested parties, according to their several rights and titles.

46. No payment under this act towards the discharge of any incumbrance, not being a payment in full, shall prejudice or affect any right or remedy of the incumbrancer in respect of the balance, otherwise than as against the land sold; and no payment under this act in respect of any incumbrance shall impair any right or equity of any persons out of whose land such payment is made to be reimbursed or indemnified by any other person or out of any other land, except so far as the commissioners order under any special circumstances.

47. The commissioners may order any purchase money standing to their account to be invested in their name in such government or colonial stocks, funds, and securities as they think fit, with power to vary the same into or for others of a like nature; and until such stocks, funds, and securities are sold by order of the commissioners for the purposes of this act, the dividends thereof shall from time to time be applied, under the order of the commissioners, in like manner as the rents of the land from the sale of which the money invested in such stocks, funds, or securities has arisen would have been applicable.

48. In cases where any money arising from a sale under this act is not immediately distributable, or the parties entitled thereto cannot be ascertained, or where from any other cause the commissioners think it expedient for the protection of the rights and interests therein, the commissioners may order such money, or any stocks, funds, or securities in which the same may be invested, to be transferred to the account of the Accountant-General of the High Court of Chancery in England, in the matter of the parties interested in the same, to be described in such manner as the commissioners direct, in trust to attend the orders of such court, or to be transferred to the account of such officer in any colony, and be subject to the jurisdiction of such court, as the commissioners direct; and the commissioners may by their order declare the trusts affecting such money, stocks, funds, or securities, so far as they have ascertained the same, or state (for the information of any such court as aforesaid) the facts or matters found by them in relation to the rights and interests therein; and the said Court of Chancery and any such colonial court as aforesaid may make such orders with respect to any such monies, stocks, funds, or securities as aforesaid, or the application thereof, as the circumstances of the case require.

49. The commissioners shall have the following additional powers in respect of sales of land; that is to say,

Where separate applications are made for sales under this act of different undivided shares of any land,

A power, with the consent of the applicants, and such other consents as the commissioners think fit to require, to include in one sale all such undivided shares:

Where separate applications are made for sales under this act of different lands, but such lands are intermixed, or otherwise adapted to be sold together,

A power, with such consent or consents as aforesaid, to include in one sale such different lands:

Where an application is made to the commissioners for the sale of any undivided share in lands, and the owner of any other undivided share or shares, whether incumbered or not, in the same land, is desirous of having the same sold at the same time, and all the provisions of this act applicable to any land subject to any incumbrance, and ordered to be sold under this act, and to the purchase money arising from the sale thereof, and to the conveyance thereof, shall, so far as circumstances admit, be applicable to any land or share in land to be so included in the sale; and in every such case as aforesaid the commissioners shall apportion the purchase money and expenses as they see fit.

50. A married woman for the time being entitled to receive the income of land for her separate use, or having a power of disposing of land either during her lifetime or by will, shall, for the purposes of this act, be deemed a feme sole; but in other cases, where any person, who (if not under disability) might have made any application, given any consent, done any act, or been party to any proceeding under this act, is a minor, idiot, lunatic, or married woman, the guardian, curator, tutor, committee of the estate, or husband respectively of such person, or, if there is none, any person appointed by the commissioners, may make such applications, give such consents, do such acts, and be party to such proceedings as such persons respectively, if free from disability, might have made, given, done, or been party to, and shall otherwise represent such persons for the purposes of this act.

51. Proceedings under this act shall not abate or be suspended by any death or transmission or change of interest, but in any such case of death or transmission or change of interest it shall be lawful for the commissioners, where they see fit, to require notices to be given to persons becoming interested, or to make any order for discontinuing, suspending, or carrying on the proceedings, or otherwise in relation thereto, which to them appears just.

52. In every proceeding under this act the commissioners shall have full discretion as to the giving or withholding costs and expenses, and as to the persons by whom and the funds out of which the same are in the first instance or ultimately to be paid and borne; but, unless the commissioners otherwise direct, the costs of the petitioner in respect of any petition for sale presented under this act, and of the proceedings thereunder, shall not be payable out of the proceeds of the sale, otherwise than in the same order of priority in which the incumbrance of the petitioner is payable.

53. In cases where a competent Court has, in the course of any proceedings, made an order directing any land to be sold, the commissioners may sell the same, without further inquiry; but in that event, and also in any case where any competent Court has made an order in any proceedings with respect to any land, or the rights of any person interested therein, the commissioners shall, on selling such land, and in distributing the monies arising from such sale, have regard to the orders made by such Court, and to any inquiries or proof made and taken in the course of such proceedings, with power, nevertheless, for the commissioners, whenever it appears to them that there is any error in such order, or any defect in any such inquiries or proofs, to direct such person as they think fit to apply to the Court in relation thereto, and such Court may make such order concerning the matter of such application as it thinks fit; and the commissioners may, out of any monies arising from any sale under this act, where there have been any such proceedings as aforesaid, provide for the costs of such application, and may, if they think fit, order all or any part of the purchase money, after payment thereof of such costs and expenses as may be payable under the orders of the commissioners, to be paid into the court in which any such proceedings have been instituted.

54. Where the commissioners order the sale of any land in respect of which any decree for sale has been already made by a competent Court, or any proceedings are pending, they shall, by certificate under their seal, notify to such Court the order so made by them, and all proceedings for or in relation to a sale under the decree of such Court shall be suspended; and upon the completion of the sale, under such order of the commissioners, any receiver appointed by such Court shall cease to act as such receiver with respect to the land or part thereof sold; and pending any proceedings for a sale under this act, it shall not be lawful for any owner, incumbrancer, or other person interested in such land to commence any proceedings at law or in equity for redemption, foreclosure, or sale.

Powers of Commissioners as to Partition, Exchange, Division, and Allotment.

55. Where an application is made for a sale under this act of an undivided share of any land, or where any such undivided share has been sold under this act, and either before or after the conveyance thereof, the commissioners, on the application of any party interested in such undivided share, or of the purchaser, as the case may be, and after causing to be given such notices to the owner or owners of the other undivided share or shares of the same land as they think fit, and hearing all such parties interested in the respective shares as may apply to them, and making such inquiries as may enable them to make a just partition, may, if they think fit, make an order for the partition of such land; and in such order, or in a map or plan annexed thereto, shall be shewn the part allotted in severalty in respect of each of the undivided shares in such land; and the part so allotted in severalty in respect of each such undivided share shall, without any conveyance or other assurance, enure to the same uses and trusts, and be subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances, as the undivided share in respect of which the same is so allotted would have enured or been subject to in case such order had not been made.

56. Where an application is made for a sale under this act of any land, or where the same has been sold under this act, if, either before or after the conveyance thereof, application is made to the commissioners by any party interested in such land, or by the purchaser, (as the case may be), for the exchange of all or any part of such land, the commissioners may make such inquiries as they think fit, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such exchange would be beneficial to the persons interested in the respective lands, and cause such notices to be given to parties interested in the respective lands as they may think fit; and if, after making such inquiries, and hearing all such parties interested in the respective lands as may apply to them, the commissioners are of opinion that such exchange would be beneficial, and that the terms therefore are just and reasonable, they may make an order for such exchange accordingly; and in such order for exchange, or in a map or plan annexed thereto, shall be shewn the lands given and taken in exchange respectively under such order; and the land taken upon such exchange under such order shall, without any conveyance or other assurance, enure to the same uses and trusts, and be subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances, as the land given on such exchange would have enured or been subject to in case such order had not been made.

57. It shall be lawful for the commissioners, in any colony within which this act may take effect, upon the application of the owners of any undivided shares, (not subject to be sold under this act, or as to which no proceedings for a sale under this act are pending), to make such inquiries as the commissioners think fit, for ascertaining whether a partition would be beneficial to the persons interested in such respective shares; and in case the commissioners are of opinion that the proposed partition would be beneficial, and that the terms thereof are just and reasonable, they shall make an order under their seal for such partition accordingly; and in such order, or in a map or plan annexed thereto, shall be shewn the part allotted in severalty in respect of each such undivided share; and the part so allotted in severalty in respect of each such undivided share by such order of partition shall, without any conveyance or other assurance, enure to the same uses, and be subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances, as the undivided share in respect of which the same is so allotted would have enured or been subject to in case such order had not been made.

58. It shall be lawful for the commissioners, in any colony within which this act may take effect, upon the application of the owners of lands in any of the said colonies not subject to be sold under this act, or as to which no proceedings for a sale under this act are pending, to make or cause to be made such inquiries as the commissioners may think fit, for ascertaining whether an exchange would be beneficial to the persons interested in the respective lands; and in case the commissioners are of opinion that the proposed exchange would be beneficial, and that the terms thereof are just and reasonable, they shall make an order under their seal for such exchange accordingly; and in such order for exchange, or in a map or plan annexed thereto, shall be shewn the lands given and taken in exchange respectively under such order; and the land taken upon such exchange under such order shall, without any conveyance or other assurance, enure to the same uses and trusts, and be subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances, as the land given upon such exchange would have enured or been subject to in case such order had not been made.

59. It shall be lawful for the commissioners, in any colony within which this act may take effect, upon the application of any number of persons who are separately owners of parcels of land not subject to be sold under this act, or as to which no proceedings for a sale under this act are pending, and which are so intermixed, or divided into parcels of inconvenient form or quantity, that the same cannot be cultivated or occupied to the best advantage, to make such inquiries as the commissioners think fit, for ascertaining whether a division would be beneficial to the persons interested in such lands; and in case the commissioners are of opinion that a division would be beneficial, they shall make an order for the division thereof accordingly, with a map or plan thereunto annexed, in which shall be specified as well the parcels in which the several persons on whose application such order has been made were respectively interested before such division, as the several parcels allotted to them respectively by such order; and the parcels of land taken under such division shall enure to the same uses and trusts, and be subject to the same conditions, charges, and incumbrances, as the several lands which the persons taking the same have relinquished on such division would have enured or been subject to in case such order had not been made.

60. In the case of land in respect of which no proceedings for a sale under this act may be pending, no such order of partition, exchange, or division as aforesaid shall be made by the commissioners until such notices by advertisement in such public newspaper or newspapers as the commissioners direct have been given of such proposed partition, exchange, or division, and three months have elapsed from the publication of the last of such advertisements; and if before the expiration of such three months any person entitled to any estate in, or any incumbrance upon, any land included in such proposed partition, exchange, or division, gives notice in writing to the commissioners of his dissent from such proposed partition, exchange, or division, the commissioners shall not make an order for the same unless such dissent is withdrawn, or it is shewn to the commissioners that the estate or incumbrance of the party so dissenting has ceased, or that such estate or incumbrance is not an estate or incumbrance in respect of which he is legally entitled to prevent such partition, exchange, or division; but no such order as aforesaid shall be in anywise liable to be impeached by reason of any infirmity of estate or defect of title of the persons on whose application the same has been made.

Conveyances and Proceedings of Commissioners.

61. Every conveyance executed as required by this act, and every order for partition, exchange, or division made by the commissioners under their seal, shall for all purposes be conclusive evidence that every application, proceeding, consent, and act whatsoever which ought to have been made, given, and done previously to the execution of such conveyance, or the making of such order respectively, has been made, given, and done by the persons authorised to make, give, and do the same; and no such conveyance or order shall be impeached by reason of any informality therein.

62. The commissioners shall not be subject to be restrained in the execution of their powers under this act, nor shall any person be restrained from making application under this act to the commissioners, or doing any other act or giving any consent under the provisions of this act, by order of any court of justice, or by any other legal process, nor shall the commissioners be required by writ of mandamus, or any writ of a like nature, to do any act or take any proceeding under this act, nor shall proceedings before them be removeable by certiorari or other writ of a like nature.

63. The commissioners shall not, nor shall any person acting under their authority, be liable to any action, suit, or proceeding for or in respect of any act or matter bona fide done or omitted in the exercise or supposed exercise of the powers of this act.

64. Every person who, upon examination before the commissioners or any of them, or any person appointed and authorised under this act by the commissioners to administer any oath, affirmation, or declaration, shall wilfully give false evidence, and every person who shall wilfully swear, affirm, or declare falsely in any affidavit authorised under this act to be received in evidence by the commissioners, shall be liable to the pains and penalties of perjury.

Appeal.

65. The commissioners may review, rescind, or vary any order previously made by them; and it shall be lawful for any person aggrieved by any order of the commissioners, with their sanction, but not otherwise, to appeal to her Majesty in Council, in such manner, within such time, and subject to such rules, regulations, and limitations as her Majesty may by Order in Council prescribe; and the commissioners may, in their discretion, give or refuse such sanction, and annex thereto such conditions, as to giving security or otherwise, as they shall think fit; but in all cases where the commissioners refuse their sanction to any appeal their decision shall be final.

Power to alter Provisions of Act.

66. Wherever it appears to the commissioners that by reason of the prevalence in any colony of laws or customs differing from those of England, or that by reason of any other matter or thing whatsoever it is expedient, with the view of carrying into execution the purposes of this act,

That there should be substituted for the provisions of this act or any of them other like provisions accommodated to be laws or customs of such colony; or That further provisions should be made for carrying into execution in such colony the orders of the commissioners; for reconciling any conflict between the laws of England and such colony; for declaring the law with respect to any matter or thing; or otherwise for more effectually bringing this act into operation within any colony, or carrying into effect the purposes thereof; it shall be lawful for the commissioners, having due regard to the interests of owners, incumbents, and others, and to the laws and customs of the colony, by order under their seal to make any such substitutions or provisions as aforesaid, subject to the restrictions following, namely, that such substitutions or provisions shall not be repugnant to the spirit of this act or to the general law of England, and shall not affect the constitution of the commissioners as established by this act; but no such order shall be of any force till the same has been confirmed by order of her Majesty in Council in manner herein-after mentioned.

67. Before any such order shall be capable of confirmation, it shall for the space of thirty days be submitted to the Legislature of the colony within which the same is intended to operate; and if such Legislature, within such period as aforesaid, express by resolution their disapproval thereof, such order shall thereupon be void to all intents; but if the Legislature, within the said period, express by resolution their approval thereof, or come to no resolution in respect thereof, the same shall thereupon be presented to her Majesty for confirmation, and, if so confirmed, shall, as soon as conveniently may be, be proclaimed in the colony, and upon such proclamation being made shall have the same force within such colony as if the same had been enacted by authority of Parliament.

68. Any order so confirmed as aforesaid may from time to time be rescinded, amended, or altered, as occasion may require, by other orders, to be made by the commissioners, and to be submitted to the Legislature of the colony, and confirmed in like manner.

69. Her Majesty may from time to time, by Order in Council, direct this act to come into operation in any of the said scheduled colonies, and thereupon, but not otherwise, the same shall have the force of law in such colony or colonies named in any such order; but no such Order in Council shall be made in respect of any colony until the Legislature of such colony has presented an address to her Majesty, praying her Majesty to issue such order, and has also, to the satisfaction of her Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, made provision for the payment of the salaries of the local commissioners, and of all such assistant secretaries, clerks, messengers, and officers as may be appointed under this act in such colony, and of such other expenses of carrying this act into execution as are hereinbefore directed to be provided for by the Legislature of the colony.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY, NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.—Mr. Wakley, one of the two official assignees of this court, has been obliged to resign his office in consequence of ill health. On his retirement a memorial was presented to him, signed by the president and officers of the Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Gateshead Law Society, and by fifty-six solicitors practising in those towns. The memorialists state that they "could not allow Mr. Wakley to retire from an office he had so long and so ably filled, without expressing their high sense of his official and private character." Mr. Wakley received his appointment from Lord Lyndhurst, when that distinguished nobleman was Lord High Chancellor.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.

PRESIDENT—ANTHONY HUDSON, Esq., Banker.

VICE-PRESIDENT—Lieut.-General Sir ROBT. JOHN HARVEY, C. B.

It is provided by the constitution of the Society that the insured shall be free from all responsibility; and to guarantee the engagements of the office, a fund of 550,000*l.* has been subscribed by a numerous and opulent proprietary, which fund has been further increased by the accumulation of an additional reserve, now amounting to 95,000*l.* Returns of three-fifths of the profits of the Company are periodically made to parties insuring, who have thus from time to time received from the Society sums amounting in the aggregate to nearly 350,000*l.*

The rates of premium are in no case higher than those charged by the other principal offices making no returns to their insurers.

The business of the Company exceeds 62,000,000*l.*, and, owing to the liberality with which its engagements have been performed, is rapidly increasing. The duty paid to Government for the year 1852 was 74,037*l.* 9*s.* 11*d.*; and the amount insured on farming stock was upwards of 9,000,000*l.*

For Prospectuses apply at the Society's Offices, 6, Crescent, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars; and Surrey-street, Norwich.

This Caution is published by me to prevent further impositions upon the public, and serious injury to myself.

E. R. BOND, sole Executrix and Widow of the late John Bond, 28, Long-lane, West Smithfield, London.

* To avoid disappointment from the substitution of counterfeits, be careful to ask for the genuine Bond's Permanent Marking Ink, and further to distinguish it, observe, that NO SIXPENNY SIZE is or has at any time been prepared by him, the Inventor and Proprietor.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 11, 1854.

We remember the time when the Legal Profession was divisible into two great classes, sufficiently contrasted in the gross, though insensibly melting into each other—those who did their business conscientiously, completely, and satisfactorily to themselves and their clients; and those who scamped it, trusting to some flashy qualities, or to connexion, for success. The first class is nearly extinct; not that the men who enter the Profession bring to it less talent, energy, or conscience than belonged to their predecessors, but the Profession itself is disheartened—demoralised—by a combination of depressing influences. We do not now allude to the temporary loss of emolument occasioned by the establishment and extension of the county court jurisdiction, though the loss has been great, and the blunder which caused it grievous. The professional derangement will soon be adjusted, according to the laws of demand and supply; and in the course of no long time we trust that the country will have learned in the school of experience the inherent unsoundness of the county court system. We shall have discovered that cheap law is not economical justice; and as we have already found that the science of medicine is not advanced by giving over criminals for dissection, we shall by degrees learn to distrust the experimentum in corpore vili in every form. There is no reason to fear the decay of the Profession. No civilised society can dispense with the counsellor, the draftsman, or the advocate; and the Profession will be honoured so long as it is true to itself, and resolved to rest its claims on its present services to society rather than on tradition. A great show of public spirit has been lately made by the lawyers; and if alteration is reform, the practice of the law has been and is being greatly reformed. Our present purpose is, not to consider the merits of those amendments, or to attempt to distinguish the scenery of the charlatan from the honest work of the amending hand, but to point out an unbroken field in which the legal reformer may labour with singular benefit to his order and to society.

We have said that the conscientious, sound, and safe lawyer is now rarely to be found; and the reason is, that the task which a sincere and earnest student of the present day must set before himself is such as the rarest energy of mind and endurance of constitution would be barely sufficient to master. The oracles of the law are contained in the reports and the statutes. We, in the course of many years of study and practice, have contrived, by a certain amount of labour, to extract from the whole body of reports and statutes, with such accuracy and completeness as we could command, a system of principles and rules for our guidance in practice, and we have endeavoured, by the device of "noting up," to provide ourselves with some kind of clue to the ramifications of the legal labyrinth. But the reports of cases now come upon us in such profusion, that the mere daily labour of "noting up" consumes more of our energy and time than was formerly sufficient for our entire studies*. To remember the principal cases is absolutely impossible. But, as if this were not enough, the introduction of Dr. Story's flimsy compilations has brought into our courts the fopery of citing American decisions. The consequence of this state of things is, that most students and lawyers abandon the attempt to keep up their knowledge of the reports, and rely on text-books. This marks them at once as second-rate lawyers; and, the highest standard once relinquished, there is no assignable minimum of learning with which they may not be content. The text-books themselves are rapidly deteriorating, from several causes besides the general decline of science in the class which is to produce them. First, the increasing tendency of the judges to decide on particular precedents, rather than on a wide induction from many precedents, is destroying the scientific character of the law, and thus renders the task of an institutional writer more and more repulsive; secondly, the mere labour of collating and criticising the decisions is almost beyond the powers of humanity; and, thirdly, the inducement to encounter that labour is daily diminishing. Confidence in the stability of the law has vanished. The annual alteration and refashioning of large branches of the law is now considered to be a part of the constitution; and, besides the consequent discouragement to study, we have this further result, that a text-book, however learnedly and carefully prepared, has no pecuniary value in the publishing market. No law book can bring an adequate return for its expenses and the risk of the adventure in fewer than six or seven years; and, as things are now ordered, no publisher can hope that any book he publishes will not be rendered obsolete in the ensuing session by some remorseless amending statute.

So much of the evil as is attributable to the state of the statute law would be considerably diminished by a code of the statutes; for it is certain, that if the statute law were once reduced to order, and provision made that all subsequent legislation should take the form of substitution, and not of patching, a great element of stability would be secured. We have little hope of any such result from the labours of the present Statute-law Commission. With the exception of one equity judge, whose time is of course too much occupied to enable him to be a working member of the commission, we do not see one name on the list* which promises any scientific result. But the great evil lies in the reporting system; and, especially now that the fusion of law with equity has commenced in earnest, there is no hope that any lawyer will be able to master his business until two things have been done—first, the purification and abridgment of the existing reports by authority, resulting in either a chronological series or a digest of subsisting authorities in a concise form; and, secondly, the establishment of an authorised staff of reporters for the future. If such a reform were effected on a sound basis, THE JURIST would gladly retire, and seek some new form of existence. In the words of a late contributor, "We cannot generalise our common law, because its essence is, that it teaches by example; but we may put those examples in a more convenient form. We may revise our reports, and digest them, as we propose to digest our statutes; we may expunge precedents which have been overruled or become obsolete; and we may express, in concise language, all that is material of circumstance, decision, and dictum, in those which remain. Having done that, we may give to our digest the same authority which the reports now possess, and forbid the citation of the reports prior to the digest; and we may provide for the annual revision of the digest. Such a work would reduce the existing thousand volumes of precedents to twenty, and would tend, more than any other measure, to facilitate and improve the practice and administration of the law*."

CONSOLIDATION OF THE STAMP LAWS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—The accumulation of patched and contradictory enactments consequent upon repeated alterations in the stamp duties renders consolidation absolutely necessary. I need not remind you that there are at the present time no less than five acts to which constant reference is required. The duty payable on an appointment must be sought for in the act of 1815; on a mortgage, in the act of 1850; on an apprenticeship indenture, in an act of 1853; on articles of clerkship, in another act of the same year; and, finally, upon conveyances, upon chief rent, and on certain descriptions of leases, in the act of the present year. And though the duties ordinarily payable are comprised in the five acts above mentioned, the directions and regulations to be observed, and the penalties by which those directions and regulations are enforced, are scattered, here a little and there a little, through a multitude of statutes, which, but for the formidable list of them, occupying pages 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, and 858 of Tilsley, (this is a fact), I should have felt no hesitation in pronouncing to be innumerable. Indeed, it may fearlessly be affirmed, that these statutory regulations as such, save as regards a few of every-day application, legal practitioners are wholly ignorant, and are only saved from the consequences of disobedience by a cautious adherence to the traditional course of practice in which the spirit of the statutory rules is preserved.

But to return to the acts with which I set out. As regards the stamping of newly-prepared instruments, experience may enable the practitioner, in any ordinary case, to turn up readily the proper act, and the precise part of it where he may learn the duty he must pay; but if an instrument out of the common course should come before him, or if a question of exemption from duty should occur, even the tried and experienced lawyer soon finds that he is wandering in a labyrinth without a clue. Still more unfortunate is the practitioner who is called to investigate a title. He may be master of the law current in his own day; but for the purpose in hand this may avail him nothing. Every deed must stand or fall by the laws in force when it first saw the light; and to qualify the conveyancer for his task, he must be as familiar with the laws of that particular era of stamp legislation to which the instrument under consideration belongs, as with the most recent phase of the law. It may happen, therefore, that in perusing an abstract, going back but a very few years, the conveyancer may have occasion to display an acquaintance with four or five distinct codes.

This state of things is really too bad. It is surely enough for Government to levy contributions upon our pockets, without taxing so unmercifully our time and tempers. I repeat, that consolidation has become absolutely necessary. It is a debt due to the country, and an effort is all that is wanting to discharge it. One short section formed on the model of that which repeals the usury laws would suffice to sweep away Mr. Tilsley's long list of statutes, and "all existing laws relating to stamp duties." Another section, equally short, might render reference to the past unnecessary, by declaring that instruments bearing any stamp should be deemed to be duly stamped. The rubbish of 200 years being thus cleared away, it would not, one would think, be difficult, by the help of past experience, to re-construct the law in a shape at once compact and intelligible—a result of which I should be the more hopeful if the draftsmen would condescend to submit their work to public criticism a few weeks before asking for it the sanction of Parliament. Without this precaution, we could look for nothing better than a repetition of the egregious blunders which have marked every recent effort at stamp legislation.

It would be ridiculous, however, to expect Government to take the initiative. A little wholesome pressure must be applied from without. Let the Law Societies then—particularly let the Incorporated Law Society—take the matter up. Let them give the Chancellor of the Exchequer no rest till he accede to, what even a Chancellor of the Exchequer must admit to be, a reasonable request.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,
A SOLICITOR.

Whereas by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, the acts relating to merchant shipping are amended and consolidated, and it is expedient to repeal certain acts and parts of acts relating to merchant shipping, and to make temporary provisions with respect to certain of the matters referred to in the said acts: be it therefore enacted &c. as follows:—

Sect. 1. This act may be cited for all purposes as "The Merchant Shipping Repeal Act, 1854."

2. In the construction and for the purposes of this act the interpretation of terms contained in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, shall be considered as incorporated with and forming part of this act.

3. With the exception of such provisions of this act as are hereinafter expressly stated to be intended to come into operation immediately after the passing thereof, this act shall come into operation at the same time as the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854.

4. There shall be hereby repealed—

The several acts and parts of acts set forth in the first schedule hereto, to the extent to which such acts or parts of acts are therein expressed to be repealed, and all such provisions of any other acts or of any charters, and all such laws, customs, and rules as are inconsistent with the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 :

Provided that such repeal shall not affect—

- (1.) Any provisions contained in the act of the 7 Will. 4, c. 79, as to title, application of purchase money, or borrowing money, and having relation to the power of purchasing lighthouses given to the Trinity House by the same act :
  - (2.) Any security duly given before this act comes into operation :
  - (3.) Any thing duly done before this act comes into operation :
  - (4.) Any liability accruing before this act comes into operation :
  - (5.) Any penalty, forfeiture, or other punishment incurred or to be incurred in respect of any offence committed before this act comes into operation :

  - (7.) Any appointment, bye-law, regulation, or license duly made or granted under any enactment hereby repealed, and subsisting at the time when this act comes into operation ; and the same shall continue in force, but shall be subject to such provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, as are applicable thereto respectively.
5. The local marine boards, the members of which have been appointed or elected under the Mercantile Marine Act, 1850, shall continue to act until the 4th February, 1857, or until other boards have been constituted in lieu thereof in pursuance of the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854.
6. The 4th and 9th sections of the Pilotage-law Amendment Act, 1853, shall be construed as if the fifth part of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, were therein referred to, in lieu of the act of the 6 Geo. 4, c. 125.
7. The Board of Trade may, out of the Mercantile Marine Fund, direct payment to be made of such expenses for establishing and maintaining on the coasts of the United Kingdom proper life boats, with the necessary crews and equipments, and for affording assistance towards the preservation of life and property in cases of shipwreck and distress at sea, and for the granting rewards for the preservation of life in such cases, as it thinks fit ; and this section shall come into operation immediately after the passing of this act.
8. Nothing in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, or in this act contained, shall operate to prevent the exercise of the powers contained in the 12th and 16th sections of the Merchant Shipping-law Amendment Act, 1853, of paying the debts, liabilities, and expenses therein mentioned out of the Mercantile Marine Fund : and whereas it was arranged that a sum, to be ascertained by the calculation of actuaries, should, before the said last-mentioned act came into operation, be paid by the Trinity House out of the cash balances then in their hands, for the purpose of supplying a deficiency in the funds of the Cinque Ports pilots, and of indemnifying the funds of the Trinity House pilots against any loss consequent upon the settlements to be made under the Pilotage-law Amendment Act, 1853 : and whereas, when the Merchant Shipping-law Amendment Act, 1853, came into operation, the said calculation was not completed : be it enacted, that such payment may, with the consent of the Board of Trade, be made by the Trinity House in the same manner as payment of the debts, liabilities, and expenses referred to in the said 12th section of the said last-mentioned act ; and this section shall come into operation immediately after the passing of this act.
9. All monies arising from any wages and effects of deceased seamen or apprentices to the sea service which were received before the 1st January, 1852, shall be applied in the same manner as if the same had been received under the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854.
10. The Receiver-General of Droits of Admiralty shall, as to all things to be done by him in virtue of his office, conform to all lawful directions given for that purpose by the Board of Trade ; and on a vacancy occurring in his office no successor shall be appointed, but thereupon all powers and privileges vested in such Receiver-General shall be transferred to the Board of Trade ; and this section shall come into operation immediately after the passing of this act.

11. Receivers appointed by the said Receiver-General, under the 10 Vict. c. 99, shall hold their offices only during the pleasure of the Board of Trade ; and the sergeants of the Admiralty of the Cinque Ports, their deputies or other officers, authorised to perform the duties and to exercise the powers within the jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports elsewhere performed and exercised by such receivers as aforesaid, shall perform and exercise the same only during the pleasure and subject to the directions of the Board of Trade ; and all such receivers, sergeants, deputies, and other officers as aforesaid shall possess in the several districts within which they have hitherto exercised their duties the same powers, rights, and privileges, and perform the same duties, as are by the said Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, vested in and committed to the receivers therein mentioned, save only that they shall not be entitled to take the command in cases of ships or boats stranded or in distress, unless authorised so to do by the Board of Trade.

12. There shall be payable to such receivers, sergeants, deputies, and other officers as aforesaid such fees and other remuneration as are by the said Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, made payable to receivers appointed thereunder, and payment thereof shall be made by the same persons and in the same manner, and shall be capable of being enforced by the same means, as payment of the fees or other remuneration payable to the receivers appointed under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, are payable or capable of being enforced, or as near thereto as circumstances permit ; and save as aforesaid, and saving also any expenses actually and properly incurred, no such receiver, sergeant, deputy, or other officer as aforesaid shall be entitled to demand or receive from any person any fees or other sums in respect of any services performed by him as receiver ; and this section shall come into operation immediately after the passing of this act.

13. All fees or other remuneration received by any such receiver, sergeant, deputy, or other officer as aforesaid, may be applied by him to his own use.

14. The provisions contained in the ninth part of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, shall come into operation at the same time as if the same were herein repeated, and were hereby expressed to be intended to come into operation immediately after the passing of this act ; and the following acts, that is to say, the 7 Geo. 2, c. 15, the 26 Geo. 3, c. 86, and the 53 Geo. 3, c. 159, shall be considered as repealed immediately after the passing of this act.

15. All criminal proceedings under the Seamen's Fund Winding-up Act, 1851, the Pilotage-law Amendment Act, 1853, the Merchant Shipping-law Amendment Act, 1853, or this act, shall be carried on in the same manner as similar proceedings under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 ; and all rules of law, practice, and evidence which are applicable to such last-mentioned proceedings shall be applicable to criminal proceedings under this act.

16. If a native of any country in Asia, Africa, or of any of the islands in the South Sea or the Pacific Ocean, or of any other country not having any consul in the United Kingdom, is brought to the United Kingdom in any ship, British or foreign, as a seaman, and is left in the United Kingdom, and within six months of his being so left becomes chargeable upon the poor rate, or commits any act by reason of the committal whereof he is liable to be convicted as an idle and disorderly person, or any other act of vagrancy, the master or owner of the said ship, or in case of a foreign ship the person who is consignee of the ship at the time of the seaman being so left as aforesaid, shall incur a penalty not exceeding 30*l.*, unless he can shew that the person so left as aforesaid quitted the ship without the consent of the master, or that due means have been afforded by such master, owner, or consignee, or one of them, to such person, of returning to his native country or to the country in which he was shipped ; and the Court inflicting such penalty may order the whole or any part of such penalty to be applied towards the relief or sending home of such person.

LONDON, NOVEMBER 18, 1854.

We have no longer to inquire whether the fusion of law and equity is possible, for the process has already commenced and made great progress; and we may trust to the omnipotence of an act of Parliament for its being carried into effect in some form. The question, whether there is any reason in the nature of things, and in any, and if any what, cases, for either the antagonism or the mere division of jurisdiction which our Courts of law and equity have hitherto exhibited, has become one of immediate practical interest, so that he who investigates it may reasonably hope that if his inquiries lead him to the conclusion that there should be but one side to Westminster Hall, his speculations will not be barren of practical result.

The last Common-law Procedure Act has placed the common-law and equity courts on the same footing as respects discovery of facts and documents, the inspection of things, specific performance of contracts, the enforcement of simple trusts, express and implied, including the redemption of mortgages, (for we conceive that the new writ of mandamus may issue for the performance of any duty now recognised only in equity, if the duty is one in the performance of which several persons have not distinct interests), certain cases of contribution, and injunction. It remains to be seen whether the common-law Courts will accept the offer of the equity Bar, and put themselves under a course of equity, and be guided by equity precedents, or will prefer to regard their new jurisdiction as one depending wholly on the letter of the act of Parliament, and in no way affected by the traditions and rules of Courts of equity. In exercising the jurisdiction by mandamus, there can be no doubt that the Courts will consider themselves bound by the language of the act to administer relief in many cases in which specific performance would be refused in equity.

With an equitable jurisdiction, then, in some cases greater than that which Courts of equity themselves possess, and with some of the machinery—perhaps all that is essential—by which Courts of equity have contrived to facilitate the exercise of their powers, the Courts of common law seem to be now deficient only in the following branches of equitable jurisdiction—the perpetuation of testimony; the settlement of boundaries; the administration of trusts in which several persons have distinct interests; certain cases of account, contribution, and partnership; the administration of assets; and the care and administration of the persons and estates of infants and lunatics. The jurisdiction, that is left to the Courts of equity may be shortly characterised and distinguished from that which is now shared with the Courts of common law, as relating to cases in which the Court undertakes the duty of deciding on and enforcing in one cause either various rights, wholly distinct and unconnected, except by their union in the same person, (infancy and lunacy), or the mutual rights of more than two persons in relation to a common subject, which cannot be resolved by the simple decision of one issue or series of issues between two parties, (administration of assets and of trust estates, winding up of partnerships, &c.) In addition to this judicial jurisdiction, the Lord Chancellor in cases of lunacy, and the Court of Chancery in other cases, takes upon itself to perform the administrative duties of a guardian or trustee.

Is there any reason against extending the fusion to these remaining branches of jurisdiction? or rather is there any reason for keeping up the Court of Chancery as a separate judicial establishment? for with respect to its merely administrative duties, it is obvious that they have nothing to do with the Courts considered as seats of judgment, and might be administered in any office established for the purpose, under the direction, as to questions of right, either of a Court of equity or of a Court of mixed or consolidated jurisdiction. To the question so put there can be, it seems to us, but one answer. There is no branch of the law which may not come under consideration in the decision of a case between two persons; and so far as familiarity with the law is concerned, a common-law judge must, therefore, be as competent to administer equity among a dozen persons, each having a separate interest in a common subject, as between two. So far, then, as the qualifications of the Court or of the Bar are concerned, there can be no reason for confining these polygonal cases to a separate Court and Bar. The only peculiarity which is incident to them is the form of procedure; but if the continuance of their present exemptions from the jury lottery is conceded, there is obviously no impediment to the decision of such cases by a Court of common law which could not be readily overcome by very simple arrangements.

If, then, the experiment which has just been commenced should prove successful—of which we do not entertain the slightest doubt—it must, we conceive, be very soon followed by the entire extinction of the Court of Chancery as a judicial establishment, and the modification of the common law by the introduction or substitution of qualifications or rules drawn from the doctrines of equity. This reform of the common law, in which the judges have at this moment to take the initiative, is no common task. It will require all the learning and all the labour that can be brought to the work; it will require also, if we are to have any creditable result, an abandonment of prejudices, and a conscientious investigation of the physiology, if we may so express it, of the law, for which the advocates and judges who are to take a leading part in this noble service will have been ill-prepared by their professional education and habits. Lord Mansfield, who, from the fusion of the English common law with the customs of merchants, evolved the principles of the existing English commercial law, and whose judgment, in attempting to introduce equitable principles into other branches of the law, is condemned by nothing but his defeat, would have been equal to the present crisis. Let us hope that the opportunity now offered of eclipsing his fame will not be lost.

The fusion of law and equity, when it is accomplished, will be but an instalment of the reform that is needed in our judicial arrangements. The numerous judicial establishments of limited jurisdiction, by which, in addition to the great Chancery and Common-law Courts, the harmony of the law as a system is disturbed, exist on no defensible principle. We have one Court for deciding certain questions relating to maritime affairs, another for deciding testamentary questions, another for bankruptcy, another for elections, and so forth; and yet there is scarcely a principle of law with which any one of these Courts is conversant which the ordinary Courts of common law may not on some occasion have to consider and apply. These Courts, therefore, in their judicial capacity, in no measure relieve the ordinary Courts from the obligation of omniscience; but they keep up and tend to increase anomalies, and obstruct the amendment and simplification of the law. The principles of the law, as administered in the common-law courts, are applicable to maritime cases, to testamentary matters, to the contract of marriage and its results, to bankruptcy, to elections. There is scarcely a conceivable social relation or transaction which may not furnish matter for decision by a common-law judge; and to intrust the same Court with a jurisdiction extending to every case requiring the judicial application of any branch of the English law would in no degree add to the multifariousness of the learning at present required of its members, while it would relieve them from all the rubbish and perplexities incident to the present system of divided jurisdiction. Singleness and universality of jurisdiction once established—a body of judges and lawyers administering one single system once organised—the scientific amendment and simplification of the law would proceed rapidly and safely. We do not despair of this. The barriers of prejudice have been broken by the late act; the next and most pressing step is that which we urged in our last number—the purification and consolidation of the statutes and reports.

OF INJUNCTIONS.

Whether the Court will grant an injunction on the prima facie title of the patentee, or will send him to law first, depends on a careful consideration of the circumstances of each particular case.

If there has been possession for a considerable time under letters-patent, although the Court may have considerable doubt whether the patent is valid, it will nevertheless protect it by injunction until the right can be tried at law. (Harmer v. Playne, 14 Ves. 130; Boulton v. Bull, 3 Ves. 140; Hill v. Thompson, 3 Mer. 622; see also Kay v. Marshall, 1 My. & C. 373, in which Lord Cottenham, referring to these cases, approved their principle, and applied them to a case on demurrer, p. 388 et seq.)

But although a patent should be of long standing, yet if there has not been undisturbed exclusive possession of long duration, and doubt is thrown on the title, the Court will refuse an injunction. (Collard v. Aleson, 4 My. & C. 487; Curtis v. Cutts, 8 L. J., Ch., 184). And although on a trial of the right at law a verdict is found for the plaintiff, yet if a rule nisi for a new trial is obtained, the Court will still consider the right undetermined at law. And if a patent has been but recently granted, and its validity has not been established at law, and the defendant denies and throws doubt on such validity, equity will not in general act upon its own notions of the validity or invalidity of the patent, and grant an immediate injunction without more, (Hill v. Thompson, 3 Mer. 622), but will send the plaintiff to law before it will grant an injunction. The Court, however, possesses and exercises great latitude. (Bacon v. Jones, 4 My. & C. 433).

If, however, an injunction has been granted in protection of a patent, of which the exclusive enjoyment has been undisturbed for several years, and the defendant is guilty of great delay in coming to dissolve it, the Court will not press on the plaintiff to try his right at law at an inconveniently early period. (Bickford v. Snowes, 8 L. J., Ch., 188).

It was held in an early case (Baskett v. Cunninghame, 2 Eden, 137) that on a conflict between parties, both claiming under patents, the Court could not grant an injunction till the rights had been tried at law. There is no modern decision overruling this doctrine as to a conflict between two patents.

From the cases referred to, it will be perceived, that wherever there is any considerable doubt as to the validity of the patent at law, an injunction is either not granted at all, or is only granted on terms, in order to prevent irreparable damage before the title can be tried at law.

The ultimate object of a bill in equity to protect a patent is a perpetual injunction, which can in general only be granted at the hearing; and it has been very lately decided, that where a patentee files a bill alleging infringement, and praying an account and perpetual injunction, but does not immediately or within any reasonable time apply for an interlocutory injunction, he cannot have a perpetual injunction at the hearing, if the defendant raises a question as to the validity of the title; nor will he be allowed to retain the bill, with liberty to bring an action. The course the Court will adopt in such a case is to dismiss the bill, with costs. (Bacon v. Jones, 1 Beav. 382; S. C., on app., 4 My. & C. 433).

But as an injunction suit to restrain infringement of a patent rarely comes to a hearing, the point generally calling for consideration in reference to injunctions on this subject is, whether there is such an extent of doubt on the title, or on the right of the plaintiff to ask for assistance in support of it, as to induce the Court to refuse an injunction, or to grant it only on terms. (See on this Harmer v. Playne, 14 Ves. 130).

To obtain an injunction ex parte against an alleged infringer, the plaintiff ought to swear, at the time of making the application, to his belief that he is the original inventor; (3 Mer. 624; Sturz v. De la Rue, 5 Russ. 322); for although when he obtained his patent he might have very honestly sworn as to his belief of such being the fact, yet circumstances may have subsequently intervened, or information have been communicated, sufficient to convince him that it was not his own original invention, and that he was under a mistake when he made his previous application. And where a patentee has not accompanied his bill by a sufficient affidavit on this point, and fails in sustaining his injunction on other grounds, it will be dissolved with costs on this. (Sturz v. De la Rue, 5 Russ. 322).

Equity will restrain other persons from selling after the expiration of the patent, as well as before it, articles piratically made during the continuance of the patent. (Crossley v. Beverley, 1 Russ. & M. 166, note).

Review.

The British Commonwealth; or, a Commentary on the Institutions and Principles of British Government. By HOMERSHAM COX, M. A., Fellow of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, Barrister at Law, and Author of Treatises on the Differential and Integral Calculus. Post 8vo., pp. 600. [Longmans.]

THIS exposition of the existing political, judicial, and administrative machinery of the British Government is an able performance, and will probably take its place as a text-book in the universities. The theoretical disquisitions are not diffuse, and the expository part is singularly clear, and so concise that the various topics included in the following extensive programme are adequately disposed of in a space not exceeding that occupied by Blackstone's first volume, (without the notes):—

The Principles of Government.—1. The duties of Government. 2. The rights of Government; social contract, &c. 3. The divisions of the offices of Government.

The Legislature.—4. The British Legislature: assembling, prorogation, and dissolution of Parliament, &c. 5. The legislative power of the Crown. 6. The legislative power of the House of Lords; constitutional value of the Upper House; balance of power, &c. 7. Procedure in Parliament. 8. Passing of public bills. 9. Passing of private bills; objections to the present practice, &c. 10. Parliamentary documents. 11. Supply, and Ways and Means. 12. Cabinet and political parties; evils of party government, &c. 13. The purposes of parliamentary representation; class representation considered. 14. Parliamentary franchise; extent of constituencies. 15. Parliamentary suffrage. 16. Parliamentary elections. 17. The nature and authority of public opinion. 18. Public meetings and the press. 19. Commissions of inquiry.

Judicature.—20. Divisions of law; sources of law, &c. 21. The Courts of Parliament and Privy Council. 22. The Court of Chancery. 23. The superior courts of common law. 24. Trial of actions at law. 25. Writs issued judicially. 26. Criminal trials at common law. 27. Trial by jury. 28. Courts of local jurisdiction: assizes, nisi prius, Central Criminal Court, justices of the peace, county courts, bankruptcy, admiralty, &c.

Administrative Government.—29. The royal prerogative; succession to the Crown; forms of government compared &c. 30. Parliament; the Privy Council and its committees. 31. The Secretaries of State. 32. The fiscal administrative offices. 33. Military and naval offices. 34. Boards constituted by acts of Parliament. 35. Local administrative government; central and local government; municipal, county, and parochial officers, &c.

International Government.—36. International statutes, treaties, &c.; diplomatic negotiations and officers; international executive; slave trade; armies and navies; balance of power discussed.

Colonial Government.—37. Colonies defined; historical illustrations; government of colonies; colonial taxation; judicature; colonies classified and enumerated; principles of colonial government.

Conclusion.—Remarks on the mutual responsibility of governing bodies and the vitality of the English Constitution.

No attempt has been made to give a systematic and detailed account of the British Constitution since the time when Blackstone performed the task upon sound Tory principles, assuring his readers that there never had been an alteration made in the law that men had not afterwards found reason to regret. The merits of Blackstone's Lectures will secure their immortality; nothing that can be written will displace them from the list of institutional works; but their faults and defects were such as to call for a companion or supplementary treatise, even at the time of their delivery; and the immense changes that have since come upon almost every branch of the Constitution have doubled the urgency of the want. Mr. Serjeant Stephen undertook his "New Commentaries" with all the confidence of incapacity, only expressing a doubt whether it was "reasonable to suppose that the plan would be found entirely free from defect, or the execution from inaccuracy." The plan, however, was Blackstone's, altered as one might alter the plan of a house by transposing the front and back rooms: the execution, done on the Vinerian Lectures, such as modern humanity revolts at, only to be paralleled by the embowelling, quartering, and other cookery formerly awarded to traitors. All the merit of the New Commentaries is comprised in the tolerably accurate citation of modern statutes and decisions.

Mr. Cox does not invite any comparison with Blackstone, still less does he undertake to displace him, but leaving the historical investigation of the subject to be pursued in the first book of the Vinerian Lectures, in Hallam, and elsewhere, he treats of the Constitution as it exists at the present day, endeavours to distinguish the vital from the formal parts of institutions, and to describe them according to their working results, taking occasion during this survey to point out defects as well as excellencies, and on the whole to make a panegyric on the Constitution which is satisfactory because it is discriminating.

Mr. Cox's view of things appears to us to be generally clear and philosophical, but his abstract disquisitions are rather suggestive than complete; he is more often happy in criticising the definitions of others than in framing his own, and he sometimes disappoints his reader, after opening up an investigation in a very hopeful manner, by unaccountably leaving it half finished. Thus, upon Blackstone's definition of public and private wrongs, that "the former are an infringement or 'privation of the private or civil rights belonging to individuals, considered as individuals, and are therefore 'frequently termed civil injuries; the latter are a branch 'of public rights and duties which affect the whole community, and are distinguished by the harsher appellation of crimes and misdemeanours," Mr. Cox remarks that this is no more than giving public and private wrongs other names, and establishes no definition of them, as the infringement of every right affects the whole community; and, after further illustration, he proceeds—"It appears to me, however, that a simple 'but sufficient distinction between private and public 'wrongs is, that the former infringes upon rights which 'are essentially individual, the latter on rights which 'are essentially general." But this is merely Blackstone's definition in fewer words, and it is condemned by the remark cited above. An injury to the property or to the person of another may be criminal or not, according to circumstances, and a criminal injury may at the same time entitle the injured person to a civil remedy; but in every case it is an infringement upon an essentially individual right—an individual right which the public has a general interest in maintaining. There is, in fact, no difference between the two classes of public and private wrongs which are intended both by Blackstone and by Mr. Cox, except with regard to the remedy. Considered merely as wrongs, they are undistinguishable. Those wrongs which entitled the injured party to compensation or restitution from the offender are, while considered in connexion with that remedy, private wrongs; and those wrongs which it is thought expedient to restrain by inflicting a punishment on the offender, independently of any recompense to the injured party, are public wrongs; and the same wrong may be in one aspect private, and in another public.

There is, indeed, a division of wrongs into public and private, which is essential, and wholly irrespective of the remedy, but that is not the division under consideration—we mean the distinction between injuries or offences which affect individuals, and injuries or offences which affect the community, independently of any individual damage; of which latter kind are various offences against the Constitution or public order, such as treason, bribery, perjury on criminal trials, smuggling, mutiny, &c.

An instance of the other defect above alluded to may be seen in the conclusion of the otherwise excellent chapter on the stability of the English Government. The element of stability last mentioned in the chapter is the important but generally misunderstood one of the royal prerogative; and the consideration of this is opened in a manner which leads one to expect a satisfactory exposition of its working. No such thing. We are told that the prerogative is a regulating and controlling power, and how the influences of a wise sovereign, a virtuous sovereign, an illustrious sovereign, a patriotic sovereign, and an energetic sovereign, respectively operate to the desired end. Very well knowing, as we do, that neither hereditary nor any other kind of succession can render any one of these qualities permanent in a dynasty, we look next to be informed by what contrivances our Constitution is made to extract an equally, or at least a sufficiently, beneficial regulating and controlling effect out of a foolish, a lying, a dissolute, a bigoted, an ambitious, or a pig-headed sovereign, a king of cousins, a tailor king, or a king log. This is what the course of the argument leads us to expect; and this might have been done. We find, instead of this, something which converts the chapter into a dedication out of place—and there an end.

These blemishes, however, are few, and are more noticeable because they occur in a work of considerable merit. If we have dwelt too much on them, the following extract from the chapter on public opinion will make amends:—

"But though consentience gives weight to an opinion, 'it cannot of itself prove it. There have been cases in 'which the judgment of one man has prevailed against 'that of all the world beside. There was a time when 'public opinion universally declared the earth to be 'immoveable: it moved nevertheless. It were an endless task to cite from history the occasions in which 'the judgment of whole nations has gone astray in 'matters of the most momentous importance to their 'welfare. Far more brief would be the task of enumerating the instances in which the national judgment has directed political action in according with 'wisdom and justice only. The same sort of public 'opinion which reared the golden calf at Horeb enthroned the goddess of reason in Notre Dame at Paris. 'In the one case, the lawgiver, by the strength of a 'wisdom not his own, brake the idol; in the other, it 'had been well for France to have possessed rulers 'mighty, in like manner, to resist public opinion. And 'can we say that such public opinion is extinct? Dare 'we affirm that public opinion has ceased to set up the 'golden calf and the altar of reason? Or do we need 'more solemn rebuke of the pride of humanity, which 'exalts popular judgment overmuch? To the end of 'time will resound the warning echo of that fearful cry, 'Not this man, but Barabbas.'

"If we trust to the teaching of history, we must look 'for other tests of the accuracy of public opinion besides that which mere consentience affords. Public 'judgment is not exempt from all the infirmities of individual judgment; on the contrary, while on the one 'hand it possesses one claim to accuracy which private 'judgment does not possess, on the other hand public 'judgment is subject to a cause of error to which private judgment is not subject. The claim to accuracy peculiar to public as distinguished from private judgment is the process of elimination of private prejudices and predilections already mentioned. Where the opinion pronounced is the broad result of the comparison of many opinions, it must contain that part only of them which is common to them: the necessity of concord in pronouncing a public opinion requires the concession of individuals that their peculiar 'crotchets' shall remain unexpressed.

"The source of error peculiar to public as distinguished from private opinion arises from sympathy. No one can have calmly noted the demeanour of a public assembly without observing the infectiousness of the feeling of the majority. Many a politician has obtained a majority of votes by confident assertion that he is secure of it. This influence of social sentiment will often induce an assembly to commit acts of folly and violence, of which its members would individually be incapable. It has been a matter of common observation, that no cruelty is less sparing, no prejudice more intolerant, no mania more completely destitute of reason, than that of an impassioned multitude. Men who individually are humane, tolerant, and sensible, collectively are comparatively incapable of exercising their feelings and judgment voluntarily. By mutual pressure their thoughts are wont to become confluent, like many waters mingling in a current, and flowing all by one way; often by a very devious way, through barren plains; often by a self-destructive way, over vortices insatiable, and treacherous quicksands; often by a dark way, through gulfs and chasms which the light of Heaven does not penetrate; often by a way of violence and destruction, down mountain steeps, through rocky barriers, and over sudden precipices; sometimes by a right way, a noble stream flowing calmly and magnificently onwards, fertilising the earth, and bearing rich freights of blessings for the whole human race.

"The proper tests of the reasonableness of public opinion do not greatly differ from those by which the value of private opinion ought to be estimated. I say 'ought to be estimated,' because the way in which the value of an opinion, public or private, is estimated, and the way in which it ought to be estimated, are often very different. A most dogmatical and confident assertion of an opinion, an importunate reiteration of it, ridicule, or denunciation of opposition to it, fluency and felicity in expressing it, and fertility in illustrating it, adaptation in time and place to the feelings of those to whom it is addressed, will almost inevitably gain for it an amount of assent denied to cautious abstract reasoning. But let us consider what evidence the circumstances under which an opinion is expressed really afford of its correctness. To prevent the complication of this question with any other—that is, to judge of the value of an opinion solely from the manner in which it is formed—we must suppose that either we do not know what the opinion is, or have no opinion of our own on the subject on which it is expressed, or refrain from comparing the two opinions. In either such case our confidence in the opinion of another will reasonably depend on an estimate of his knowledge of the subject, of his power of reasoning correctly on similar subjects, of his deliberation and impartiality in exercising that power. The absence of either of these elements deprives his opinion of weight. If, moreover, by subsequent experience, the anticipations of his opinion be partially confirmed, it acquires additional weight.

"Simple as these considerations are, they afford the means of avoiding much error in estimating the value of public opinion. But, in applying them for that purpose, we are met by this difficulty—in estimating the value of a private opinion, we usually know something of the abilities exercised in forming it; in estimating the value of a public opinion, we are frequently driven, by the absence of that knowledge, to infer, from external signs, the existence of the correlative intrinsic elements of value. The degree of knowledge on which a public opinion is founded is to be estimated by considering the opportunities which the class forming that opinion have had of acquiring knowledge respecting it, and the extent to which they have probably availed themselves of those opportunities. Of the degree of public information on any topic, the frequency of public discussion is a partial, but not always a safe, test; for in public discussion, by speaking and writing, the most interesting view of a question is very frequently preferred to the most instructive view of it; and if the question be one which requires for its right understanding critical knowledge and difficult research—one essentially involving numerous complicated details of statistics, history, or policy, respecting which the state of literature shews that there is no public curiosity—the public zeal, without knowledge upon such a question—the zeal which is usually the greater the more complete the want of knowledge—may be simply regarded as highly useful to a popular 'ministry.'

"Of the external tests of the value of a public opinion, its gradual and quiet progression is, perhaps, that least liable to error. The permanence of an opinion affords evidence of the absence of transitory errors; the generality of an opinion, of the absence of local errors. If an opinion be slowly formed, continually progressive, and calmly expressed, it is almost certainly the result of deliberation verified by experience. But, under a system of party government, public opinion, while quiescent, has little influence; however clearly it may be perceived that a majority of intelligent opinions is in favour of any important political measure, it is seldom adopted till the public voice is roused by opposition to demand it clamorously. 'There is,' says an admirable modern essayist respecting this subject, 'a good deal in modern government which seems to me very rude and absurd. There comes a clamour, partly reasonable; power is deaf to it, overlooks it, says there is no such thing; then great clamour; after a time power welcomes that, takes it to its arms, says that now it is loud it is very wise, wishes it had always been clamour itself*.'

LONDON, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

THE question, whether the leading or the junior counsel in a cause should "sum up" the evidence under the Common-law Procedure Act, 1854, has been raised on several occasions, but has not yet received any definite solution.* The inquiry involves a consideration, and perhaps ultimately a re-constitution, of the relative functions of leaders and juniors.

The practice of the majority of leaders has hitherto been to take the summing up into their own hands; on one or two occasions, however, the performance of this duty has been imposed on their "young friend."

Looking at the subject in its public aspect, we think there can be little doubt, that, as a general rule, the leading counsel should himself conduct that part of the cause which requires delicate and careful management. It is upon this principle that he has always re-examined his own witnesses, cross-examined those of his adversary, addressed the jury, and argued points of law as they arose at the trial. The junior no doubt has been, or ought to have been, assisting his leader in these various operations by way of suggestion, but the latter has had the public conduct of them. At the same time, if the junior were sufficiently conscious of his true position, and of the accidents which might suddenly deprive him of the "dominus litis," he would take care to be prepared for the entire management of the case. The status of the junior, therefore, was sufficiently important and responsible under the old system. We are anxious to see that status retained, and, if not at the expense of the client, improved. But if there is one matter more than another that requires the united aid of skill, tact, and experience, it is the summing up of the evidence which has been presented to the jury. In the fulfilment of this duty, it will often be necessary to extract the real question for decision from a mass of complicated testimony; to reconcile discrepancies, not only in the evidence, but also between the evidence and the opening speech; to account for short-comings and the breaking of the promise which had been held out to the jury in the former address; to apportion the degrees of credit to the different witnesses; to comment upon the weight and strength of evidence; to point out corroborating circumstances; and to present the case as a whole in its most favourable and winning form to the jury.

Suppose this function to be feebly discharged, how much of the effect of the opening address, and of the testimony given in support of it, will be destroyed! Then, if the summing up is on behalf of the plaintiff, it will be followed by a speech from the leader for the defendant, who will skilfully avail himself of any unguarded points left by the plaintiff's junior. We, therefore, think that it will be a mischievous innovation if the leader yields so important a part of the cause to his junior.

There is, however, a mode of raising the position of the junior, and of relieving to some extent the labours of the leader, without in any way interfering with the interests of the client. It is simply this—let the junior, instead of merely opening the pleadings, open the case. Nothing is required for this purpose but a clear and simple narrative of the facts, according to his instructions—the more general the outline, and the less the detail, so much the better. This statement it will be for the leader to fortify, to support, and to clench at the proper time. Of course, in such a case, the “summing up” by the leader would not be strictly what is meant by that term, but a general address to the jury upon the whole case. We believe that the summing up before election committees and on appeals at quarter sessions, where such a practice prevails, has not been confined to mere comments upon testimony; it certainly has not been so on several recent occasions at Nisi Prius, and it will probably be like the “reply,” which has never been treated as a mere answer to the defence, but a general review of the whole case.

We hope that the Bar will come to an arrangement upon this subject, and that it will be in accordance with the views which we have suggested. We feel confident, that if carried out, they will be productive of advantage, not only to leaders and juniors, but also to the public at large.

At the present time, when the due regulation of the militia is a most important object, having regard not merely to its being really the only home army, but to its being a sort of dépôt from which, under the circular recently issued by the Secretary-at-War, our regular foreign army will be from time to time recruited, it is of great importance also that the legal public should be informed of the manner in which its organisation and maintenance are provided for by the Legislature, and in which hereafter it is to be raised, organised, and maintained. At present the acts of Parliament under which these things are done are in most glorious confusion. Their name is legion, and the enactments of the older ones are repealed, re-enacted, or preserved by new acts, enacting entirely new things, so far as is not inconsistent with the new acts, in a way which makes it puzzling for even any lawyer, when consulted, to give an opinion; a fortiori, for the multitudes of persons concerned, not being lawyers, to know what to do.

The militia is raised or raiseable in two ways—by ballot, as of old, and by voluntary enlistment under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 50, (1852), and various subsequent acts. The raising by ballot is still to be conducted under the 42 Geo. 3, c. 90; all the machinery of that act is expressly and specially adapted for the ballot; and none of it is even adaptable, except by what the lawyers call a twisted construction of the act, for the voluntary raising of the militia. The enactments of the act of Geo. 3 operate entirely through general meetings of the lieutenantancy and sub-divisional meetings of the deputy lieutenantancy. The most minute directions are given for the doing of every duty, whether by officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, or by magistrates, constables, &c. But all the authority exercised in the execution of these duties under that act emanates from general and sub-division meetings. On the other hand, the statute of 1852, and subsequent acts, in effect abolish general and sub-division meetings, except as connected with the ballot, and with them the authority for directing a multitude of operations, which must, nevertheless, be carried into effect, in whichever way the militia is raised. The 15 & 16 Vict. c. 50, enacts, that “the lieutenants shall direct their deputy lieutenants, or the colonels or commanding officers of the regiments, battalions, or corps of militia, to proceed to raise and enrol volunteers, &c., and such deputy lieutenants, colonels, or commanding officers, and the commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the militia duly authorised by such colonels or commanding officers, shall forthwith proceed to raise such volunteers,” &c. (Sect. 11). And this is the only section which gives any idea how the working of the act is to be carried into effect. It does not in any manner point out by whom—that is, by what officers or persons—the duties are to be performed. When, therefore, the militia was raised in 1852 and 1853, the duties that had to be done in raising it were left, as it were, to go begging; and we have reason to believe that in fact the militia was raised very much through the aid of the machinery of general and sub-division meetings, with all their corollaries, as if it had been raised by ballot, although those meetings had no legal authority, or even existence. The consequence was, we believe, a fearful confusion, when the inevitable question afterwards arose, by what authority much of the duty had been done, and in particular what public department was liable, and to what extent it was liable, for the almost unavoidable expense incurred in and about the public duties cast by the act upon somebody.

It appears to us that all these acts ought to be consolidated into one general act, repealing entirely all pre-existing acts, and re-enacting whatever is necessary; for there is no more fruitful source of confusion and litigation than repealing an act, so far as it is not inconsistent with a new act—a course which invariably lets in the most difficult questions. It appears to us also, that the system on which any such consolidation should be effected should be this—to distinguish and keep separate entirely the enlistment by ballot and the enlistment by voluntary enrolment, making each branch of the act complete in itself. Doubtless there are many things which must be common to both systems. The paying of the militia, for instance, provided for by the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 109, must of course be the same, whether it results from voluntary enlistment or from compulsory enlistment under the ballot. So must the providing of storehouses, &c., provided for by the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 106. So must its discipline, provided for by the several acts in force, and the articles or regulations issued by the Secretary-at-War for carrying into effect the details of the Mutiny Act as applied to militiamen. But a consolidated act could without difficulty provide for these things, by separate chapters devoted to each of these branches of the militia service, stating when they are to be applied to the voluntary system, when to the ballot system, and when to both. The importance of such a consolidation will be the more apparent when it is stated that a not inconsiderable branch of a public department is entirely engrossed by attention to the business of the militia force, and that innumerable questions of great nicety and difficulty are continually cast upon that branch for consideration, arising out of the multitude of statutes, and the confused form in which they are heaped one upon the other; and last, but not least, out of the circumstance that the act of 1852, the keystone of the voluntary system, literally provides no intelligible machinery whatever for raising and organising the militia; so that if the statute of Geo. 3, which never was meant, and is not now meant, to govern the raising of the volunteer militia, were entirely out of the way as a quasi guide, lord lieutenants, deputy lieutenants, colonels commanding, and all the subordinate functionaries, would have literally to improvise, and carry into effect upon their own responsibility, the modes of practically raising the militia, otherwise the militia could not be raised; nor could it have been or be raised at all under the act of 1852, if one-half of the persons authoritatively employed had questioned, or were to question, by what authority they were employed.

We trust that such a consolidation of these important acts will be attempted in the approaching session of Parliament; and we may add, that the lawyer who does this, and does it well, will not contribute a little towards those humbler but useful operations by which the hands of Government will be freed for the conduct of the war.

LONDON, DECEMBER 2, 1854.

THINGS which are best in their proper use afford great temptations as well as facilities for their abuse; and therefore we need not be surprised that Justice herself is sometimes rendered subservient to vile purposes. We have heard of robbery being committed even of a judge's wig; we have known purses disappear during the trial of a criminal; and why should not a writ or an indictment be ingeniously converted into an instrument for transferring money from the pocket of one man into that of another?

An action at law is not without its anxieties and its expenses; it is not agreeable, for instance, to be defendant in a suit for false imprisonment, for slander, or for illegal distress, especially when the plaintiff is a pauper; but to find oneself presented by the jurors of our Lady the Queen as a criminal, to undergo the ordeal of a trial at the Old Bailey, is so repugnant to the feelings of most persons, although supported by the consciousness of innocence, that they would in most instances willingly make a money commutation. It is the knowledge of this fact that renders legal process, especially of a criminal nature, available as a mighty engine of oppression and extortion. Private individuals, actuated by the desire of plunder or revenge, are ready, and often able, to put the law into motion in order to accomplish their base object; they find or they create some ground-work, which, however slight, however rotten, may yet answer the end. Unhappily they can find disreputable members of the legal Profession capable of lending, or rather selling, themselves to private speculations of this character; there are also other members of the Profession who, without intending to do wrong, are equally dangerous—we mean those who enter with such blind and rampant zeal into their client's views, that they disregard all manifestations and proofs of his want of case or want of honesty on the one hand, and of the complete defence which may exist on the other.

How easily an indictment may be managed in the manner we have above sketched out has been plainly shewn upon two recent and memorable occasions—one known as The Alleyne's case; the other as The Brighton Card-cheating case. They are worthy of a little consideration, and we propose briefly to state the facts in each.

In the former case, an indictment had been preferred against two brothers of the name of Alleyne, and a person of the name of Darcy, (all of whom had been officers in the army), for conspiring to defraud Thomas Blair Kennedy (an officer in the East India Company's service) of 7300*l*. It appeared at the trial that James Alleyne had laid a wager with Kennedy of 7300*l*., that an American mare, of which Alleyne was owner, would trot eighteen miles in the hour. She had really once accomplished this feat, but had become lame since the making of the wager; and now the defendants, knowing that she could not win, made such representations to Kennedy as to the certainty of his losing, that he was actually induced to pay the full sum of 7300*l*. without any trial of the mare's speed being made. The defendants were convicted, and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment; which, however, they evaded by leaving the country. Overtures were now made on their behalf for a compromise, which resulted in the suing out of a writ of error by the defendants, a collusive judgment thereon in their favour, and the payment of 5000*l.* to Kennedy. The prosecutor (Kennedy) left for America; but no sooner had he done so than the Alleynes indicted him and his solicitor for conspiring to extort money by means of the compromise. Kennedy now again assumed the offensive, and the consequence was, that the writ of error and judgment upon it were quashed, on the ground that the one had been sued out and the other obtained by collusion.

In the other case, a young man of the name of John Hamp, in the full tide of dissipation and extravagance, became the dupe of sharpers, and having been cheated at cards out of a large sum of money, prosecuted and convicted two of them. He was also bound over in the sum of 500*l.* to prosecute a third person, (John Broome); but again falling among his former associates, he was induced to make an affidavit contradicting all that he had sworn before the magistrate. He was therefore in the position that he must either forfeit his recognisances or be indicted for perjury. His uncle, a highly respected clergyman in Gloucestershire, now appeared upon the scene. Alarmed at the danger in which his nephew was placed, he did not oppose an arrangement that was now brought forward, namely, that Hamp should forbear further prosecution, should forfeit 100*l.* of his recognisances, and receive 400*l.* The cheque, on a bank in Birmingham, for 400*l.* was handed to the uncle, and almost before the ink with which it had been signed was dry, payment of it had been stopped in Birmingham by means of the electric telegraph! The next step was an indictment, by the wife of the man who should have been prosecuted, against Hamp and the clergyman, who should have prosecuted him. The jury had no alternative but to find the defendants guilty of having compromised a criminal offence, but they expressed their unanimous opinion that they had been "the victims of a base and infamous conspiracy." The Court* very properly postponed judgment sine die.

These are but two instances dragged to light of the corrupt use which is often made of the law. How many exist which are never known to the public!

The remedy for such a state of things is not very clear: fraud is not easily guarded against at all points, and we doubt whether even the appointment of a public prosecutor would be found effectual against the recurrence of these "base and infamous conspiracies."

We know something, however, of the extent of the evil, which is the first step towards its redress. The publication of the facts of the above cases may probably tend to counteract the compromise of offences, by proving to those who are parties to such arrangements how completely they put themselves at the mercy of others, whose only object is the extortion of further plunder.

And we further command you, that if the said chattels cannot be found in your bailiwick, you omit not by reason of any liberty of your county, but that you enter the same, and distrain the said C. LONDON, DECEMBER 9, 1854.

THERE are some decisions in our law-books which for practical purposes have been assumed to be correct, and have been adopted as authorities during a long period, simply because they are in the law-books, and there has been no opportunity of putting them to the question before a higher tribunal. They may be repugnant to a sort of legal instinct within us; we may feel them to be in some way wrong; but they are cited, acquiesced in, and followed; at length it becomes necessary to investigate the foundation on which they rest, and it is discovered to be so rotten, that the wonder is, how the superstructure was ever supported. To this class of cases belongs that of Godsall v. Boldero, (9 East, 72), decided in 1807, by judges of repute, (Lord Ellenborough, C. J., Grose, Lawrence, and Le Blanc, J.J.), recognised by subsequent judges of equal, if not superior, ability, and enshrined in 2 Smith's L. C. 157, with comments of approval rather than of objection; it has at length been its fate to be attacked, for the first time, in a court of error, and to be overruled by the deliberate and unanimous judgment of that Court. (Dalby v. The India and London Life)

VOL. XVIII.

V V

Assurance Company, Exch. Cham., Dec. 2, reported in our present number).

One reason why it has had so long an existence doubtless is, that few assurance offices ever acted upon it, as they found it more consistent with their interests to disregard it altogether.

The case of Godsall v. Boldero is, doubtless, familiar to our readers, but we may be allowed to recall its main features.

William Pitt, whose life had been insured by one of his creditors, died insolvent, and his executors, the Earl of Chatham and the Bishop of Lincoln, afterwards paid the creditor out of the money granted by Parliament. The assurance office was held to be thereby discharged from all liability to pay the sum insured, upon the ground that such an assurance is substantially a contract of indemnity against the loss of the debt; and as that had been paid, there was no damnification, and therefore no right of action. Dampier, in his argument for the plaintiff, forcibly urged, that in the case of a life assurance the premium is not calculated upon the risk of the insolvency of the person whose life is insured, but solely on the probability of the duration of the life; and that if the defendant's objection was well founded, every case of this sort would be resolved into an examination of the assets, of which the insurers would avail themselves pro tanto, after having had the benefit of the whole premium; and this, too, at any distance of time, when assets might be forthcoming, after the payment of the loss. Marryatt, for the defendant, compared the case to a valued sea policy. "The only question," he said, "is, whether in the event the plaintiff has been damnified, and can call upon the insurers for any indemnification. To pursue the metaphor: the ship insured has been wrecked; but there has been a salvage, which the underwriters were entitled to, and out of which the insured has been indemnified." This view was adopted by the Court, the only authority cited by it in support of its judgment being the language of Lord Mansfield in Hamilton v. Mendes, (2 Burr. 1210), which was the case of a marine assurance. But here was the fallacy which pervaded the whole case. The Court proceeded on a mistaken analogy, perhaps led somewhat astray by the language of the counsel, shewing how the good ship William Pitt had been wrecked, but the salvage had covered the loss, so far as the insured was concerned.

Life assurance, as was said in the late case in the Exchequer Chamber, is a contract to pay a certain sum of money upon the death of a person, in consideration of his paying a certain annuity during his own life or that of the cestui que vie, and does not in any manner resemble a contract of indemnity. It is not, strictly speaking, an assurance of life itself, or of debts in respect of which it may have been effected; it renders neither life nor debts more sperate than they were before. The premium is calculated upon the amount insured at the time of assurance, and does not vary with any fluctuations in the interest of the insured. The event is certain, the time of its happening the only uncertainty. Fire and marine policies, however, are very different; they are stipulations to pay a sum only in the event of a loss, and the chances that no loss at all, or only a partial loss, may occur, are taken into consideration in calculating the amount of the premium.

Among those who have expressed strong opinions against the decision in Godsall v. Boldero we must not omit to mention Professor de Morgan, who, in his "Essay on Probabilities, and their Application to Life Contingencies and Assurance Offices*," says—

"The word 'insurance' or 'assurance' has given rise to some wrong notions, and it will be worth while to examine the nature of the contract.

"A. & Co. engage with B., that in consideration of 1*l.* a year paid by him during his life, they will pay 20*l.* to his representatives as soon as he shall be dead. Both parties run a risk: A. & Co. that of having to pay B. more than they receive; B. that of paying more than will at his death produce 20*l.* But the risk of the office is of immediate loss, and that of B. of deferred loss; that of the former is also continually lessening, and that of the latter increasing, until, should B. live long enough, both risks become certainties. If the assurance be only for a term of years, B. runs the risk of losing his premiums altogether.

"The office does not inquire what reason B. may have for insuring his own life or that of another person, nor do any possible contingencies, except those of life, affect the office calculations. We cannot, therefore, be too much surprised at the ignorance shewn by that judge who declared that life assurance was of its own nature a contract of indemnity; that is to say, if by any lucky chance B. can be proved to have accomplished the object for which he insured by other means he has no claim upon the office.

"In order to shew that such was not the case, we must suppose that an exactly similar transaction had taken place before any assurance office existed. How this could have been may not be apparent, if we take the notion which the law formerly entertained of such an office, namely, that it is a species of gambling house*; but if we prefer to consider it as a savings bank, with an equalisation system, which is unquestionably the correct notion, we may return to the circumstances which the case would have presented had there been no assurance. C., a person whose credit has become doubtful, is indebted to B. to an amount which B. could not afford to lose; consequently B., knowing that his chance of payment is precarious, resolves to diminish his expenses, hoping by economy to restore to his family the sum which he may have lost by his engagements with C. He collects accordingly a small fund, which he places with his banker, avowing the purpose of its collection. In the meantime C. dies, and some friends pay off his debts, and that due to B. among the rest. The latter, having now no further occasion for such economy, draws upon his banker for the amount, and is answered, that since the purpose of the saving was fulfilled by the payment of C.'s debt, he, B., has no further claim upon his own money.

"The contract of assurance, be it gambling or be it not, rests entirely upon the permission given by the law to consider a high chance of a small sum as good consideration for a low chance of a large sum.

"The law, then, allows risks, and permits unequal chances to be compensated by giving odds; the Courts declare, that after the cast shall have been made, and one of the parties shall have stood his risk, which turns out in his favour, the other party shall receive an ex post facto release from the conditions of his bargain, because circumstances afterwards arise which, had they existed at the time of making the bargain, would have made it illegal. The several principles on which the decision was founded, well carried out, as they say in Parliament, would require that the previous contracts of a man who becomes insane should be null and void; that the meat which a man buys for his dinner should be returnable to the butcher, under the cost, if a friend should invite him in the meantime; and in the case before us, supposing that C. should have outlived the term, and his debt paid, as before, then B. might have brought his action against the office for the return of the premiums, alleging that, as it turned out, the office would have been indemnified, and therefore should be considered as having run no risk."

The learned professor will, we trust, be gratified to learn that the Court of Exchequer Chamber have arrived at similar conclusions with himself upon the merits of Godsall v. Boldero. Their decision amounts to this—life assurance is not a contract of indemnity; and a party insuring the life of another may recover to the extent of the interest which he had at the time of effecting the policy, although such interest may afterwards have been diminished, or have altogether ceased.

* Quære? At common law wagering assurances, and all wagers not contrary to public policy, were lawful. The stat. 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, for the first time required an interest at the time of insuring the life of another.

PUBLIC EXAMINATION.—HILARY TERM, 1855.

THE Council of Legal Education have approved of the following rules for the public examination of the students.

The attention of the students is requested to the following rules of the Inns of Court:—

“As an inducement to students to propose themselves for examination, studentships shall be founded of fifty guineas per annum each, to continue for a period of three years, and one such studentship shall be conferred on the most distinguished student at each public examination; and further, the examiners shall select and certify the names of three other students who shall have passed the next best examinations, and the Inns of Court to which such students belong may, if desired, dispense with any terms, not exceeding two, that may remain to be kept by such students previously to their being called to the Bar. Provided that the examiners shall not be obliged to confer or grant any studentship or certificate unless they shall be of opinion that the examination of the students they select has been such as entitles them thereto.”

“At every call to the Bar those students who have passed a public examination, and either obtained a studentship or a certificate of honour, shall take rank in seniority over all other students who shall be called on the same day.”

“No student shall be eligible to be called to the Bar who shall not either have attended during one whole year the lectures of two of the Readers, or have satisfactorily passed a public examination.”

RULES FOR THE PUBLIC EXAMINATION OF CANDIDATES FOR HONOURS, OR CERTIFICATES ENTITLING STUDENTS TO BE CALLED TO THE BAR.

An examination will be held in next Hilary Term, to which a student of any of the Inns of Court, who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship or honours, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name at the treasurer's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs on or before Monday, the 1st day of January next; and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship or other honourable distinction, or whether he is merely desirous of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar.

The examination will commence on Monday, the 8th day of January next, and will be continued on the Tuesday and Wednesday following.

It will take place in the Benchers' Reading-room of Lincoln's-inn; and the doors will be closed ten minutes after the time appointed for the commencement of the examination.

The examination by printed questions will be conducted in the following order:—

Monday morning, the 8th January, at half-past nine, on Constitutional Law and Legal History; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on Equity.

Tuesday morning, the 9th January, at half-past nine, on Common Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, on the Law of Real Property, &c.

Wednesday morning, the 10th January, at half-past nine, on Jurisprudence and the Civil Law; in the afternoon, at half-past one, a paper will be given to the students including questions bearing upon all the foregoing subjects of examination.

The oral examination will be conducted in the same order, during the same hours, and on the same subjects, as those already marked out for the examination by printed questions, except that on Wednesday afternoon there will be no oral examination.

The oral examination of each student will be conducted apart from the other students; and the character of that examination will vary, according as the student is a candidate for honours or a studentship, or desires simply to obtain a certificate.

The oral examination and printed questions will be founded on the books below mentioned, regard being had, however, to the particular object with a view to which the student presents himself for examination.

In determining the question, whether a student has passed the examination in such a manner as to entitle him to be called to the Bar, the examiners will principally have regard to the general knowledge of law and jurisprudence which he has displayed.

A student may present himself at any number of examinations, until he shall have obtained a certificate.

Any student who shall obtain a certificate may present himself a second time for examination as a candidate for the studentship, but only at one of the three examinations immediately succeeding that at which he shall have obtained such certificate; provided, that if any student so presenting himself shall not succeed in obtaining the studentship, his name shall not appear in the list.

Students who have kept more than eleven terms shall not be admitted to an examination for the studentship.

The READER ON CONSTITUTIONAL LAW and LEGAL HISTORY proposes to examine on the following books:—

LONDON, DECEMBER 16, 1854.

It has been, perhaps, too hastily assumed that the powers heretofore exercised by Courts of equity in decreasing specific performance of contracts have been conferred, by the Procedure Act of 1854, upon the Courts of common law. The learned Commissioners, upon whose Report the bill was originally framed, had recommended this great innovation, and by many* it was taken for granted that it was expressed by the 68th section of the statute, whereby the plaintiff in an action may claim a writ of mandamus "commanding the defendant to fulfil any duty in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally interested."

The observations, however, of Messrs. Holland & Chandless, in their able edition of the statute†, tend forcibly to shew that this section will have a much more limited operation. The whole of their note (pp. 243—246) upon this important subject is worth transcribing, but we must content ourselves with presenting a portion of it to our readers.

"The former state of the law of mandamus," they say, "with its defects, and the object and bearing of the improvements intended to be carried out by this act, have been so clearly pointed out by the Common-law Commissioners in their Second Report, where these improvements are recommended, that we cannot do better than briefly refer to some passages in that Report.

"It is true," say the Commissioners, "that, besides the proceeding by action at law, there exists, in cases where a public inconvenience or private wrong is occasioned by the omission of a public or official duty, or one imposed by act of Parliament for the benefit of individuals, and no sufficient remedy is afforded by action for damages, a process, by writ of mandamus, to compel the performance of the particular duty. This proceeding is not common to all the Courts, but peculiar to the Court of Queen's Bench; and it appears to have been originally confined in its operation to a very limited class of cases affecting the administration of public affairs, such as the election of corporate officers, the restoration of officers improperly removed, the compelling inferior courts to proceed with matters within their jurisdiction, or public officers to perform duties imposed upon them by common law or by statute, as to make a rate, and the like; and there can be little doubt that the extreme hardship arising out of the defect in the law which we have pointed out was one considerable motive for the extension of the remedy, in more recent times, to cases in which the rights of private individuals only were concerned. In the course of modern legislation no session of Parliament occurs in which a great number of acts of Parliament do not pass for making railways, forming docks, building bridges, improving towns, and an infinite variety of public works, for the most part to be done by joint-stock corporations or companies for the benefit of the shareholders. In almost every act of this kind numerous provisions are to be found which direct that the company shall do certain works for the benefit of individuals, such as making communications between lands intersected by works authorised by the acts, substituting new buildings for others which have been necessarily removed, making roads and communications in lieu of old ones blocked up or injured, and a variety of other works of a similar character. In the event of non-compliance with these enactments, as, indeed, in all cases where the proceeding by mandamus must be resorted to, the remedy is uncertain, tedious, and expensive. . . . .

* Among others by the writer of two articles in THE JURIST, (ante, pp. 409, 441).

† "The Common-law Procedure Act, 1854; with Treatises on Injunction and Relief." It also contains a Treatise on Inspection and Discovery, by C. E. Pollock, Esq., Barrister at Law.

"In any case where a party has such an interest in the issuing of a mandamus as to be able to maintain an action for damages in case of a false return, or, in other words, wherever any person is interested as a private individual in the performance of any act which may be enforced by mandamus, the latter writ is as much ex debito justitiæ as the writ by which, after so much expense and delay, he may now recover damages for a false return.' (Second Report, p. 41).

"We now proceed to consider the language of the sections in this act; and, first, it may be observed generally, that no change has been made in the law of mandamus, but solely in the proceedings to obtain the writ.

"The question will probably be raised, whether, under sect. 68, the Courts have practically the power of enforcing the specific performance of any contract; but it is submitted that no such power is given, and that the words 'duty in which' &c. do not include duties resulting from express private contracts between two parties, and for breach of which an action of tort lies, (see Boorman v. Brown, 3 Q. B. 511), but is confined to another class of cases, where a private wrong is occasioned by the non-fulfilment of some public or official duty, or one imposed by act of Parliament for the benefit of individuals; as, for instance, where a private company, which has the option of taking land, gives a notice under an act of Parliament to treat. This would be held a declaration of their option to take, and a contract of purchase, of which the Court would compel specific performance. (See per Patteson, J., in Reg. v. The Commissioners of Woods and Forests, 15 Q. B. 74).

"In confirmation of this view, we may refer to the Report of the Commissioners above cited; and further mention, that a clause expressly empowering Courts of law to grant specific performance of contracts was struck out of this act in the House of Lords, on the ground that it would not be advisable to give the Court such a power. The right, therefore, sought to be enforced, and the duty, in the fulfilment of which the plaintiff is personally 'interested,' remain the same; the same demand and refusal are necessary before commencing the action under the sections as were heretofore required before moving for the rule for a writ of mandamus: and the discretion of the Court in granting or withholding the mandamus has been carefully preserved by sect. 71, which empowers the Court, 'if it shall see fit,' to issue the peremptory writ. The novelties introduced are, that the proceedings for a mandamus to enforce the performance of a duty in which an individual is personally concerned may be commenced in any of the superior courts, and that the machinery of an ordinary action is to be applied to such proceedings.

"There is, further, a new provision in sect. 74, empowering the Court, besides or instead of proceeding by attachment, to cause the work to be done by the plaintiff or some other person at the expense of the defendant. . . . .

"By sect. 68 it is provided, that the plaintiff in any action in any superior court, except replevin and ejectment, may proceed for a mandamus. On reading the words, 'in any action,' &c., it might appear at first sight that the mandamus could only be claimed when an action was pending for some cause besides the omission to perform the act sought to be compelled; that is, that no writ could be issued solely for the purpose of claiming a mandamus. But looking to the provision enabling the plaintiff in his declaration to claim the writ separately, if necessary, and to the fact that in many cases no other ground of action would exist, it is apprehended that such a construction would not be put upon the words of this section."

In the New Rules and Forms just issued, (Reg. Gen., Mich. Vac., 1854), we observe, that although a form of indorsement for a writ of injunction is given, (Rule 36), there is no form applicable to the writ of mandamus. Perhaps the learned judges were unwilling to put a construction upon this class of sections until compelled to do so.

In connexion with the subject which we have been considering, reference may be made to a decision of the Court of Exchequer, (The Mines Royal Societies v. Magray, 18 Jur., part 1, p. 1028), construing the 83rd section of the statute as authorising an equitable defence to be pleaded at law, only where the facts pleaded are such as would entitle the defendant to a perpetual injunction in equity to restrain the action.

The defendant sought to plead, "for defence on equitable grounds," to an action by his landlord on a lease for non-payment of rent and non-repair, an agreement between the plaintiff and the defendant that the latter should surrender the tenancy by yielding up that portion of the premises which was in his own occupation, and allowing the plaintiff to receive the rents and profits of the remainder occupied by the tenants of the defendant; that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff a certain sum, and relinquish to him machinery on the premises; and that the lease and counterpart should be delivered up to be cancelled; with an averment of performance on the part of the defendant, and that the action was brought in fraud of such agreement, and that it was entirely the plaintiff's fault that the surrender was not completed. Parke, B., said, "I take it that a defence on equitable grounds, under this statute, means that which in a court of equity would of itself be an actual and complete answer to the case of the other side, so as to afford ground for a perpetual injunction. Now, you could not, in the present state of things, have a perpetual injunction to prevent the plaintiff going on with this action, because it is a principle, that he who applies for equity must do equity. A Court of equity would not prohibit the plaintiffs in this case from suing, except on condition of the defendant executing a legal surrender of the lease, which it would accordingly compel him to do on the one hand, and stay the action on the other. But we cannot do that, for Courts of common law have not the machinery for the purpose. The statute does not say that Courts of common law shall give relief on equitable conditions, but that a plea may be allowed which discloses a defence on equitable grounds." Reference was also made by the Court to sect. 86, whereby it is provided, that if "the equitable plea or replication cannot be dealt with by a Court of law, so as to do justice between the parties," it may be struck out; and the Court refused to allow the plea.

THE important question whether the "cost-book principle" is legally applicable to companies established in this country for the working of mines situate abroad, though often mooted, has not yet been judicially decided. In practice, however, it has been thus extended, and several English companies are now engaged in mining operations in Australia upon the "cost-book principle."

The weight of argument and of opinion is, we think, in favour of such practice, and the only objection which we have heard against it is, that the "cost-book principle" is a local custom, confined to one or two counties in England having now or at some former time a Court of Stannaries, possessing the peculiar machinery required for the management of companies formed upon this principle.

In order fully to test the truth of the premises, and the weight of the conclusion involved in this proposition, we will examine the nature of the companies in question.

A mining company in itself is a peculiar partnership, being for the purpose of working that which is a species of real estate; and it is considered as a trading partnership only for the purposes of convenience and management. A mining company on the "cost-book principle" is probably the oldest form of partnership known to the law, and may be defined as a partnership for the purposes of mining, the conditions whereof are contained in a book called "the cost-book." The "principle" itself is not very easily defined, at all events in a few words, and it will probably be better understood by a description of the book. The "cost-book" contains the regulations by which the mining concern is to be carried on, the names of the shareholders or adventurers, the number of shares held by them respectively, and the accounts of the purser with the adventurers. He enters in it the receipt and expenditure for a given time—generally a month; a balance is then struck, and a meeting held, at which the accounts are passed, and a call made or a dividend paid. At these meetings further resolutions are come to, if necessary, relative to the working of the mine, the forfeiture of shares, &c. Transfers of shares must also be entered in the cost-book, and may be in the following simple form:—"A. B. has assigned to C. D. — shares for a valuable consideration."

If the cost-book contains regulations with respect to the non-payment of calls, they should be followed; if it does not, the purser files a petition against the shareholder in the Stannary Court. By the custom of the stannaries, it is said that persons supplying goods to, and all labourers on, the mine, have a right theation on the ores, materials, and machinery. (See Wordsworth on Mining, Banking, Insurance, and General Joint-stock Companies, 198—205, 8th ed.) One characteristic of such a company is, that it has no directing body, but the mine is managed by the purser. It has been held in one case, that, inter se, the shareholders may get rid of their shares and liabilities without the consent of the other partners; but this proceeded upon the construction of the regulations in the book, and therefore would have been the same with regard to any other company founded on similar conditions. (Fenn's case, 22 L. J., Ch., 692).

The "cost-book principle" has been adopted for many years, not only in Cornwall, but also in Devonshire and Derbyshire. In Devonshire the customs of the miners are almost the same as those which prevail among the Cornish miners. In Spain and in Germany (except in the Rhenish Provinces) this "principle" is acted upon. (See Wordsworth, 196, note (2)).

The only Stannary Court now existing is in Cornwall, which is of remote origin, being mentioned in a charter of King John; such a tribunal once existed also in Devonshire, but has fallen into desuetude. It does not appear that there was ever a Stannary Court in Derbyshire.

These "courts by custom, confirmed by charter and act of Parliament," (Preface to Pearce's Laws and Customs of the Stannaries, are now regulated by stat. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 106, amended by the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 58.

By the former statute, after reciting the existence "throughout the stannaries of Cornwall of a court in which the vice-warden has, in certain cases wherein tin or tinnars, or matters connected with tin, are concerned, exercised original equitable jurisdiction;" and of a court called the Steward's Court, and in which the steward of the stannaries has, in similar cases, exercised a common-law jurisdiction, and the jurisdiction so exercised by both has been confined to matters wherein tin or tinnars are concerned; and that "in late times, lead, copper, and other metals and metallic minerals than tin had been discovered in the county of Cornwall;" it is then enacted, that the court of equity of the vice-warden shall be united with the common-law court of the steward*, and the two thus combined are to be held before the vice-warden; and the jurisdiction of the Court is extended over all minerals in the stannaries. (Sects. 4, 6). The Court is to have jurisdiction throughout Cornwall, and to be a court of record. (Sect. 21). Nothing contained in the act is to extend to the county of Devon, or the stannaries in the said county. (Sect. 44). The remaining sections simply regulate the procedure in the court, except the 18th section, whereby the vice-warden, decessing the payment of money in respect of the working of or providing goods for any mine from a shareholder, may order his share, or so much thereof as is necessary, to be sold.

There can be no doubt that the "cost-book principle" is lawful in this country—at all events, as a local custom; it has been so recognised not only by the above acts, but also by the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 63, whereby that statute is declared not to extend to any "partnership formed for the working of mines, minerals, and quarries, of what nature soever, on the principle commonly called the 'cost-book principle.'" So, by the Winding-up Act of 1849, (12 & 13 Vict. c. 108, s. 1), it is provided, that "nothing herein contained shall affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Stannaries in Cornwall, or extend to any partnership formed for the working of mines on the cost-book principle within the said stannaries and jurisdiction of the said court, unless the owners of one-tenth in value of the shares petition the Lord Chancellor," &c. Indeed, if the custom had been contrary to law, it would have been void as a local custom.

If, then, as we are warranted in assuming, this is a legal basis for the constitution of a mining company, and if there be nothing illegal in its characteristics, why should it be confined within territorial boundaries? The subject-matter on which it operates is not limited to this country, much less to Cornwall; and why may not the same principle be applied to identically the same objects, wherever they may exist? There is no statute giving only a local application to the "cost-book principle." The exception in the Joint-stock Companies Act has no words of locality. The Winding-up Act of 1849 implies that it may exist, as de facto it does exist, out of Cornwall. It is, we submit, a common-law right, which cannot be abridged except by the express words of a statute. That there are peculiar mining customs and a Court of Stannaries in Cornwall does not affect this question, which is as to the legality of the mode of constituting a mining company. We may also observe that such companies established in Wales (Fenn's case, supra; and see Curling v. Flight, 12 Jur., part 1, p. 91) and in Ireland (see Tapping's Treatise on the Cost-book, 7) have been wound up in the Court of Chancery without objection, and that the opinions of text-writers upon the subject are in favour of the view which we have suggested*.

If the view which we venture to suggest on this subject be correct, it may undoubtedly in many instances be advantageous to mining companies, wherever their "locus in quo" may be, to adopt the "cost-book principle," in order to save the great inconvenience and expense of registration under the Joint-stock Companies Act. On the other hand, it should not be forgotten that there are certain privileges conferred by that statute, such as incorporation of the company by complete registration, and the incidents attached to such incorporation, which can be obtained only by submitting to the obligations imposed by the statute.

BOOKKEEPING FOR SOLICITORS.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.—The beginning of a new year being an appropriate time to commence a better system of bookkeeping, when the one in use may not be satisfactory, Mr. G. J. KAIN begs to submit a few testimonials in favour of his system, which enables a practitioner to strike a balance at any moment, shewing THREE RESULTS, viz. Cash Balance, Book Debits, and Profits, as far as the Costs are made out, a change of cash-book only being all that is necessary to effect this.

"Mr. Kain's system, after a little examination, appears eminently simple, and we think with him it is such as any clerk, possessed of average ability, however inexperienced, can make himself acquainted with in an hour's moderate application; and if it be followed out, a principal who understands it may make himself acquainted with the leading results of the business, and indeed its details, almost at a glance, and this without himself doing more than seeing that his own transactions are duly recorded."

"The book is well and lucidly written, and sets forth certainly the most perfect and simple method of bookkeeping that has yet come under our notice. It has already reached its fifth edition, and the system it propounds, we have reason to know, has been extensively adopted, and most satisfactorily, as appears by the testimonials given at the end of the volume."

"We strongly recommend this system to the consideration of the Profession."

EXTRACTS FROM VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS FROM SOLICITORS.

"Its best feature, next to its soundness, is its simplicity."

"I find it very satisfactory."

"The more I see of your plan of bookkeeping the more I am pleased with it."

"We consider it to be the most satisfactory brought to our notice."

"I am sure your system ought to be widely adopted. Since I have adopted the plan I have found it work admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and it has the advantage of being very simple."

"I shall have pleasure in giving your system the utmost publicity."

"The more I understand of your system the better I like it, and I am thoroughly satisfied with its simplicity and efficiency."

"We find your Cash Journal of great value."

"Your system is, what few human things are, perfect, and incapable of improvement."

THE YEAR 1855 bids fair to be one of the most important and eventful of modern history. On the 6th of January, 1855, will be issued the First Number of a New Volume of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS; and not merely a New Volume, but of a New Year—each volume being perfect and complete in itself—containing, for the time, a faithful record, pictorial and descriptive, of all events of interest in every part of the world. To that limited portion of the public who do not subscribe to this Journal it may be stated, that no period could be selected more opportune for commencing the whole expense being but Twenty-six Shillings per annum, exclusive of double numbers, which are issued on rare occasions, when it would be impossible to crowd the important events and engravings into a single number; for this small sum the Subscriber will receive Twenty-four large Pages—Seventy-two Columns—of the most interesting information, carefully selected from the news of the week, interspersed with a variety of charming articles on the chief topics of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has, by its impartial and consistent advocacy of the welfare of the public, secured for itself a political influence scarcely second to any newspaper in the empire; and reference can, with some pride, be made to the support afforded to all beneficial measures proposed and adopted by the English Parliament.

Foreign Politics will ever command the attention which ought to be devoted to so important a feature of a newspaper. On the question of the Russian War, during the year 1854, ONE THOUSAND ENGRAVINGS appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Extensive arrangements calculated to improve this popular Journal, and engagements such as will greatly enrich its Literary, Scientific, and other Departments, have been made, and will thus combine on this Paper the greatest talent of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has been established thirteen years, during which period it has received a greater degree of encouragement and approbation than any Journal ever published. This is proved by the Returns of Stamps issued from time to time by order of Parliament. The Stamps applied for the first six months of 1854 were upwards of 2,734,000—shewing a WEEKLY CIRCULATION OF UPWARDS OF ONE HUNDRED AND THIRTY THOUSAND COPIES!

Terms (for payment in advance)—Half-year, 13s. 6d.; Year, 26s. Any of the Volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the commencement to the present time, may now be had, in paper or cloth. Covers for binding the Volumes, 2s. 6d. each.

LONDON, DECEMBER 30, 1854.

MORE than 400 years have elapsed since the passing of the first statute (8 Hen. 6, c. 7) which required voters for members of Parliament to possess a property qualification, and it is remarkable that until last term it had never been clearly decided whether the freehold mentioned in that statute must be actually productive of 40s. by the year, or whether it was sufficient that it should be capable of producing that amount. It is true that before the year 1843, when the stat. 6 Vict. c. 18, gave an appellate jurisdiction to the Court of Common Pleas over the decisions of revising barristers, this question could not receive a judicial solution; but it must frequently have come incidentally before parliamentary committees, who did not, however, give to it any precise answer. The Court of Common Pleas, under its new powers, had often discussed the amount of "value" necessary for the exercise of the elective franchise, but generally with reference to the deductions that should be made, so as to give 40s. free of all charges. (See Colvill v. Wood, 2 C. B. 210; Coogan v. Luckett, Id. 182; Barrow v. Buckmaster, 12 C. B. 664;

Vol. XVIII.

Y Y

Hamilton v. Bass, Id. 638). Revising barristers themselves differed in opinion upon the subject, and the inquiry, "What is value?" seemed as hard to solve as the celebrated one, "What is a pound?"

Taking an a priori common-sense view of the matter, one would have said that the sum which the land was capable of producing annually was its annual value, or, as it has been tersely expressed—

Is just the money it will bring."

A difficulty, however, was supposed to be raised by the stat. 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, requiring the voter to be one that may "expend" 40s. by the year. That statute, which is still the governing one upon the subject, after reciting that the elections of knights of shires "have now of late been made by very great, outrageous, and excessive number of people, . . . of the which most part was of people of small substance and of no value, whereof every of them pretended a voice equivalent as to such elections with the most worthy knights and esquires, whereby manslaughterers, riots, batteries, and divisions among the gentlemen and other people shall very likely rise and be," enacts, that the knights of shires shall be chosen by people "whereof every one of them shall have free land or tenement to the value of 40s. by the year at the least above all charges, . . . and such as have the greatest number of them, that may expend 40s. by the year and above, (qui poient expendre par an. 40s. et outre), as afore is said, shall be returned; . . . and the sheriff shall have to examine upon the Evangelists every such chooser how much he may expend by the year; . . . provided always, that he which cannot expend 40s. by the year as afore is said shall in nowise be chooser of the knights for the Parliament."

In the case before the Court of Common Pleas* the claimant had purchased freehold ground, adapted for building purposes, at the price of 150*l.* Whilst in his possession the ground had not been built upon, but had remained unoccupied, uncultivated, and unprofitable. If occupied for any purpose except building, it would not have produced 40*s.* a year; but if let upon a ninety-nine years' lease for building purposes, it was worth a ground-rent of 15*l.* per annum; and a bona fide offer of that rent had been made to the claimant, but refused by him as insufficient. The revising barrister disallowed the claim, upon the grounds that he must look to the actual annual value of the freehold for occupation, as it was at the time of the claim, and not to its prospective or speculative value, nor to the additional annual value which might be created in case the owner should build or (being tenant in fee) should grant a long lease for building thereon. It was contended in support of this view, that improvable property was not to be considered as already improved, and that the present state of the land could alone be taken into account. On the other hand, it was urged, that as the claimant could obtain 40*s.* a year for the land, he could, if he pleased, "expend" that sum within the meaning of the statute; and Serjeant Heywood's Treatise on County Elections, 102*t*, was quoted, where he says, "If lands are let to a person for life, reserving no rent, or less than 40*s.* by the year, the grantor cannot vote during that term; but if such lands are let only for a term of years, *without any rent at all, or reserving rent under 40*s.* per annum*, the grantor may vote in respect of the freehold in him, provided it is of sufficient value." The Court held that the vote was a good vote, inasmuch as the land at the time of the claim was capable of fetching 40*s.* per annum, and that it was immaterial whether it was of such value as agricultural or as building land, or that the landlord would have to do something, namely, to grant a lease, before it would be worth that sum.

There are obvious reasons for arriving at this judgment, independently of those put forward by the Court. A contrary decision would have had the effect of rendering the franchise uncertain and fluctuating; dependent on such questions as whether the property remained unlet for a year, or was let to a solvent tenant; and also of construing strictly, instead of liberally, a statute which was passed in derogation of the unrestrained exercise of the franchise.

We may observe, that the "net annual value," which is defined by the Parochial Assessment Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, as "the rent at which the hereditaments rated to the poor might reasonably be expected to be let from year to year," does not afford a satisfactory criterion of the annual value required for the purposes of voting. The statutes were passed entirely diverso intuitu. (Cottrill v. Wood, supra). The poor rate is assessed upon the principle of an annual income; the franchise is intended to be exercised by those who are supposed to have a substantial interest in the country, whether it actually produces an annual sum of money or not.

With regard to the test of value, it seems to resolve itself into the question, what rent will a solvent tenant give for the land? See the cases above cited; Blackwell's case, (2 Lud. 450); Beamish v. The Overseers of Stoke, (11 C. B. 29); Fergusson's case, (1 Alc. Ir. Reg. Cas. 106); and Rillett on Parliamentary Qualification, 37. The statutes bearing on the subject are—8 Hen. 6, c. 7; 10 Hen. 6, c. 2; 18 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 5; 10 Geo. 4, c. 8, ss. 2, 7; and 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26. The actual rent paid does not necessarily preclude all inquiry into value, as such rent may have been fixed collusively for the purpose of giving a vote.

JUSTICE IN TURKEY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE JURIST."

SIR,—I beg to send you an extract from a work lately published on the Turkish Museum, and which appears to have been compiled by one well acquainted with Turkish institutions:—

"All Turkish jurisprudence is based upon two principles, viz. in every case of litigation the testimony of two witnesses is required, or, in case of their non-appearance, an oath is administered to the defendant; but even this mode of justice is never used with impartiality. The judges, being men of low birth and grovelling principles, only hold their offices as sources of personal emolument, and although strictly prohibited by the Koran, they are in the constant habit of receiving bribes to any amount, and the testimony of hired witnesses is winked at by them, and even supported, as their own interest may demand.

"Notwithstanding their pretended adherence to the precepts of their religion, which are held up as barriers to all reform, they are so corrupted, that their consciences are immediately lulled whenever the requisite bribe is slyly slipped under the cushions on which they sit. The only qualification requisite for a witness to appear before these Turkish courts of justice is to be omniscient, and never to utter the words, 'I don't know;' and when conflicting interests occur, which induce the judges to take side against the witnesses, then they adopt a singular method to disqualify their testimony, by putting such questions to them as are entirely irrelevant to the subject, but to which they will be forced at last to answer, 'I don't know.' For they are asked, 'Who was the grandfather of the defendant?' The answer is, 'Abraham.' 'His great-grandfather?'—'Adam;' beyond whom he is not supposed to have any ancestor. On a certain occasion, the judge, being very anxious to defeat the testimony of a clever witness, made the quaint inquiry, 'Who married Adam and Eve?' To which the witness replied, 'I was not invited to the wedding.'

"The costs of law suits are always defrayed by the gainer of the cause, as he is supposed to be better able to afford such expenses; but the evident design is to induce people to go to law, since justice is set aside, and every facility afforded, by the suborning of witnesses. Even the llams, or sentences, are so carefully worded, that at any time flaws may be discovered, and a new trial demanded. The equity of making the gainer of the cause pay the costs was ludicrously illustrated in the case of an arnavout, who was accused of stealing a gimlet. When in the presence of the cadi, he pleaded not guilty; the plaintiff was required, according to custom, to produce two witnesses; but the trifling claim not justifying much extra expense in the hiring of false testimony, the plaintiff declined availing himself of this privilege. The only alternative was for the cadi to administer an oath to the defendant, who, having been duly sworn, was pronounced the gainer of the cause, and requested to pay the costs, which were five times more than the value of the article in question. The arnavout, being somewhat of a speculative genius, coolly put his hand in his bosom, and producing the disputed gimlet, threw it at his accuser, saying, 'There, have your gimlet, and pay the costs.'

"It is true, that, by way of reform, a commercial tribunal of justice has been established, but unfortunately without any beneficial result; and his Excellency Lord Stratford de Redcliffe has very justly observed, that 'the very atmosphere of Turkey is impregnated with venality.'

"In such a poisoned atmosphere no salutary influence can be exercised until the axe is laid at the root of the evil. There is no security for property, nor any inducement to honesty. A man has the privilege, and even the temptation, under the existing laws, to injure his neighbour to any extent, and the innocent have no other means of protecting themselves and their interests than by resorting to counter dishonesty. For instance, if a man is unjustly accused of owing a debt of 100*l.*, it would naturally be inferred that he would deny the debt; but such an honest procedure would not answer in a Turkish court of justice, for it would immediately give the plaintiff the privilege of producing two hired witnesses, by whose testimony the defendant would be condemned to pay the pretended debt. The only alternative in such instances is, not to deny the accusation, but to verify the principle, 'set a rogue to catch a rogue,' by acknowledging the debt, at the same time declaring that it has already been paid; and by this means the accuser is deprived of the privilege of suborning witnesses, and the defendant avails himself of it. Thus the moral sense of the community is corrupted, and self-preservation impels the people only to strive to excel each other in roguery."

BOOKKEEPING FOR SOLICITORS.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.

The beginning of a new year being an appropriate time to commence a better system of bookkeeping, when the one in use may not be satisfactory, Mr. G. J. KAIN begs to submit a few testimonials in favour of his system, which enables a practitioner to strike a balance at any moment, showing THREE RESULTS, viz. Cash Balance, Book Debts, and Profits, as far as the Costs are made out, a change of cash-book only being all that is necessary to effect this.

"Mr. Kain has conferred a boon on the Profession by the publication of this work."

"Mr. Kain's system, after a little examination, appears eminently simple, and we think with him it is such as any clerk, possessed of average ability, however inexperienced, can make himself acquainted with in an hour's moderate application; and if it be followed out, a principal who understands it may make himself acquainted with the leading results of the business, and indeed its details, almost at a glance, and this without himself doing more than seeing that his own transactions are duly recorded."

"The book is well and lucidly written, and sets forth certainly the most perfect and simple method of bookkeeping that has yet come under our notice. It has already reached its fifth edition, and the system it propounds, we have reason to know, has been extensively adopted, and most satisfactorily, as appears by the testimonials given at the end of the volume."

EXTRACTS FROM VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS FROM SOLICITORS.

"Its best feature, next to its soundness, is its simplicity."

"I find it very satisfactory."

"The more I see of your plan of bookkeeping the more I am pleased with it."

"We consider it to be the most satisfactory brought to our notice."

"I am sure your system ought to be widely adopted. Since I have adopted the plan I have found it work admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and it has the advantage of being very simple."

"I shall have pleasure in giving your system the utmost publicity."

"The more I understand of your system the better I like it, and I am thoroughly satisfied with its simplicity and efficiency."

"We find your Cash Journal of great value."

"We think the principle is sound, and peculiarly applicable to solicitors' accounts, while there is much simplicity in its operation."

"Your system is, what few human things are, perfect, and incapable of improvement."

The Fifth Edition of the Work, illustrative of Solicitors' Bookkeeping in general, and of this system in particular, (price 6s., post free 6s. 6d.), and also the necessary Account Books, to be had of G. J. & J. KAIN, Law Accountants, 8, Brownlow-street, Holborn, London.

LONDON, JANUARY 6, 1855.

DISCOURSE has often been had of Sunday, moral, theological, political, but seldom of Sunday legal; and yet the question—how has Sunday been treated by the law?—is not altogether without interest, as it is connected with those modifications of public feeling and opinion which have marked successive phases of English society. At common law, all acts, except, perhaps, those of a judicial nature, might be done on a Sunday. Before the Reformation, fairs and markets were commonly held on Sunday, and their legality seems to have been recognised after the Reformation*. Blackstone states, however, that the laws of King Athelstane forbade all merchandise on the Lord's day; and a statute in the reign of Henry VI, (27 Hen. 6, c. 5), after reciting the "abominable injuries and offences done to Almighty God and to his saints (always aiders and singular assisters in our necessities) because of fairs and markets upon their high and principal feasts, as (amongst other days) on Trinity Sunday with other Sundays, . . . . for great earthly covetise," enacts, that all manner of fairs and markets on Sundays shall cease from all shewing of any goods or merchandises, (necessary victual only except), upon pain of forfeiture of all the goods so shewed, (the four Sundays in harvest except†).

Sports, however, were continued on Sundays, although they were afterwards discountenanced, for John Stowe, in his Survey of London, (1598), tells us, that "the youths of this city also have used on holy days, after evening prayer, at their masters' doors, to exercise their waistlers and bucklers, and the maidens, one of them playing on a timbrel, in sight of their masters and dames, to dance for garlands hanged thwart of the streets; which open pastimes in my youth being now suppressed, worsser practices within doors are to be feared." (Vol. 1, p. 303, 6th ed.)

It is curious that the somewhat heavy and unamusing, although very moral, King James I, should have encouraged sports on a Sunday; while the chief statute against the profanation of that day was passed in the reign of the profligate Charles II.

In 1618 King James I publicly declared to his subjects, in "The Book of Sports," the following games to be lawful—dancing, archery, leaping, vaulting, May games, Whitsun-ales, morris-dances, and set-up may-poles and other sports therewith used, and commanded that no such honest mirth or recreation should be forbidden to his subjects upon the Sunday or holy days after evening service, but restraining all recusants and all such as absent themselves from church from this liberty, and commanding each parish to use these recreations by itself, and prohibiting all unlawful games, bear-baiting, bull-baiting, interludes, and bowling, the meaner sort. (See Dalton, c. 46). It is with reference to this proceeding that Hume says—"At the same time that James shocked in so violent a manner the religious principles of his Scottish subjects, he acted in opposition to those of his English. He had observed, in his progress through England, that a judaical observance of the Sunday, chiefly by means of the Puritans, was every day gaining ground throughout the kingdom, and that the people, under colour of religion, were, contrary to former practice, debarred such sports and recreations as contributed both to their health and their amusement. Festivals, which in other nations and ages are partly dedicated to public worship, partly to mirth and society, were here totally appropriated to the offices of religion, and served to nourish those sullen and gloomy contemplations to which the people were of themselves so unfortunately subject. The King imagined that it would be easy to infuse cheerfulness into this dark spirit of devotion. He issued a proclamation to allow and encourage, after divine service, all kinds of lawful games and exercises; and by his authority he endeavoured to give sanction to a practice which his subjects regarded as the utmost instance of profaneness and impiety.* And he adds, in a note, "To shew how rigid the English, chiefly the Puritans, were become in this particular, a bill was introduced into the House of Commons, in the eighteenth of the King, for the more strict observance of the Sunday, which they affected to call the 'Sabbath.' One Shepherd opposed this bill, objected to the appellation of 'Sabbath' as puritanical, defended dancing by the example of David, and seems even to have justified sports on that day. For this profaneness he was expelled the House, by the suggestion of Mr. Pym. The House of Lords opposed so far this puritanical spirit of the Commons, that they proposed that the appellation of 'Sabbath' should be changed into that of the 'Lord's day.' In Shepherd's sentence his offence is said by the House to be great, exorbitant, and unparalleled.*" And after the death of James it was enacted, (by the stat. 1 Car. 1, c. 1), that there shall be no concourse of people, out of their own parishes, on the Lord's day, for any sport or pastimes, nor any bear-baiting, bull-baiting, interludes, common plays, or other unlawful exercises and pastimes used by any persons within their own parishes; the penalty being 3s. 4d. to the poor, or being set in the stocks for three hours.

* See the authorities cited in Rawlins, App., The Overseers of West Derby, Resps., (2 C. B. 74).

This was followed by the 3 Car. 1, c. 1, prohibiting carriers from travelling and butchers from killing or selling victual on the Sunday†.

With the view of counteracting the sourness of the Puritans, Charles, in 1633, shortly after Prynne had been set in the pillory, renewed his father's edict for allowing sports on Sunday, adding thereto wakes and all manlike exercises, and ordered it to be read by the clergy after divine service. Many who were puritanically affected refused to do so, and were punished by suspension or deprivation. (6 Hume, 299).

By the 29 Car. 2, c. 7, no tradesman or other person shall exercise any worldly business of their ordinary callings upon the Lord's day, works of necessity and charity only excepted. (Sect. 1). But the act is not to extend to prohibit the dressing of meat in families, or dressing or selling meat in inns, cook-shops, or victualling-houses for such as cannot otherwise be provided; nor to the crying and selling of milk before nine o'clock in the morning or after four o'clock in the afternoon. (Sect. 3). No drover, horse-courser, waggoner, butcher, or higgler, is to travel or come into his inn or lodging on that day. (Sect. 2). The prosecution for the penalty must be commenced within ten days after the offence committed, (sect. 4); and it has been decided that only one penalty can be recovered for any number of acts of trading by the same person on the same Sunday‡. The service of process on a Sunday (except in cases of treason, felony, and breach of the peace) is void. (Sect. 6). By the 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 24, s. 14, this statute is not to prohibit the crying or selling of mackerel before or after divine service, nor (by 2 Geo. 3, c. 15, s. 7) the tra-

We may here cite the case of Rex v. Younger, (5 T. R. 449), in which the Court held, that the statute of Charles II did not prohibit a baker baking dinners for his customers on a Sunday; and Lord Kenyon, C. J., said, "I think we should construe it (the statute) equitably, so that it may answer the purposes of public convenience, taking care, at the same time, that Sunday should not be profaned. It was extremely wise to put a mark on that day; by observing it Christianity may be kept alive. I agree with Foster, J., that I am for an observation of the Sabbath, but not for a pharisaical observation of it. But must the laborious part of the community, who are entitled to some indulgence for the labours of the past week, fare harder on that than on any other day? They must be fed on that day; many of them have not the means of dressing their dinners at home, and those who have will, if this defendant be convicted, be prevented observing the Sabbath."

THE ETIQUETTE OF COLONIAL JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS.

THE following petition to the Queen, very numerously signed, has been sent home from Van Diemen's Land, as a remonstrance against what the petitioners deem an infringement of the usual course of judicial appointments in the colonies:—

"To Her Most Gracious Majesty Victoria, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith."

"The humble petition of the undersigned inhabitants of Van Diemen's Land,

"Sheweth—That your Majesty's petitioners cherish the warmest sentiments of loyalty and devotedness to your Majesty's most gracious person and government.

"That a vacancy has recently occurred in the office of your Majesty's Chief Justice of this colony, in consequence of the resignation of Sir John Lewis Pedder on the ground of ill health.

"That your petitioners have learned, with feelings of disappointment and alarm, that Valentine Fleming, Esq., your Majesty's Attorney-General, has been appointed to the said vacant office of Chief Justice, to the exclusion of the superior claims of Mr. Justice Horne, the present puisne judge.

"That the said Mr. Justice Horne has held his office as puisne judge for a period of four years, during which time, by his skill and ability as a civil and criminal judge, as well as by his strict integrity and impartiality, he has secured the confidence and respect of your Majesty's subjects in this colony.

"That, considering the unimpeachable character of Mr. Justice Horne, your petitioners had no reason to believe that any other rule would be resorted to in * The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. lxxv, contains regulations relative to watermen plying and working on the Thames on a Sunday, and repeals so much of the 29 Car. 2, c. 7, as prevents travelling by water on a Sunday.

By the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 22, s. 27, hackney coachmen or chairmen may exercise their calling on a Sunday.

By the 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 3, killing game on a Sunday subjects the party to a penalty not exceeding 5l. and costs.

The 3 Will. 4, c. 19, ss. 26, 27, empowers the court of aldermen or two justices to regulate the route and conduct of persons driving stage-carriages, cattle, &c. during divine service.

The stats. 3 Geo. 4, c. 96, s. 16, and 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 14, relate to the baking of bread by bakers on Sundays.

Beer-houses, after being subject to many mutations, are now regulated in this respect by the well-known statute, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 79.

* History of England, vol. 6, pp. 91, 92; and at p. 211 he says that the Puritans sanctified the Sabbath by the most melancholy indolence; and that the different appellations of this festival, "Sunday" or "Sabbath," were at that time (1625) known symbols of the different parties.

† Selling meat on Sundays is no offence at common law. (Rex v. Brotherton, 2 Str. 702; see also Faulkner's case, 1 Salk. 249).

filling up the vacancy now under consideration than that which has universally prevailed in the Australian colonies—that of quiet and undisputed succession in the order of precedence from the senior puisne judgeship to the Chief Justiceship.

"That the only ground upon which the exclusion of Mr. Justice Horne in favour of Mr. Fleming has been supported is the right which your Majesty's Attorney-General in England is understood to have to the first Chief Justiceship which happens to fall vacant during his tenure of office.

"That the practice in question has, your petitioners believe, been condemned, even as inapplicable to England, by the highest legal authority, as having a tendency to impair to some extent the impartiality of the Bench; but in these colonies, not only has the practice never been adopted, but the rule as to succession in the order of seniority has been twice solemnly recognised and acted upon as the only rule calculated to shut out all hope of rising to the highest judicial office by means of subserviency to the Executive.

"That the first occasion upon which the rule of succession by seniority, and not by favour, was solemnly considered and affirmed, was upon the retirement of Sir Francis Forbes from the Chief Justiceship of your Majesty's colony of New South Wales. On that occasion the senior puisne judge was Mr. Justice Dowling, the junior puisne judge was Mr. Justice Burton. A claim was preferred by Mr. Justice Burton to the vacant Chief Justiceship, on the ground that he had held a commission in another colony—namely, the Cape of Good Hope—of date anterior to the commission of Mr. Justice Dowling; but it was then decided that the rule of seniority in New South Wales ought to prevail; and this decision was approved of by the Government of your Majesty's regal predecessor, his late Majesty King William IV.

"That the next occasion on which the rule of seniority was acted upon was the death of the late Sir James Dowling, your Majesty's Chief Justice of New South Wales. Mr. Justice Stephen was then senior puisne judge, but the vacant office was claimed by your Majesty's Attorney-General, on the express ground of the English precedent. The question was decided in favour of the present Chief Justice, Sir Alfred Stephen, although Mr. W. Plunkett had long and faithfully served your Majesty in his said office of Attorney-General; and your petitioners believe that the rule of succession by seniority is the one best calculated to secure the independence of the judges who in these colonies hold office during your Majesty's pleasure.

"That on the retirement of Mr. Justice Oliphant from the office of Chief Justice of your Majesty's colony of Ceylon, he was succeeded by the puisne judge, apparently as a matter of course, and not by your Majesty's Advocate-General, whose office is precisely similar to that of your Majesty's Attorney-General in this colony.

"That to intrust to the governors of your Majesty's Australian colonies the power to interfere with the rule which has hitherto prevailed is subject to the strong constitutional objection of placing it in the power of an Executive, not responsible to the Legislature, to exalt one of its own members, on purely party considerations, to an office which ought to be entirely above suspicion.

"That whatever claims or qualifications Mr. Fleming may derive from the circumstance of his having held the office of your Majesty's Attorney-General in this colony belong in a far higher degree to Mr. Justice Horne, who held and faithfully discharged the office of Attorney-General for a considerable period, and has since as faithfully discharged the office of puisne judge.

"That it may be presumed, that, in giving up the superior emoluments of the office of Attorney-General and a large private practice, Mr. Justice Horne looked forward with a reasonable degree of certainty to succeed to the office of Chief Justice; and it is precisely that certainty of succession which, your Majesty's petitioners respectfully and humbly urge, forms the only security for the impartiality on the bench which your Majesty's faithful subjects in these colonies enjoy.

"Your petitioners, therefore," &c.

BOOKKEEPING FOR SOLICITORS.—KAIN'S SYSTEM.—The beginning of a new year being an appropriate time to commence a better system of bookkeeping, when the one in use may not be satisfactory, Mr. G. J. KAIN begs to submit a few testimonials in favour of his system, which enables a practitioner to strike a balance at any moment, shewing THREE RESULTS, viz. Cash Balance, Book Debt, and Profit, as far as the Costs are made out, a change of cash-book only being all that is necessary to effect this.

"Mr. Kain has conferred a boon on the Profession by the publication of this work."

"Mr. Kain's system, after a little examination, appears eminently simple, and we think with him it is such as any clerk, possessed of average ability, however inexperienced, can make himself acquainted with in an hour's moderate application; and if it be followed out, a principal who understands it may make himself acquainted with the leading results of the business, and indeed its details, almost at a glance, and this without himself doing more than seeing that his own transactions are duly recorded."

"The book is well and lucidly written, and sets forth certainly the most perfect and simple method of bookkeeping that has yet come under our notice. It has already reached its fifth edition, and the system it propounds, we have reason to know, has been extensively adopted, and most satisfactorily, as appears by the testimonials given at the end of the volume."

"We strongly recommend this system to the consideration of the Profession."

EXTRACTS FROM VOLUNTARY TESTIMONIALS FROM SOLICITORS.

"Its best feature, next to its soundness, is its simplicity."

"I find it very satisfactory."

"The more I see of your plan of bookkeeping the more I am pleased with it."

"We consider it to be the most satisfactory brought to our notice."

"I am sure your system ought to be widely adopted. Since I have adopted the plan I have found it work admirably, correctly, and satisfactorily, and it has the advantage of being very simple."

"I shall have pleasure in giving your system the utmost publicity."

"The more I understand of your system the better I like it, and I am thoroughly satisfied with its simplicity and efficiency."

"We find your Cash Journal of great value."

"We think the principle is sound, and peculiarly applicable to solicitors' accounts, while there is much simplicity in its operation."

"Your system is, what few human things are, perfect, and incapable of improvement."

The Fifth Edition of the Work, Illustrative of Solicitors' Bookkeeping in general, and of this system in particular, (price 6s., post free 6s. 6d.), and also the necessary Account Books, to be had of G. J. & J. KAIN, Law Accountants, 8, Brownlow-street, Holborn, London.
